After the business of the routine character had been finished an address was given by M. Moyer, who touched upon the Co-operative Bill, the Criminal Code and several other matters affecting the trade. He pointed out that the Co-operative Bill was open to the objection that it would be giving the co-operative societies at no cost to themselves and without having to assume any responsibility, privileges not enjoyed by joint stock companies or for which they have to pay. The motive behind the Bill was questionable as enquiries failed to bring forth the real class of people who were demanding it. Evidently it was not the labor people whom the merchants had so often befriended in times of strikes and dearth of work. The labor people were more and more working in harmony with the merchants because each class was recognizing the necessity of the other.

Legislation was needed in connection with the Criminal Code, since the present law deprived merchants of certain rights and privileges which were enjoyed by labor men.

Mr. Moyer also suggested a closer union of the trade in order to further education among the grocers and the people with whom they dealt. The wholesale Grocers' Exchange will meet in May in Toronto and the wholesalers were extending invitations to retailers and manufacturers so that by interchange of opinion each class would understand the others better. This he commended and advised the Grocers' Association to aid as much as possible the extension of a better feeling in this regard.

J. S. Bond said that grocers should know the wholesalers better than they do.

"It is our duty to accept this invitation and be there," he said. "If we knew the troubles of the wholesaler and the causes for certain actions we might fall in line with their views and work more harmoniously. Our associations are not strong enough; they should be five times as strong as they are especially when there are such important trade matters before the country.

"The public in general should know more about our businesses and what profits we get for all our work and trouble; and if they did, they would recognize that we are not properly paid. There is no business done on a smaller percentage of profit and yet labor men and farmers often look upon us a sharks. The farmers themselves grind us down when they have anything to sell us. We should certainly get together and understand each other better."

Cost of Doing Business.

D. W. Clarke declared that three-quarters of the grocers of the country were not considering in their selling plans what it costs to do business.

"I consider that if an article costs me $1 in the first place, that it actually costs me $1.13 before I begin to sell it," he said.

There were too many articles sold upon which the cost was not known and Mr. Clarke cited some instances to back up his assertion—instances in which supposedly first-class grocers figured. He urged upon retailers to know exactly what they buy, particularly if they are buying by weight.

In this connection C. F. Thorne cited a case in which a farmer had sold a retailer in Toronto a quantity of excellent butter at a cent cheaper than the regular purchasing price. Upon weighing it, it was found to be an ounce short all round. The farmer, however, was a stranger and if an inspector had weighed the butter the probability was that the retailer would have been out what he paid for it.

The old method of weighing bread in the store by an inspector was condemned by members who maintained that the bread factory was the place for this work.

Other speakers who touched upon the questions under discussion were Bailey Snow, W. C. Miller, W. F. Johnston and J. C. Beaumont. The meeting proved to be a valuable one, inasmuch as it was almost entirely devotel to the discussion of trade questions. After it was concluded the members adjourned to the bowling alley where a couple of friendly games were played, the honors in both cases going to J. S. Bond, despite the fact that there were many younger bowlers on the alley.

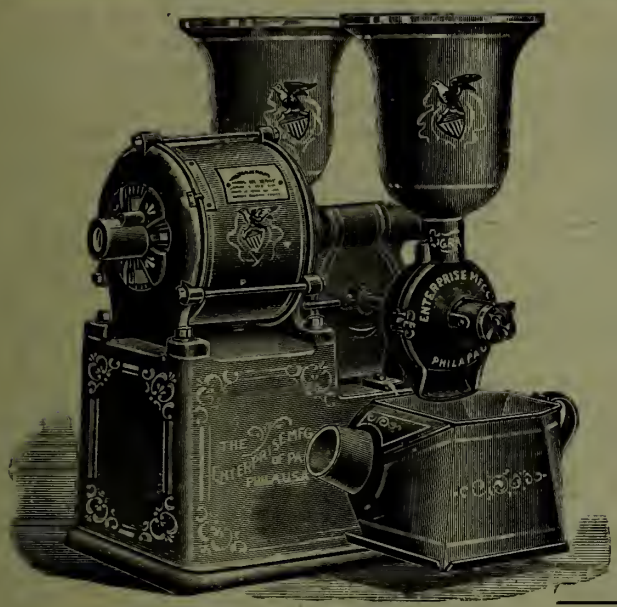
"Enterprise" Economy



An Enterprising grocer, who does things right, uses an "Enterprise" Electrically-Driven Coffee Mill.

The right way is also the cheapest way in the end. It always pays. Take the experience of the Philadelphia grocer who grinds 15,000 pounds of coffee a month with an "Enterprise" Mill electrically-driven at a cost for current of $3.00.

He bought the Mill as a great convenience—a time and labor saver, and an up-to-date attraction for his store. Its economy astonished him.

Look through our catalogue and you will find Mills of any capacity, any power required, for direct or alternating current. Your local power supply company will co-operate with advice and assistance.

The Mill illustrated here is No. 08712, fitted with ½ horse power motor for alternating current. Capacity of each iron hopper, 6 pounds of coffee. One Mill is fitted with grinders for granulating, the other for pulverizing. Granulates 2 pounds of coffee per minute, and can be regulated for fine or coarse grinding while mill is running. If you haven't the catalogue showing all our Mills, write for a copy to-day.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruits.—First-class apples are becoming harder to obtain. Prices of all lines are firm. Trade in fruits is better, particularly in oranges. It is thought by dealers that the worst of the dull season is over.

Green Fruits.—In fruit, as well as in almost all other things, the people only want the best. While common, fairly good apples are standing round waiting for buyers at from $1.50 to $2 a barrel, the best qualities fetch as much as $4 a barrel. Farmers are offering loads at $1.75 a barrel for mixed lots, and have trouble to get rid of them.

California navel oranges are still unsatisfactory to handle, on account of the frosted fruit. It is expected, however, that within a short time, the quality will improve with an advance in price. Florida oranges are gaining in sales over other years, and are said to be regaining the position they held before the severe frost in 1894 and 1895, which not only destroyed the fruit, but also the trees. While that frost was disastrous to Florida, it was the making of California, so far as orange growing was concerned; this year the blow came to California although less severe.

Vegetables.—In looking at the variety of vegetables on the market, one of the dealers remarked, "We have everything that grows in the vegetable world and where we used to sell a dozen, we now sell tons." People will have these things, and pay the prices notwithstanding all the fuss about high prices.

NEW WAY OF KEEPING FISH.

The satisfactory keeping of fresh fish has long been quite a problem with fish dealers and grocers who sell fish. Ice, while it serves the purpose of preservation, has never been entirely satisfactory, as it has a tendency to deprive the fish of its flavor and firmness. Representatives of the United States Fish Commission claim to have lately succeeded in finding an excellent way of keeping the fish fresh.

In the experiment, bluefish, weakfish and bonito, a very large fish, were used. Many of the first tests failed, one being a solution of salicylic acid and sea water. Formaldehyde and other well-know preservatives were used, the successful results being at last obtained by the use of boric acid.

A number of freshly killed and dressed weakfish washed with a three per cent. solution of boric acid in sea water, looked over twenty-four hours later as though they had just been caught. No ice was used. The fish were cooked and eaten and found to be excellent. In the process, the fish are not embalmed, but after the removal of the viscera, the inside is simply washed with a sponge dipped in the solution, and this, it is said, must be done soon after the fish are caught.

The National Sugar Refining Company has formally turned over to the United States treasury the sum of $604,-304, due the Government for shortage in importations of sugar between 1907 and 1908. In announcing the settlement, W. T. Dennison, who is assisting in the prosecution of the sugar frauds, said: "This settlement in nowise affects the criminal prosecutions of any individuals who may be shown they have been responsible for any criminal frauds."

The Florida Orange

A SHORT HISTORY

Careful researches have proved that India was the country from which the Orange spread to Western Asia and eventually to Europe. Oranges are at present found wild in the jungles of Northern India, mostly sour, but occasionally wild oranges occur with sweet fruit. It is conceded, however, that Southern China is the original home of the orange. Cultivated from a remote period in Hindustan it was carried to Southwestern Asia by the Arabs, ultimately by them to Africa and Spain, following everywhere the tide of Mohammedan conquest and civilization. In the 12th century the returning Soldiers of the Cross brought it from Palestine to Italy and Provence.

In Florida the orange has grown from an unknown period in a wild condition, being undoubtedly brought by the Spanish colonists to the West Indies and soon afterwards transplanted by them or their buccaneering enemies to Florida. The climate of Florida is remarkably adapted for orange culture. The heat is sufficient and enough moisture is in the soil to supply the roots.

The taste of the mature Florida (China) oranges picked when ripe is delicious. It is this Globe of Sweetness—a perfectly natural sweet orange grown in the fertile soil of Florida—we now offer you. Buy them, try them, you'll buy more, your customers will come back for Florida oranges.

To The Fruit Trade

One way of increasing your fruit trade and your profits is to keep your stock cleaned up. A dozen oranges left to dry out and spoil in the bottom of a box reduces the profits on a whole case. Fruit that doesn't move in a reasonable time is bound to deteriorate in value and will not do your fruit trade any good. Again, if you can double your sales you double your profits, and your stock is always fresh aud clean. Its very appearance is an added incentive to your customers to buy.

Every orange and lemon packed in the "Sunkist" wrappers passes the most rigid inspection ever given fruit. Every piece must be well colored, juicy and full flavored. As we ship entire train loads of fruit from California, we have the advantage over all traffic lines, thus bringing to you the best fruit of California in prime condition. "Sunkist" brand is fruit you can recommend, fruit your trade will appreciate, and you can build up a fresh fruit business that will make you more clear money than any other line of goods you handle. "Sunkist" on the wrappers of oranges and lemons means quality insurance.

We are taking special care with our Canadian shipments and believe every jobber can supply you with "Sunkist" oranges and lemons. If you have any trouble in having your order filled, we will be glad to hear from you.

The steamer Haakon VII. took away last week the largest cargo ever sent from St. John to Havana, consisting of 12,000 barrels of potatoes, 6,000 bushels of oats, 700 tons of hay and 600 packages of fish. The steamer Hirundo, which sailed on Saturday also took away a large cargo, in which there was 9,000 barrels of potatoes and a lot of hay, oats and fish.

Methods of Making a Refrigerator Profitable

How Currents of Air Should Move in Order to Keep it Highly Sanitary—The Insulation of the Refrigerator — Displaying Goods to the Best Advantage.

By A. W. Sherer.

The day of keeping the "ice box" way back in the darkest corner of the store, next to the kerosene barrel is past. You who read this article by so doing classify yourself as progressive, for the grocer or retail merchant who reads a good trade paper that deals with the problems of his business, is tapping a reservoir of thought-stimulating ideas and suggestions.

There is no need to harp longer on the sanitary features of the grocer's refrigerator. There are still plenty of unsanitary boxes, but their owners who are beyond argument, will have to fight it out with their local inspectors. "Use a sanitary refrigerator" is now as axiomatic and as sure a standard for the successful grocery store as "sell good goods."

Refrigeration is not merely "keeping cold" because it is just as important to keep the cold air in the refrigerator moving, as it is to keep the warm air out. Perfect circulation of cold, dry air is accomplished in the properly constructed refrigerators by having sufficient air space about the ice to allow the cold air to drop freely, not only from the bottom, but also from the sides of the ice chamber.

The System of Circulation.

The ice chamber is so placed and arranged (see illustrations Nos. 1 and 2) that the cold air in dropping, forces the air at the bottom of the refrigerator over onto the opposite side of the ice partition. The vacuum caused by the air dropping from the ice chamber draws the air that has been forced over into the opposite side of the refrigertor back into the ice chamber, where it again comes into contact with the ice and is recooled.

Take, for example, the circulation in the scientifically built "roll-tops," which is from back to front. The cold air passes freely from the ice chamber through cold air flues (note small arrows in drawing) to the provision chamber below. This movement of the cold air falling from the ice forces the air that was previously in the provision compartment A, to the highest point in the compartment B, and as the downward draught of air also tends to create a vacuum in the ice chamber (which draws the air from the top of the provision compartment B), a vigorous circulation is started as soon as ice is put into the refrigerator and will continue as long as there is ice in the ice chamber. Through this contunuous circulation, and the fact that all air in the refrigerator is constantly recooled, all moisture is condensed, and all odors removed. This result is accomplished by the melting ice, which absorbs the moisture and gases and carries them off through the waste pipe, so that no part of the refrigerator possibly can become "stale smelling" or "musty."

You can be sure that your refrigerator will not become "foul smelling" if you buy a refrigerator that is guaranteed to have a constant circulation of cold air just as real as though there were an electric fan inside. In one of the makes in which the ice chamber is in the centre, the circulation is as illustrated in No. 2.

The cold air drops from the ice freely, and is drawn both to the right and to the left, so that in these refrigerators the circulation is in two currents. One important advantage of this course of circulation is that cheese may be kept on one side of the refrigerator and butter on the other without contamination.

The insulation of a refrigerator is not less important than the system of circulation. It is because of poor insulation that many refrigerators have earned the name "ice eaters." A practical and efficient insulation consists in the first place of an outside wall of the best quality of oak. Over this is laid a thickness of heavy insulating sheathing, and on this is placed a course of closely packed mineral wool. Over this course of mineral wool another thickness of heavy insulating sheathing is placed, and then the inside wall of poplar is attached. This makes a wall which is insulated as perfectly as is necessary or desirable in refrigerators of this kind. Mineral wool is used because it is the best known non-conductor of heat and cold. The comparative value of the leading insulating materials used in refrigerators is shown in the following table, taken from an article by an international authority on cold air storage, and confirmed in recent tests:

Mineral wool	100
Hair Felt	117
Cotton wool	122
Sheep's wool	136
Infusorial earth	136
Charcoal	140
Sawdust	163
Gas Works Breeze	230
Wood and Air Space	280

This means that a mineral wool insulation permits the entrance into a refrigerator of only 100 units of heat during a given time, while one insulated with sawdust of the same thickness, for example, permits the entrance of 163 units of heat during the same time.

The most sanitary grocers' refrigerators are lined with odorless wood, this being the most practical lining for the purpose. As the circulation keeps the air in the compartments dry, as well as cold, the walls will not sweat.

In properly constructed refrigerators you can keep even salt and matches without their absorbing any moisture. This seems like a rash statement, but it can be easily demonstrated. If you can't keep salt in an open saucer without it absorbing moisture and become hard, your refrigerator is not as profitable as it might be, for even though dampness may not be sufficient to cause foods to taint each other perceptibly, it is a sure sign that there isn't enough circulation of air in the refrigerator and suggests that your fine butter may be losing some of its delicacy by absorbing the odors of surrounding foods.

But no refrigerator is as profitable as it might be if it doesn't display the goods. What is more refreshing on a hot day than to see through the glass doors of a refrigerator, cool berries, fresh vegetables and wholesome looking butter? It has the same effect in getting in dollars as the old swimming hole used to have in getting off your clothes. The effect is immediate and telling.

Our friends in the department of agriculture tell us that it isn't good for our health and the health of the race to eat berries that are fly specked and covered with dust. That sounds reasonable. If you will go one step farther than the department of agriculture and put your berries and fancy fruits, delicatessen foods and dairy products in a display refrigerator, your ledger will soon show the wisdom of the investment. The way to make your refrigerator profitable is to display its contents.

Regrigerator Display Cases.

One of the newest and most interesting developments in refrigerators for grocers is the refrigerator display case.

It frequently happens that the only place for the refrigerator is in the back part of the store away from the view of the morning marketer. By using a refrigerator display case you can bring your choicest berries, fruits and butter up close to the door where everyone who comes in can see them and feel the good things pull at the silver in their pocketbooks. You can also (if you are after some of the loose dollars that could come your way as well as not) start up a delicatessen department.

A Good Repeater

A prominent grocer, when recently asked what kind of goods he liked to sell best, replied:—

"Give me a good repeater like Royal Baking Powder; an established article of undisputed merit which housekeepers repeatedly buy and are always satisfied with."

NEW baking powders and new foods, like new fads, come and go but Royal goes on forever. Grocers are always sure of a steady sale of Royal Baking Powder, which never fails to please their customers, and in the end yields to them a larger profit than cheaper and inferior brands.

FRIENDS—NOT GROWLERS

RISING SUN Stove Polish in Cakes never comes back to you with growls from the housekeeper. It is always up to the same high standard maintained for forty years, and it is always just right. That's why we have the thousands upon thousands of grocers pushing it everywhere. Grocers don't wish to run the risk of losing a good customer by passing out an inferior stove polish. which is wrong more often than it is right, RISING SUN makes friends for you and for us in every household where you put it.

Berkel's Improved Slicing Machine

BERKEL'S Latest Improvement Patent Knife Guard to protect operators from accidents by thoughtlessly getting their hands against the circular knife. The only slicing machine in the world that has this protection.

BERKEL'S is the machine with the Patent Automatic Sharpener, by means of which the keen cutting edge on the knife is constantly maintained. The only machine with an automatic sharpening device. Simply press the Carborundum wheel shown in the cut above the knife downward and it strikes the knife edge at just the proper angle, a few turns of the wheel and your knife has an edge like a razor.

Will Slice Boiled Ham and Bacon Down to the Last Ounce

We call attention to the photographic production of two plates of boiled ham, there is just one pound of ham on each plate, it was all cut from the same piece, the eight slices on the right hand plate were cut with an ordinary knife, while the twenty uniform slices on the left hand plate were sliced on a slicing machine. This is an average result. The difference can be more or less marked according to the skill and time given the hand cutting, however the machine never can vary, the customer is always protected by dealing where there is a BERKEL'S Improved Slicing Machine. Dried Beef can bv sliced thinner, quicker and better on BERKEL'S than any other made. The BERKEL'S Improved Slicing Machine is now used by Grocers, Butchers, Department stores, Delicatessens, Hotels, Restaurants, Hospitals, Educational Institutions, Steamship and Railway Companies, Charitable Institutions, Penal Institutions, the Army and Navy, Soldiers' Homes etc. BERKEL'S Improved Slicing Machine can be set to cut automatically (14) different thicknesses, from 1-40 of an inch up to ¾ of an inch, "it cuts bread or meat equally well," requires no skill to operate and will slice perfectly more meat or bread in twelve miuutes than the most expert cutter can slice by hand in an hour. While it is a hand machine, for several years many packers, as well as grocers and marketmen who do a large sliced meat business. have been running their BERKEL'S Improved Slicing Machines by mechanical power. Enough pieces of bacon can be put on this machine to cut 300 slices a minute. This should be of interest to those who put up bacon in boxes, glass or tin cans.

JERSEY CREAM SODAS

and hundreds of varieties of Fancy Sweet Biscuits and Confectionery

Established in 1858 by T. McCormick in a very small shop, about 12 by 18 feet.

Now, look at the picture of the largest biscuit and candy factory in Canada, owned and managed by his three sons.

The factory is also the most modern on this continent—is thoroughly ventilated and kept scrupulously clean.

Pre-eminently the best.

McCormick's Biscuits are made from Best Blended Flour, First Quality June Creamery Butter, Fresh, Sweet, Whole Milk, Pure Sugar, etc.

All materials are analyzed by an expert chemist and therefore McCormicks are in a position to guarantee the Purity and Quality of their biscuits.

No other Biscuit Factory in Canada employs a chemist to insure wholesomeness of its biscuits.

Continental Reputation.

Great numbers of discriminating American women-visitors to Canada have pronounced McCormick's Jersey Cream Sodas vastly superior to the American crackers. They have even insisted on the factory shipping a supply to their grocers, stating that they were willing to pay the duty, if by so doing they could enjoy such a luxury.

We have appreciated the confidence and assistance of the Grocery trade in Canada in placing our biscuits before the consumers and hope still further to merit your approval in our present efforts to assist your sales of our biscuits by advertising them extensively amongst the consumers. We hope you will keep on hand a good supply of

Retailer's Failure Due to Inadequate Service

Neglected to Deliver Goods Promptly— Did Not Look After Service to Children —His Competitor Across the Street Made a Good Success Because He Gave Scientific Service—Provided Tables for Serving Tea to Ladies—Was Prompt in Tracing Complaints.

A Canadian grocer went out of business the other day in a prosperous town because he could not hold his trade.

He could not hold his trade because he did not give his customers the service they received for nothing from others.

For instance, one morning a woman ordered some jelly powder to assist in the making of a dessert for dinner.

She wanted it sent up early, and the clerk promised it would be there on time.

By an oversight the jelly powder did not go; the woman had no dessert for dinner that day on which, as it happened, her husband brought home with him a guest.

This naturally made here wrathy and her entire trade was transferred to a grocer across the street. It meant a loss of $300 to the former grocer.

On another occasion a telephone order was placed with the same store for a few pounds of bacon.

The grocer was just out of bacon and he told the woman so, but made no offer to secure it for her.

The result was she ordered the bacon from a grocer across the street, who, although he too happened to be out of bacon, promised to fill the order without mentioning the dearth of his stock.

The contrast between the service of the two merchants formed an impression on that woman's mind; a similar occurrence happened a few days later and gradually she transferred her account to the grocer across the street.

The first dealer who supplied her lost an annual account of $300 through inadequate service—$25 every month.

A little girl came into the store one afternoon for some groceries for her mother. She had to wait a couple of minutes for her turn to be served.

In the meantime three or four grown-ups also stepped up to the counter; the latter were served first, and the little girl was late arriving home.

Upon being questioned by her mother the latter learned the cause of the delay and as this had happened before, she also took her account away from that store and gave it to the merchant across the street.

This meant another loss of $300 per year.

By inefficient service this grocer continued to lose customer after customer and each one told of the inattention she had been getting.

Gradually he became unable to meet his regular payments and eventually he failed.

His chief fault was inefficient service, because he was not a scientific grocer.

He had been doing business with 100 customers and making a turnover at the rate of $30,000 annually.

With scientific service he would have made money—the lack of it caused him to fail.

Adequate service is recognized by the scientific grocer of the 20th century to be one of the most important requirements in a store.

Science in service was used by the grocer across the street, who was getting all the custom lost by his negligent competitor.

He saw to it that the one woman got her jelly powder when she wanted it; that the other secured the bacon, even at some extra trouble to himself, and that care was taken to wait on customers in the order in which they came into the store.

He looked closely after his assortment, being careful to have on hand what was called for.

He was able to do this easily because he did not stock too heavily on any single line.

The jelly powder was sent to the woman who required it at the stipulated time. She received other goods at the proper time, and eventually gave him her whole grocery account, which amounted to $300 annually.

Another woman called him up by phone late one Saturday evening saying that she had overlooked getting a roast of beef for the Sunday dinner, and would he kindly help her out?

The grocer readily consented, secured the beef and had it sent to her home.

This simple act of kindness won him a steady customer; she was under an obligation to him (but of course, he didn't tell her so), and in her teacup conversation with her friends that grocer got many a good recommendation.

When women came to his store to shop there were alway a few chairs handy for them.

In one corner of the store were a couple of attractive tables, where tea was served free to those who desired it.

Women used to look forward to their cup of tea in that store and unconsciously they would advertise it to their friends, whenever the subject of shopping came up.

The proprietor always made it a point to speak to every person who entered the store, for he knew that all appreciated it.

He saw to it that his salesmen looked after the wants of children just as readily as those of grown-ups.

Children were served in their turn and given the same considerations as the elder people.

All complaints were carefully attended to and a point was strained to make things right.

For instance, one evening a telephone call was received to the effect that a wrong brand of coffee had been sent up.

The grocer regretted the occurrence, said he would exchange it and look into the matter.

In two minutes he called up the woman to explain that one of his salesmen who was unaccustomed to taking her order, had made the error.

He had called his attention to it and it would not occur again; in the meantime a boy was on his way to her house with the kind she wanted and would she kindly let him have the other?

In a few years' time he had secured double the custom, simply because he gave scientific service to his customers.

Time that Canada had a Definition for Pure Jam.

So Thinks Writer on Subject of Recent Government Bulletin Referring to Jam Inspection—Preservatives or Dyes not Necessary He Claims—Why Coloring Matter is Used.

By E. D. Smith.

I notice in your last issue a short editorial congratulating the country on the fact that in the last Bulletin issued by the Department of Inland Revenue, Bulletin 194, a great majority of the jams called "pure" have been found to be so by the government analyst. This certainly is a great improvement over the condition which existed even three years ago, much less five years ago, but even yet conditions are not what they ought to be and are really not what your analysis of that Bulletin would indicate, because under our present antiquated pure food laws the presence of preservative and dye stuffs in jams do not necessarily stamp them as adulterated. Under our present laws jam may contain dye stuffs and preservative and too great a percentage of water and still be called "pure jam."

Of the 116 samples examined, although only one was pronounced adulterated and seven doubtful, there was a total of 49 which either contained preservative or dyes, or of which the water contents were unduly high, a greater portion of them having both preservative and dye stuff in them. Now what is the object of dye stuffs in jam, jelly or marmalade, and what is the object of preservative in jam, jelly or marmalade? The only possible object is to cover up ignorance or carelessness. A clean, careful, up-to-date manufacturer has no need of either of these articles. They are absolutely superfluous.

Of course, by the means of coloring matter a manufacturer can dress up otherwise off colored goods; he can cover up a lot of defects and if the public prefer bright colored goods, it is very easy to use the dye stuff. But with care in manufacture and a little common sense on the part of the consuming public in discriminating and judging whether goods are artificially colored or not, there is no need of it. But if one manufacturer can use coloring matter in every sample tested and the jam still be pronounced pure, of course, it goes without saying that every manufacturer will use it in time because it is a great handicap for a manufacturer who does not use dyes if his goods are classed as of no higher standard in Government Bulletins than the goods which are colored.

Color Appeals to Public.

The one using coloring takes the eye of the public, pleases the retail grocer because it pleases the public. The one using no dye stuffs cannot have his goods of the same color—nature does not make them that way. One lot of strawberries or raspberries may be quite different from another, but although his goods are put up pure and without dyes he gets no credit for it except from those who read the Bulletin under our present out-of-date laws which are to be amended in the near future—and, I trust, will be so amended that anyone using dyes or preservative will be obliged to so state it on the label. Then the manufacturer who has been getting along without these will reap his just reward.

Why should a manufacturer of jam use preservatives? There is not the slightest necessity for it, and yet 19 of the samples contain preservative. Now the query is if 97 samples were put up and analyzed from different makers in the world without preservative, why could the 19 not have been put up without the preservative? It is evidently used to cover up something. I do not say that preservative should never be used for any purpose, but I say it should not be used where it is unnecessary, and that is the case of jams, jellies and marmalade.

Another thing that this Bulletin does not show, is the fact that all of the samples of jam in this Bulletin may have contained 10 per cent. of glucose. By a careful perusal of the preface the following will be seen: "It is true that no legal definition of jam or explicit standard for the article yet exists for Canada, nevertheless the meaning of jam as fruit boiled in mass with sugar and water is so well recognized and the term has legal meaning in so many countries that I have no hesitation in declaring a product made of more than 10 per cent. glucose is adulterated under the Act."

Definition of Jam Needed.

Consequently we do not know how many of the 116 samples contain 10 per cent. of glucose. It is surely time that we should have a definition of jam in this country. As conditions exist at present, I believe most of the imported jams contain 10 per cent. of glucose or less, whilst some of us are getting along without an ounce in this country and are thereby working at a disadvantage of cost so that of these 116 samples only one of which was declared adulterated, the whole lot may contain 10 per cent. of glucose. Forty-nine of them are declared to contain preservative or dyes or both, or water contents unduly high and sometimes all three.

I think it is only fair that this side of the case should be presented and every grocer will be doing himself a justice, as well as the manufacturers of this country, if he will send to the Department of Inland Revenue at Ottawa, secure Bulletin 194, and carefully peruse the contents.

BUSINESS MAN FOR MAYOR.

Napoleon Drouin, one of the proprietors of the Rock City Tobacco Co., won the Quebec mayoralty contest last week with the big majority of 1,324. Mr. Drouin is a business man of a fine calibre. Besides being interested in the tobacco company above referred to, he is also engaged in the wholesale grocery business. He has been a member of the Quebec council for the last 14 years. His opponent was Senator Choquette.

Things That Shouldn't Be

Retailers should be careful to allow only the brightest clerks in the store to take orders over the telephone.

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

A Potato Window Display in Chatham—Edmonton Merchant Points Out Value of a Country List—The Late Saturday Night Delivery Question—Why the Clerk Gets in Debt—Another Change From Credit to Cash.

Late Delivery Elimination.

Bracebridge, Ont., March 3.—Another link in the chain of success attached to our six o'clock delivery system will be attained on Saturday, Feb. 26. The butchers have agreed to follow the grocers in cutting out the late Saturday night delivery on that date. This means that in Bracebridge in the future there will be few overworked men and horses seen on the streets on Saturday nights deliverying groceries, flour and feed, bread, milk or meat until after midnight and away on into Sunday morning.

A good feature of the elimination of this late delivery is that practically all stores here will now be closed by 10 o'clock, giving the merchants and clerks a respectable time for retiring.

Against Co-operative Bill.

Ottawa, March 3.—There is considerable opposition to the Co-operative Bill now before the House of Commons among the retail trade here. One grocer spoken to, condemned the principle of giving to Co-operative Societies at no expense to them, rights for which joint stock companies have to pay dearly. Further it would seem to open the door to all kinds of dishonest practices, because under the Act, it would be possible to form a society with the word "limited" forming part of its name, which society would be composed of say four boys, twelve years of age and three adults with a total paid up capital of $7. Such a society might borrow money from its members so as to be able to show a good bank account and on the strength of this account obtain for itself extensive credits, afterwards paying back to the members their cash loans and subjecting the creditors to heavy losses.

Moreover, no provision is made in the Act whereby outsiders can procure copies of the rules of societies so incorporated, yet a knowledge of these rules is almost essential in determining whether or not a society is worthy of credit.

Clerks Were Appreciated.

Winnipeg, March 3.—"I tell you we enjoyed ourselves at Mr. Waring's home last evening, and it was certainly fine after a hard stocktaking season, for him to have such a jolly recreation," was the casual remark of a clerk in the Robinson & Co. store "the morning after." C. W. Waring, the manager, believes in showing appreciation for services rendered. "My boys were good to me during the holiday and stock-taking rush and I wanted to do some thing for them," said Mr. Waring. So the entire staff of eighteen men and one lady were invited to the manager's home where a banquet was prepared for them by Mrs. Waring and her daughter.

Potato Window Display.

Chatham, Ont., March 3.—A window piled full of the best quality of Kent County potatoes is an attractive feature at the King Edward Grocery, conducted by G. S. Bartlett.

A large, neatly lettered show card, hanging in the window, states : "Finest Kent potatoes, one peck with every order, 11c per peck."

Potatoes rarely forming the subject matter of a window display, the big pile of them has attracted much attention, especially in view of their large size. The price enhances the effect.

The pile of potatoes is surmounted by a basket of lettuce, and backed by smaller displays of cabbages and apples, the King Edward Grocery featuring fresh vegetables and fruits at all seasons of the year.

Keeps a Country List.

Edmonton, Alta., Mar. 3.—In a town or city surrounded by a good farming district, it is always advisable to have at one's finger tip some special prices on goods in large quantities. This is the claim at any rate made by an Edmonton merchant who sees to it 'that his clerks are just as well acquainted with these prices as he is himself.

He has special prices for instance on soap by the box, beans by the bushel, flour by the barrel, sack of rolled oats, lard by the tub, salt by the barrel, etc. This 'handy' list saves considerable time and is augmented when a farmer asks for a quantity of something not already on it. It prevents the necessity of the clerk going to the proprietor every time a quantity of anything is purchased to find out the price. If this list is not kept, very often the proprietor has to go to his books to determine what he is entited to get.

An Opening Announcement.

Hamilton, Mar. 3.—In opening a new store in Hamilton recently, the proprietor placed the following reader in a daily paper under the heading of "The New Baby" :

"In the world of grocery stores a new baby to-morrow offers itself to an ever expectant public. It is located at 146 James Street north, and is Carroll's sixth store. Everything in the store is new and up to date. It is lighted by electricity. The cash register is operated by electricity, and the coffee mill, which grinds coffee fresh for every customer, is driven by electricity. The cases, counters and shelving are of solid oak and are most complete, convenient and sanitary. This feature will appeal to you, as all articles of food are kept in bins and drawers, which are positively proof against dust, dirt, mice, rats or other vermin, but most important of all, the stock is entirely new, bright, clean and thoroughly high grade. While the prices ; just you look up Carroll's advertisement in this paper and get the surprise of your life."

From Credit to Cash.

Wallaceburg, Ont., Mar. 3.—Peter Forbes, grocer and butcher, turned over a new leaf, commencing Monday, and henceforth will conduct his business on a strictly cash basis. In the course of his announcement the following statements, among others, appear :

"Cash is King—at Peter Forbes' store after Monday. Credit business is no good with him after that date. The credit business is a curse to any town.

"Have you ever stopped to think what a cash dollar will do for you in the way of buying your table supplies ? Do you know that the man who sells for cash can afford to sell so much cheaper than the one who is charging up his goods on the book all the time, making bad debts that he will never be able to collect ? Do you know that the cash business is the only satisfactory way to do business ? If not, try it and be convinced. If you stick to it, you will save enough in a year to open up a bank account."

Why the Clerk is in Debt.

St. John, N.B., March 2.—A close observer of the retail salesman problem referred recently to the fact that there were many clerks who did not live within their incomes. Some are habitually behind with their finances, he said.

"No matter how their salaries may increase, they are proportionately behind in making things meet. When an employe is getting $8 a week he is owing $10, and he is working hard at the catching-up game all the time. He figures it out that if he only got $10 he could apply the $2 extra, and catch up in three weeks. The theory is all right, but the practice is not, for when this individual gets $10 a week, instead of applying the $2 extra to catching up, he finds that he wants better neckties and better underwear, and makes greater expenditure all along the line, so that instead of wiping out his debt he finds himself in still greater debt on his increased wages."

Changes Displays Often.

Sydney, C.B., March 2.—One of the grocery store proprietors here who goes in extensively for window dressing is A. D. Ingraham. He is a firm believer in nice window trims as a means of drawing trade and as a consequence has some splendid displays which he changes often. He caters to the best trade in Sydney.

J. F. Miles who opened a store here three years ago has built up a good business by keeping good goods, selling at fair prices, keeping an up-to-date store and by giving the public good service.

Service Rendered by a Recipe.

Halifax, N.S., March 2.—The grocer's customers always appreciate any little attention in the way of recipes for making houschold dainties. This has been exemplfied by a Halifax grocer in the sale of oranges for marmalade. With each purchase he hands out the following recipe :

"Cut the oranges in quarters, take out the cores and seeds, to each pound of fruit allow three pints of cold water. Put into a bowl and let this stand till next day, then squeeze the pulps, cut them into thin slices, and return them to the bowl of water ; leave all till next day then boil till very tender. Again return all to the bowl, and after a day and night weigh the boiled fruit and water. Then place all in the preserving pan and add to each pound a pound and quarter of lump sugar. Then boil, stirring constantly, for an hour or more, or till the syrup jellies and the peel is transparent."

He finds this much appreciated by his customers, many of whom follow the receipe with success. This little act of service tends to hold his trade as well as to get new business.

WATCHING APPLE SHIPMENTS.

Complaints About Condition of Apples Arriving on British Market Being Investigated.

St. John, N.B., March 3.—W. W. Moore, chief of the market branch of the Canadian Storage Department, Ottawa, was in the city last week looking after a shipment of apples which the Agricultural Department at Ottawa are sending to the Mother Country. This shipment is one carload of seven which they purchased last autumn in Ontario for experimental purposes.

For the last two years there have been numerous complaints from England regarding the poor condition of the apples which they receive from Canada. It seems that through some defect in the packing, or else from not being properly cared for while in cold storage, the apples, in the course of time, become putrified here and in that condition were placed on the English markets.

The result of this is obvious, and the Canadian shippers have had to stand for a great reduction in prices. The Agricultural Department, however, have taken up the question and are now endeavoring to better conditions. Last autumn they purchased seven carloads of apples from Ontario and used them all strictly for experimental purposes. Among other things, they have tried different methods of packing and have also placed apples in cold storage at different degrees of temperature. Whichever proves to be the better means of preserving the fruit will be resorted to in future. This will not be known, however, until all the shipments have been received in England and word sent out from there.

Speaking of the butter and cheese exports to England during the last year, Mr. Moore said that there was a marked increase in the shipment of cheese, but a great falling-off in butter. He attributes the decrease in the exports of butter to the fact that the home consumption of this is now greater than it ever was, and also to the fact that of late a large amount of the Quebec and Ontario cream is being sent to the United States.

THE BREAD SALES ACT.

Toronto, March 3.—The weight of a loaf of bread is again causing the Ontario Legislature to do some serious thinking. Owing to some complaints that have been made, W. K. McKnight withdrew the bill he introduced in 1908 and substituted for it a bill to be known as the Bread Sales Act.

It is pointed out that the chief difference between the two bills is that the last Bill limits the weight of bread to twenty and forty ounces, and it makes no provision for any other size loaf to be sold excepting it is made under a direct contract between the baker and the consumer, thus making it a legal offence for any dealer or grocer to take a contract for his customer for any weight of loaf that he or she may desire, but leaving it legal as between the maker and the customer.

To this clause E. M. Trowern, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, took strong objection, stating that it was an unfair restriction placed upon the merchant and if it were allowed in this Bill it might creep into others, as the trade of merchants was restricted enough now without adding further troubles to him. Hon. Mr. Hanna promised that he would see that the retailer was protected and he fully appreciated the objection taken by him.

A THORN IN THE TRADE.

N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

Secret rebates given by traveling salesmen for grocery houses to retail buyers have been a thorn in the trade, and is said to have been the real reason back of considerable of the trouble between some manufacturers of foodstuffs which required that their goods be sold at a set price and some jobbers who refused to sign affidavits that there had been no cuts in price. The trouble seems to have crossed the border into Canada, according to The Canadian Grocer, of Toronto. While there is an anti-tipping law in New York, Canada seems to have one more stringent, according to the Canadian paper.

MERCHANTS OPPOSE BILL.

Monster Delegation at Ottawa to Protest Against Co-operative Bill.

Ottawa, Mar. 3.—The largest delegation of retail merchants that has ever visited Ottawa waited upon the Premier and members of the Cabinet on Friday morning, Feb. 25th.

The delegation filled every seat in the House of Commons and in the galleries. The object of their visit was to oppose the passage of the Co-operative Societies Bill, known as Bill No. 50 introduced by Lloyd Harris, of Brantford, and also to call attention to the fact that the bill introduced by Mr. Monk, M.P., contained clauses in it that made it practically a twin measure to the other bill and one whereby money could be raised from the poor people for saving and loan purposes and loaned out to the commercial company for the purpose of operation co-operative societies.

E. M. Trowern, Dominion secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association, and J. A. Beaudry, Dominion Treasurer, were the principal speakers and they strongly denounced the bills as being against the best interests of the commerce of Canada.

The delegation was introduced by R. Bickerdike, M.P.

Mr. Brophy spoke for the Montreal Board of Trade, Mr. Lariviere for the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Cote for the Quebec Branch of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada and Mr. Hebert, for the Sherbrooke branch.

Sir Wilfred Laurier assured the delegation that their interests would be fully considered but he advised the committee who had the bill in charge to give it their careful attention as the bill was not a government measure.

Col. Jno. Davidson, of Davidson & Hay, Toronto, underwent a very serious operation at the beginning of the week, but, his friends will be pleased to learn, at the time of going to press he was progressing favorably.

Geo. Watt, Sr., head of Geo. Watt & Sons, wholesale grocers, Brantford, Ont., died on Thursday, Feb. 24, at the ripe old age of 86 years. He was for 58 years connected with above firm and identified at various times in his life with educational and municipal interests in Brantford. At the time of his death he was the oldest merchant in that city.

Liability of Merchant When He Signs an Order — The Frequency of Scale Inspection and Penalty—Glycerining Eggs for Making Old Eggs Look Fresh—Change From Credit to Cash.

CASE OF A SIGNED ORDER.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—Kindly answer in next issue of The Canadian Grocer :

A orders goods from B to be shipped at future date, and A signs orders.

A cancels order 2 weeks before shipment; can B compel A to accept goods if shipped ? H. T. A.

Kincardine, Ont., Feb. 24, 1910.

Answer—The construction placed upon this by business men is that since A signs the order he can be compelled to accept the shipment providing the goods are according to sample or representation. If such a contention were made then it would be a matter for either arbitration or for the law courts to decide.

SCALE INSPECTION.

Question—Will you kindly let me know in your next issue how often scales have to be inspected, the cost of inspection, the penalty attached to a breach of the Weights and Measures Act and whether the Inland Revenue Department should fix them or not ?

Toronto, March 2, 1910. M. W.

Answer—The Inland Revenue Department states that scales are inspected every two years with the exception of coal and public weigh scales, elevator scales and all spring scales which are inspected annually. Anyone can demand that a scale be tested by the Department at any time, but in the event of the scale being found correct the party who laid the complaint is obliged to pay the cost of inspection. When a scale is found incorrect a "rejected" card is placed on it which reads : "This weight measure or weighing machine must be repaired and submitted for inspection before being used for trade purposes."

The cost varies from 50 cents up according to the capacity of the scale.

Section 25, Weights and Measures Act reads : "Every person who uses or has in his possession for use, in trade, any weight, measure, scale, balance, steelyard or weighing machine, which is false or unjust, shall incur a penalty not exceeding twenty-five dollars and not less than ten dollars, or, in the case of a subsequent offence, of fifty dollars ; and any contract, bargain, sale or dealing made by the same shall be void ; and the weight, measure, scale, balance, steelyard or weighing machine shall be forfeited, and shall be forthwith seized as being so forfeited."

The Inland Revenue Department does not fix scales.

GLYCERINING EGGS.

Writing from Ashcroft, B.C., a firm of general merchants desire to know something about how eggs are glycerined and why.

Answer—The solution used for glycerining eggs, according to an experienced egg handler, is Muriatic Acid and water —one part of acid to 90 parts of water being used. This solution is used for the purpose of making old eggs look fresh, as it absorbs all the dirt on the shell making it rough, and opens the pores so that the eggs appear to be newly laid. If an egg is left in this solution over night, the shell will have disappeared by morning, as it eats up the shell rapidly. The glycerine solution, therefore, does not preserve the quality of the egg, but simply makes the egg look newer. The egg is only dipped in the solution for a second and then taken out again.

FROM CREDIT TO CASH.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—A short time ago in acknowledging a remittance from us you asked if you could be of any service to us, and taking advantage of your kind suggestion we would wish to have an expression of opinion or advice in regard to a problem with which we are now wrestling, viz. the change of our business system from that of credit to cash. Through experience and the medium of your valuable trade journal, you no doubt have come in contact with many other business men who deemed it necessary to effect this same change, and an expression of opinion would be thankfully received and highly appreciated.

Without taking up too much of your valuable time permit us to place our position before you as clearly as possible.

Our village is situated on an Island in Quebec, eight miles distant from the town of ——, and nine miles distant from —— Station, the terminal of the —— branch of the C.P.R. Thus you see we are lacking in railway communication. It might be well to mention also that communication with the first named town from this island is established during summer by means of a ferry-boat (upon which a return fare of 15c is charged) while in winter the crossing is always safe over the ice.

Our store is centrally located in a prosperous farming section embracing four townships, and, while after beginning business with a small capital we have succeeded in nine years in attaining to a turnover of $30,000, we feel that we could easily double this amount if we could retain the one-fourth of the business transacted in —— by our farmers to-day. The large centre, of course, is always an attraction to people, the market is there and a large assortment of goods with presumably "better" prices. The "better" prices are usually higher prices for these merchants have very heavy expenses for rent, help, taxation, etc. ; nevertheless it is difficult to convince customers that they can buy cheaper in the smaller places. To divert any portion of this trade we recognize the fact that attractive prices must be offered and under the credit system it is difficult. How then to change to a cash basis without losing too many customers at once, is the problem which confronts us.

Customers, whose annual accounts average $200 to $300 and are promptly settled, cannot be set aside without any consideration. It would appear almost as business suicide to do so. Provision for these is the chief point of difficulty in changing to a cash basis. At one time we had thought of lending them money, and taking their notes with interest, but abuses would likely creep in here, the money might be used for other purposes, and we would eventually become mere moneylenders. Here is the particular point upon which we would be pleased to have an opinion and advice from you.

Another point, after effecting the change, what would be the system of advertising to be adopted. Having no newspaper medium, how could we best spend our money to attain results from the advertising which we know is most essential to the conduct of a live and up-to-date business.

GENERAL MERCHANTS.

The above letter from the "General Merchants," comes from Quebec province. The request is one on which it would be difficult to give advice which upon trial would be sure to prove absolutely correct. A business expert would have to personally look over the ground, because to understand such a situation knowledge of the public served by this store would be necessary. However, the following advice from an experienced grocer and general merchant who has been in the business for more than 30 years and who has made a close study of such matters should prove beneficial to "General Merchants," whether they adopt his recommendation or not.

He writes : "His condition is rather a peculiar one, and yet it should not be as difficult to arrive at the proper solution of the problem as under ordinary conditions. Being situated on an island may have influences with which I am not familiar, but I fancy that the necessity of crossing on a boat in the summer and over the ice in the winter should be in his favor, unless the trip on the boat is considered from a pleasure standpoint worth the fare of 15c. He is doing a very good business now and his object in changing for credit to cash is not that he needs the money, but to enable him to sell cheaper and to use a strong talking point. But even now, according to his statement he is in a position through lower expenses to sell cheaper than his competitors in a more expensive town. This would indicate that it is not altogether the bargain end of it that takes any of his customers to the larger towns. They may have friends there, or connections which they do not like to sever, and to cut prices for the purpose of gaining their trade may stir up an opposition feeling.

"If, by changing from credit to cash, he runs the risk of losing some $200 and $300 yearly customers, it is rather a dangerous thing to attempt, but if the attempt is to be made it should be done very carefully. Before taking this step I would advise him taking all reliable customers into his confidence and ask them for their opinions. If his case is properly presented to them his friends should fall in with his own idea and support him. In considering this point he should be very careful not to impress them with the idea that he is doing this to keep the people from going to the larger towns, but that he does it solely for the purpose of giving his own customers still better service.

"As a rule a credit customer will give him more of his trade during the year than if he paid cash and if he does not get the credit accommodation, he might considerably reduce his purchases. Personally I never like to encourage a credit business, but under the circumstances, I think he should move slowly and rather educate his customers to the cash system than to force them into it.

Lending money in the way he suggests has been tried, but always, so far as I am aware, led into trouble. Not having a local paper, his only way to advertise is by circular. I would advise a judicious use of the circular in placing before the farmers the reasons why the merchant is in a favorable situation to sell cheaper than in the towns. Whenever I could I would compare prices showing that mine were equal to the others if not better.

TORONTO MARKET GETS GOOD CURRANTS.

Statement That the Contrary is the Case is Refuted.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—We read with some interest the letters headed "Why quality was poor," in your issue of January the 21st and Feb. 18th, relerring to the quality of currants shipped to the Canadian market. Your readers would be in a position to judge on what authority the many wild statements, contained in these letters, were made if the writers had subscribed their signatures.

Our object in writing this letter is to rcfute thc impression—at least as far as Toronto market is concerned—that it is the rule for importers to buy lowest grades of currants, and from prcference, or in ignorance, deal with irresponsible shippers. Our experience is exactly the contrary. It may be true that competition forces some importers to buy low grade fruit at a low price, but of late ycars this has become the exception rather than the rule.

We have no desire to use your columns to get free advertising for our principals in Patras, and will not mention them by name, but as the trade, wholesale and retail, recognise them as amongst the largest and most reputable in the currant business, their deliveries made during the past six months amounting to over 12,000 half cases can be taken as some criterion of what grades are in demand here. Over 75 per cent. of the whole, comprised high grade fruit from the Patras, Gulf, and Vostizza districts, and of the remaining 25 per cent. of Filiatra fruit, the greater part was a selected grade on which a premium of at least 6d. per cwt. over the market price was paid. We can to-day buy in Toronto for either of your correspondents, currants of the vcry highest grades and as good as can be procured in London or anywhere else in the world.

That success in the currant business is reached by selling high grade fruit, and not by catering to buyers for price, is demonstrated by the fact that the firm in Toronto which imports the largest quantity of currants, confines its business almost entirely to grades of fruit higher than the ordinary Filiatra, and is selling an ever increasing quantity of the highest of high grade, and high price fruit—the shade dried Vostizza. The same firm cleans all its own fruit and has a plant designed and built by itself second to none in the world.

To some retail grocers all currants look alike, taste alike, and they fondly believe, sell alike. The same grocer applies the same principals to everything he handles—so that this is not peculiar to the currant business—and fortunately bankruptcy has reduced the ranks of such men, to a very small number.

As in every other business, the importer of currants in Canada has occasionally been the victim of the unscrupulous exporter. However, "once bitten twice shy," and when an English dried fruit dealer visited Toronto last summer and in his efforts to make sales for a certain firm of Patras shippers, denounced almost without exception every other firm in the currant business, he was guilty of a tactical error and learnt to his discomfiture, that the firm for whom he was trying to do business had previous to four years ago made sales in Toronto, but a number of unpaid claims made a second advent into the market, in this generation, impossible. Knowing this, makes the unsigned letter you publish in your issue of the 18th of Feb. from London, England read like a joke, or something akin to it. Some of our London friends who pay this market a visit, are surprised that benighted "colonials" should deal direct with the source of supply, when we have the privilege of buying through London, by simply paying 3d or 6d per cwt. in insurance (or profit.)

Your correspondent in thc hurried calls, which the business obtainable, warranted his making, evidently did not stop to get full and accurate information as to conditions here. Toronto importers do not purposely deal with shippers unknown to thc trade—they have the opportunity of doing business, through the medium of able and responsible brokers, direct with almost every reputable shipper of currants in Greece, and from our personal knowledge they avail themselves of the opportunity.

APPLE SHIPPERS' LOSSES.

A Disastrous Season for Some Nova Scotia Men.

Halifax, N.S., March 3 —The past season was in some respects a disastrous one for the apple shippers of Nova Scotia. The speculators and some of the growers who shipped their own fruit lost large sums of money. The heaviest losses were incurred early in the season, and were due entirely to the poor quality of the fruit. The applcs in many cases were not matured and were rushed on the market in this condition. Then later on some of the apples arrived in poor shape, while othcrs were improperly packed. All these conditions assisted in hammering down the prices, and it was a long time before the market recovered. It is stated that somc of the shippers lost sums of money ranging from $10,000 to $20,000 in the early dealings.

When the better grade of fruit was marketed later there was a general improvement in prices, and thc latest reports received here are that apples are now in good demand and that even higher than the prevailing prices are expected. The shippers who met with losses early in the season now have hopes of evening up to some extent.

From all appearances there is not going to be any serious hold-over in storage eggs. Evidently the cold storage men last year figured the situation nicely in trying to make both ends meet, and this week, so far as the large egg packers in Toronto are concerned, will see the finish of the storage eggs.

One dealer on Wednesday morning had but one case left, while another had only five left. This does not include quantities of limed eggs used by bakers extensively, but the regular cold storage eggs for household purposes. Bakers prefer the limed egg on account of its high beating qualities.

New-laids are now coming in rapidly and if mild weather continues, jobbers will have sufficient quantities to supply the demand. Should cold weather set in and be prolonged, supplies could be easily rushed in from the United States to equalize the demand. In fact, a few carloads of United States eggs are in now or on the way.

There is no reason, therefore, to believe that eggs will change in price a great deal one way or another.

Strictly new-laids are practically the same price as at this time last year, probably a little firmer now, while cold storage are also quoted about the same.

PROFIT FROM MILK SCARE.

Now that there is so much talk about impurities in milk supplies, a splendid opportunity is furnished retailers to advance the sales of condensed milk, powdered milk, etc.

They are in a position to unhesitatingly recommend this milk as being absolutely free from contamination in view of the system of manufacture, the source of supply and the general care exercised by the manufacturers.

The present, therefore, is an opportune time for window displays of condensed, evaporated and powdered milk, backed up by window cards, price tickets and a few good straight talks in the local papers. It's the wideawake merchant in such a case who reaps the reward.

And it's an ill wind that blows nobody good.

CANADA AND THE U. S. TARIFF.

The maximum tariff under the Aldrich Payne Tariff goes into effect in the United States, March 31st. This tariff is levied against all countries which are held by the administration to accord more favorable terms to the imports of any other country than to those of the United States.

Just where Canada will stand when the maximum tariff goes into effect is so far unknown. Any doubt is due to the British preference. During the early stages of the discussion of the tariff bill in Congress, it was understood, semi-officially at least, that the preference which Canada gave to the mother land would not be considered a discrimination against the United States. Nothing can be taken for granted, however, until the negotiations at present under way are concluded.

Another feature, which creates some doubt as to what the attitude of the United States is, is the Canadian-French treaty, which went into operation Feb. 1st. The effect this treaty may have is made doubly uncertain by the fact that the United States and France are not now on particularly amicable terms in tariff matters. Commercial peace has just been assured between Germany and the United States, but the outcome of the negotiations now pending with France are problematic.

One favorable condition is the attitude of President Taft. He has more than once signified his desire for friendly commercial relations with Canada. He is evidently sincere in this, but political influence may be brought to bear in the other direction. The commercial and financial interests in the United States, however, are opposed to the maximum tariff being levied against Canada. They know that Canada is the third largest customer the United States has, and that last year, although the total exports of the States last year decreased by 1.4 per cent., exports to Canada increased 19 per cent. Great Britain is the heaviest buyer, Germany second, with Canada a close third, and France the fourth in order, considerably down in the list as far as the value of purchases is concerned.

Canada purchases more from the United States every year than the whole of Central America, Mexico and the West Indies combined. In fact, it is necessary to include also the exports to China and Japan in order to create figures sufficiently large to compare with the exports to Canada.

Should the maximum tariff, which imposes an additional 25 per cent. on the regular tariff, go into force against Canada, there will certainly be reprisals on the part of Canada. Her weapon is the 33 1-3 per cent. surtax, which would certainly be employed.

The so-called balance of trade is already largely against Canada. We now buy from the United States double the quantity of merchandise they buy from us. In other words, last year we purchased $182,600,000 worth of merchandise from the States, while their purchases from us amounted to $92,600,000.

It is scarcely likely that the United States will be in a hurry to levy the maximum tariff against Canada, and Canada meantime is standing firm.

NOT WATCHING HIS BUSINESS.

The necessity of looking closely after the leaks in the business is well exemplified by the recent experience of a salesman for a well advertised food product. He was in the office of a wholesale grocer, and was "called down" because the volume of the distribution of his goods was less than the corresponding period a year ago.

"How do you know that" the salesman inquired.

"Well, I do not seem to see as much of them going out as I used to." Then the salesman went to his office and looked over his records. The result showed an increase of between 30 and 40 per cent.

"Never would have believed it," the jobber said, "but if you tell me it is true from the records I am willing to take your word for it."

Thus it is often that merchants who are supposed to keep in close touch with what is going on are careless in making statements such as is noted above. The merchant who leaves the details to his men and devotes his time and energies to finding the leaks in his business and how this and that is moving, and at what profit, is more than likely to be the man who will make the best success.

OLD EGGS MIXED WITH NEW.

The troubles that dealers have with fresh and stale eggs are many. The other day one of them who handles eggs extensively called the attention of some bystanders to a particular case.

"See here," he said, "this is the trouble we are up against. These eggs were sent in as fresh with a letter that the shipper must have not less than 29 cents per dozen, and fully one-third are bad and scarcely any are fresh eggs."

This is the time of the year when there are all sorts of troubles of this kind. Farmers have a portion of their winter supplies of eggs yet and when the hens begin to lay, they mix the old eggs with the fresh and send them to their stores. The merchants take them as new laid without examining them and send them along to the dealer.

This is considered to be one of the worst kinds of stealing and as the farmers are not by any means all dishonest, it is unfair to the honest ones that this is tolerated.

Country merchants are often afraid to find fault with the produce their customers bring in, but they forget that they are doing an injustice to those who are honest.

It is an easy matter at this time of the year to candle all the eggs that come to a store, and if the farmers knew that this is being done, the trouble would at once cease. Farmers are looked after and are being heavily fined for fraud in packing apples and adulterating milk. In milk there is always some chance of a mistake. Some cows produce much poorer milk than others, so that the man supplying poor milk may be suspected of watering it, but in eggs there is no excuse whatever. It would appear that any one who mixes old eggs with new laid, does it for the purpose of cheating, and as he can so easily be detected, some definite steps should be taken to have the practice eliminated.

A PROFIT OF 5100 PER CENT.

From a letter appearing elsewhere in this issue, written by a Chilliwack, B.C., merchant, a proof of the safe investment that The Canadian Grocer is to subscribers is well exemplified.

He writes that he gets enough hints from each number to pay for a year's subscription.

What does this mean? It means that every issue is worth at least $2 to him. Therefore, after paying his annual subscription he has at least made $102 during the year out of The Canadian Grocer. Hence on an outlay of $2 his profits are $102, or 5100 per cent.

Is there any other investment a grocer can make which will bring him such returns? A safe answer is that there is not. All that is required is a careful perusal of the paper from cover to cover every week. The suggestions are there if the reader cares to utilize them.

THE CAT ON THE COUNTER.

The cartoon in last week's issue on "Things That Shouldn't be," has aroused considerable interest from readers, including retailers, travelers, jobbers and manufacturers.

The cat upon the counter where foodstuffs are occasionally left open does not by any means denote cleanliness. It is unsanitary and "shouldn't be."

A traveler is the authority for the statement that cats are too often allowed to roam about the store. He says that not long ago he went into a grocery store where he found a cat lying in the window and actually sunning itself on a box of figs, while still another was licking the knife used for cutting bacon.

It is to be regretted that such should be the case in a twentieth-century grocery store. It is something that should be eliminated. No scientific merchant would allow it.

INSURANCE FROM ANYWHERE.

Merchants and manufacturers will be interested in knowing that the Committee of Fire Insurance Premium Payers, who have been fighting the Fire Underwriters' Combine before the Banking and Commerce Committee of the Senate at Ottawa, have been successful in preventing the adoption of the amendments desired by the insurance underwriters, whose requests, if granted, would have practically compelled every person desiring insurance to place their insurance with the so-called Canadian companies, who have established headquarters in Canada, but whose stock is mostly held in Great Britain or foreign countries.

The Premium Payers' Committee were ably represented before the Senate Committee and were able to show the Senators that the establishment of an insurance monopoly would be injurious to all branches of mercantile industry throughout Canada.

After discussing section 139, which provided that a firm may go outside the country for fire insurance by paying 15 per cent. on the premiums, Senator Dandurand said there were many principles involved. The first was, shall citizens be allowed to freely insure in unlicensed foreign companies? This question the committee unanimously answered affirmatively.

The next question was, shall all unlicensed fire companies be prohibited from having representatives in Canada to solicit insurance or from soliciting directly or indirectly? The committee gave a unanimous affirmative answer to this also.

The third question was, shall the person or firm going outside be taxed to a certain extent to help maintain the insurance department? The insurance men wanted this, but the committee by a very large majority decided that there shall be no tax for going outside.

The fourth question was, shall the insured who goes outside Canada be obliged to send annual returns as to the amount of insurance placed? This was answered in the affirmative.

The matter now goes back to the House of Commons, where it is possible that the insurance underwriters will renew their fight. After winning such a victory in the Senate, however, the Premium Payers are likely to again carry their point in the Commons.

CREAM OF TARTAR IMPROVED.

A recent bulletin issued by the Inland Revenue Department at Ottawa on Cream of Tartar inspections shows that 85 per cent. of the samples collected were genuine. Of this number, 50 samples, or nearly 24 per cent. of the entire collection, reach the standard of purity of 97½ per cent. named in the British Pharmacopoeia. Of genuine samples which fail to reach this high standard, only 16 fall below 90 per cent. purity, and 3 below 88 per cent. of purity. The lowest percentage of purity found in any genuine sample is 86.

Cream of tartar has been inspected on several previous occasions, and it is interesting to note a general improvement in the quality.

The adulterants to be found in it are alum, acid phosphate of lime, and mixtures of these with starch.

Chief Analyst A. McGill states that this cannot but be regarded as a fraud when the mixture is sold as cream of tartar.

"Some of the substitutes," he says, "are possibly unobjectionable on the score of healthfulness, and their efficiency in bread-making may be granted. They are, of course, intended to be sold at a lower price than cream of tartar. It will be seen by referring to the present report, as well as to previous reports, that the retail price of cream of tartar seems to vary from 30 to 40 cents a pound. It will be noted that very few of the substitutes for cream of tartar are offered at a lower price than this. If cream of tartar substitutes, or so-called compound cream of tartars, are legally recognized, it can only be on condition of their being distinctly labeled to conform with section 24 (d) of the Adulteration Act."

Suggestions for Writing Effective Ad. Copy

The Displaying of Type Also a Subject for Thought — Value of convincing Talks—Confusion of Articles Tends to Prevent Ad. From Being Read Carefully.

The subject of advertising is now an important one in view of the approach of the Easter season when so much advertising is usually done.

T.A. ROWAT & CO

A Well-Written Retailer's Advertisement.

The T. A. Rowat & Co.'s ad. is a good one. The fine display lines in the introduction made a splendid opening sentence, but they might have been made more effective if the last three of them had been displayed in smaller type. The talk is convincing and should command attention. The panel announcing choice smelts, haddies, bloaters, etc., would possibly have been more effective had some prices been quoted since the present is an ouportune time to call attention to fish. The method of displaying the type and prices from the panel down is good, being attractive and not confusing.

The McLaurin & Dow ad. from a Fort William paper denotes alertness on the part of the proprietors, in view of the present investigations into the supply of milk in Ontario and the value of condensed milk.

The general appearance, however, might have been improved. The display type used for the word "milk" is scarcely necessary and the ad. is on the whole a little confusing. For instance the copy writer begins by comparing milk with beef extract. One would naturally expect to see more light on this comparison later on, but no further mention is made of it. Also attention is called to the presence of a chemical used for embalming the dead, but no further use is made of this outside of the fact that formaldehyde is mentioned as being present in milk samples.

Here is a suggestion for this ad. :

A LITTLE TALK TO USERS OF MILK.

The value of milk as a food is determined by the amount of butter fat it contains. Thus the following comparison of the percentages of butter fat found in ordinary bulk milk with those in standard brands of Condensed Milk will interest you. (M. H. O. report and government statement should be inserted here).

You will note that the Condensed Milks contain twice the amount of butter fat. Besides this they contain also a certain amount of sugar which is, in itself, a nutritious food. And, note this : In the ordinary milk there were signs of formaldehyde—a drug used in preserving dead bodies. Which are you using—ordinary adulterated milk that is weak in butter fat or pure milk that is strong in butter fat ?

A LITTLE TALK TO USERS OF Milk

In the first place pure milk is more nutritious than beef extract, and is the best known food for children. We wish to call your attention to the following comparisons and leave it to your own good judgement whether you would prefer to feed your children on adulterated milk preserved with a poisonous chemical they use for embalming the dead or on pure milk with simply pure cane sugar added for a preservative.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—
Sugar—Strong market.
Canned Vegetables—Good demand.
Japan Teas—Lower.
Grenoble Walnuts—Higher.

Montreal, March 3, 1910.

Firmness characterizes the majority of grocery markets this week. There have been no important advances, but a few fluctuations being observable. Sugar is upward in tendency, as a result of a continuation of the drought in Cuba, and firm advices from foreign markets. Canned vegetables are in good demand, all lines, but other tinned foodstuffs are not moving freely. French peas have been reduced greatly, owing to the French treaty. Some lower grade Japan teas are offering at attractive prices. Syrups and molasses are experiencing the usual good Lenten demand. Green cod is very scarce. Grenoble walnuts are higher.

Business generally is satisfactory, with the outlook very good.

Sugar.—A firm market rules this week with another advance expected. Buying is naturally restricted in anticipation of higher figures, which seem especially likely in view of bullish news from the London market and a continuance of the drought in Cuba. Cane, beet and raw sugars have all been advanced in London.

[Editorial Note]—Since the above report was prepared, sugar made another advance of 10 cents, and the prices now rnling are as follows:

Syrups and Molasses.—Lenten demand for syrups and molasses makes business in these two lines quite as brisk as usual at this time of year, while the lower figures quoted for the latter are responsible for larger sales.

Tea.—More movement in Japan teas is noted this week, there being still some lower grade lots offering at attractive prices. High grade Japans are practically exhausted, as far as first hand supplies are concerned. Buyers are even now looking forward to early new crop arrivals. Other teas are about the same. Prices are steady.

Dried Fruits.—Considerable interest continues to be displayed in the devastation scheme of the Greek Government. The fact that the authorities are willing to reimburse the growers to the extent of two or three millions of dollars to place the currant exporting business on a firm basis commands great interest, and further developments will be awaited with pleasurable anticipation, to say the least. Sultana raisins are strong, with demand for this grade, and most others rather inactive, but showing some signs of improvement. Prunes are inquired for a little more frequently, too. Better quality raisins are in lower supply weekly.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—Owing to the French treaty, peas from France are reduced to a marked extent, declines running all the way from $1.50 to $2.50 a case, thus making the price of these goods within the reach of a much larger class. All canned vegetables are in strong demand at present, tomatoes, corn and peas being particularly brisk. Canned fruits are quiet, while fish is moving slowly. Salmon is in fair demand, rather an exception, while lobsters are slow, with stocks very small.

TORONTO—There is nothing of an exciting character in the canned goods market. Peas are in small compass and are worth just double what they started at the opening of the season. This leaves a small profit to sell them at 10c each. If grocers would take advantage of prices when they come their way, they should sell their peas at a profit on the present cost. It is the general opinion that all kinds of canned goods will at least hold their own, with a chance of advances on some lines.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—

Sugar—Market up 10c.
Ginger—Higher.
Dried Fruits—Slow demand.
Brazil Nuts—Scarcity.

Toronto, March 3, 1910.

The grocery trade is active, especially in sugar, which is considerably excited. Canned goods are in fair demand and the stocks will likely not be much in excess of the season's requirements. Dried fruits are handicapped by the large quantities of apples, which are cheap, and also by the large quantities of all kinds of fruit which were preserved last summer. Tea and coffee meet with the usual steady demand.

Beans are in good demand and are likely to go higher. Evaporated apples are changing hands on account of the low prices.

Trade on the whole is improving from the usual quiet month of February, and March is hoped to bring lots of business.

Sugar—Again this week another advance of 10c on sugar has taken place, and the market remains strong. This is 25c in two weeks' time. The opinions of wholesale men vary considerably on the sugar question. Some claim that the excited condition of the market is owing largely to speculation, while others think that the principal buyers are refiners and that the advance is legitimate and substantial. Not one would venture to predict for certain either a rise or a drop, but all are of the opinion that it will not drop, but whether it will go higher is uncertain but likely.

Dried Fruit—Dried fruits of all kinds are moving slowly. It is evident that the Canadian people are rapidly growing into the habit of using their own fruit, instead of depending on imported goods which are far inferior. With the increasing production of all kinds of the best fruits, which can be bought during the season at reasonable prices, and with the little trouble and expense of preserving them, it is quite likely that the demand for imported dried fruit will diminish.

To enjoy them next Christmas they have to be held in stock.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Up 5 cents.

Fish—Excellent Demand.

Winnipeg, March 3, 1910.

There is a "great calm" in a few lines on the wholesalers' list this week. Most prominent in this condition perhaps are cereals, and the reason for it cannot readily be explained. Where the trade is lacking, however, it is made up in other lines that have been quite obscure of late. Fish, syrup and canned goods are features in the present trade. The rise in the sugar market is interesting to many merchants who must do some heavy ordering soon.

Travelers' orders have fallen off slightly, perhaps because merchants were visiting wholesalers in Winnipeg in large numbers recently. Shipments of goods at any rate continue to be heavy and collections are coming in fairly well.

A wholesaler called the attention of the writer to a comparison of the prices this week to those in the same lines of one year ago, and it was found that almost all lines had made some advance. There is certainly an increase in the cost of living, as this proves, but there also may have been an increase in the remuneration for the efforts of life and therefore really no comparative increase.

Sugar—It is uncertain where sugar is going to stop. Another advance of 5c has been made and the market is still strong. The western demand is not affecting the market but it is solely a New York manipulation.

[Editorial Note]—Sugar advanced again this week 10 cents after the above report was submitted. The following are the ruling prices now:

Foreign Dried Fruit—The market on all these lines are changeless except that seeded raisins are on the verge of an advance. We do not quote any rise, but up until the present the producers' price has been prevailing and it has been found that the crop was not sufficient to warrant such a price. This condition has had a tendency to force the market up. These prices are all held quite strongly.

Evaporated Apples—Prices may go up soon as the inferior product is being worked off the market. The price to-day is firm at 9c and the better goods will be considerably in advance of that figure.

Cheese—The Ontario product is firm at 14 cents and may be 15 before long. The quality is said to be excellent on all cheese in stock.

Canned Goods—No quotations can be made in these lines and the market is featureless. Pineapple is reported very scarce and the price ranges from 60 to 90 cents according to size.

Fish—All kinds are in excellent demand while the prices are all medium. The best grades are moving the most freely which might be a surprise to our eastern friends who are under the impression that any old stuff will go here. The feature of western demand for any line is that of high grade. If eastern shippers would bear this fact in mind, it would ensure a better future for their own business and save annoyance and loss of trade at western points.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, March 3, 1910.

Another drop in the price of eggs is about the only feature of note in the local grocery market this week. Fresh laid stock is now selling at 25 cents per dozen. The demand is fairly good and the receipts are increasing. It is expected that the price will continue to drop from now until Easter.

Wholesale dealers report that the demand for fruit and vegetables is good for the season of the year. The quality of the Jamaica oranges that are coming on the market now is good. Navels are also of better quality, being sweeter than the earlier arrivals.

Cranberries are reported to be in good demand, and the quality of the stock is excellent for the season of the year. They are now quoted at $7 per barrel.

There is a good demand for potatoes, and they are keeping much better than expected. The price remains unchanged.

Business conditions are reported to be quite satisfactory for the season of the year, and collections on the whole are good.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, Mar. 3, 1910.

This is the time of year when butter takes an upward rise, not because the quality is excellent, but because the supply is limited and the demand is great. This week the jobbing quotation is 45 cents for the standard local creameries, though to get better is another thing. One company, who handles the output of a large creamery, has placed a lower figure than the standard creameries. It is quoting 38 cents, but will probably be asking 40 cents in a day or two. Eastern butter commands 30 cents strong, with a trifle higher quotation. Eastern Townships, Cloverdale and other brands that have such a good name, are brought

Only a Flat For Warehouse

When Red Rose Tea was first placed on the Ontario market the business was transacted from St. John, N.B., where Red Rose Tea now occupies the largest and best equipped tea warehouse in Canada. The business in this Province grew so rapidly that it became necessary to open a branch at Toronto, and premises were taken on Front St. The business continued to grow and it was not long before we had to have more room, and the warehouse at 3 Wellington St. East, was leased, and we thought we were settled for a long time. But it has been wonderful the way the sales of Red Rose Tea have increased from year to year. With a considerable portion of our old lease yet to run, we are actually crowded out, and have taken a long lease of one of the largest warehouses in the city, that lately occupied by Todhunter & Mitchell at 7 Front St. East.

WILL HELP THE MERCHANTS.

Morpeth, Ont., Mar. 3.—At a meeting held here recently the bean growers of this section organized an Ontario Bean Growers Association, modeled upon much the same lines as the Ontario Corn Growers' Association. The objects are to improve the seed and methods of cultivation, study the best means of combating insect pests, and gather general information respecting the crop for the benefit of both buyers and sellers.

The association is asking the Ontario Department of Agriculture to establish an experimental plot in bean growing, and to send an expert to address the farmers regarding the industry. The association has been placed on a broad basis, both buyers and sellers being eligible for membership.

Increased interest in bean growing is a great help to merchants in this section inasmuch as farmers have more money to spend and the merchants in such a case always get the preference.

ENTER PROTEST AGAIN.

Montreal, Mar. 3.—J. A. Dore, A. Daniel. J. D. Boileau and A. Dumont representing the licensed grocers of Montreal appeared before the Chambre de Commerce, February 24, to protest against the delivery by brewers of beer to private houses. This is a question of long standing, and it has been discussed at numerous meetings of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association but a remedy to the existing state of affairs has not yet been found. The matter has been before the Quebec Legislature and success seemed imminent when the amalgamation of brewers took place and the government decided to postpone any contemplated change in regulations.

While the Chambre de Commerce did not take any action it was decided that the matter should be once again brought before the Legislature.

DAMAGE BY FIRE.

Toronto, March 3.—A fire occurred in the building on Front Street, Toronto, last week, occupied among others by Green & Co., importers and manufacturers of grocery specialties. It started in the third flat, where a considerable quantity of goods, including grocery specialties, canned goods, cigars, etc., were stored, and being fanned by a strong wind, swept the flat. Extensive damage was done to the stock, but it is covered by insurance, and the offices below, as well as stock in other storage rooms in the building, were damaged by water.

A REAL SALESMAN.

What He Must Have Besides Knowledge of the Stock.

By R. C. Bretz.

The three most important factors of a successful salesman are, quickness to judge human nature, a pleasing personality and untiring patience—of course, granting a salesman must have an accurate knowledge of his stock at all times. In my estimation there are two kinds of sales made in selling a customer, namely, "the intelligent sale" and the "case of customer buys himself."

The intelligent sale is the one that holds your customer and brings him back, because the salesman has given the customer something else than that commonplace argument, "that's all the go," or "it looks well on you." He brings out the points of the goods and is able to meet any argument the customer may make in a pleasing, matter-of-fact way, but he does not rouse the obstinate ire of the customer and, in a brief conversation, shows his customer he is competent to handle him in an intelligent way. On the other hand, we have the "case of customer buys himself," the salesman merely pulling goods out of stock and trying them on in an unintelligent and listless way; he has already lost the confidence of his customer by not being able to meet some argument offered during the sale, and it is mere chance if the sale is made. The salesmen I am trying to describe in this article are few and far between, because one has acquired that art, his ambitions have made buyer, manager or proprietor out of him and his success is assured. An article on salesmanship could fill a book and then not cover the different opinions of people on this subject.

A successful food fair conducted by Rea's departmental store, Montreal, in the grocery department, has just been concluded. Numerous Canadian manufacturers occupied attractive booths.

The Effect of Cold Storage on Eggs and Poultry

Official States That Farmers Hold Fresh Eggs Too Long and Suggests Remedy—Would High Cost of Living be Reduced if Storage Time Limit Were Made? — Frozen Chickens Should Not be Thawed Out by Dealer.

In investigating the relation of the cold storage to the cost of living, some interesting information has been given before the committee appointed by the United States Congress.

Dr. H. W. Wiley, chief of the Bureau of Chemistry, told the committee that certain eggs which he had paid 30 cents a dozen for in the open market were cold storage eggs, and were used for ordinary use in the kitchen—frying, scrambling and soft boiling. Other eggs, which the witness said his inspector saw laid, he paid sixty cents a dozen for. Some eggs bought as strictly fresh at 40 cents a dozen proved to be cold storage eggs —really the same as those sold frankly as cold storage eggs at 30 cents. It would appear, then, that while a fairly good egg, passing as "strictly fresh," can be had for 30 cents, the really fresh eggs command twice as much. This tends to show, said Dr. Wiley, that storage keeps down the price instead of boosting it.

"As I understand it," asked one of the Congressmen, "the important and first essential is to see that the food product, including the egg, goes into the warehouse fresh. If it goes in fresh, then it can be kept reasonably wholesome for a time; if it does not go in fresh, it is bad then and deteriorates from that time on?"

Dr. Wiley replied: "That is exactly the idea that I tried to convey to the committee."

Asked if a method of inspection could be adopted which would guarantee eggs going into storage fresh, Dr. Wiley replied that "competent inspection of eggs entering cold storage, similar to the inspection which is now practised by the merchants themselves, but more rigid, would secure the entering into cold storage of sound eggs." The doctor said he felt sure that it was commercially practicable to do as he suggested. He said the cost of the test, with a 10 per cent. salt solution, would be almost nothing. The next best thing to an inspection, in the doctor's opinion, would be to date the packages, and the two would go very well together.

Lays Blame to Farmer.

He lays upon the farmer the chief blame for the lack of fresh eggs in the market.

According to his testimony, farmers' eggs are permitted to begin the process of growing stale before they leave the farm.

The farmer should be taught to put his eggs on ice, if necessary, the doctor thought. He said that almost every farmer could have an ice box in which eggs could be placed as soon as laid, so that they could be reduced to a temperature which would retard the process of decay. With good eggs to begin with, said the doctor, it is possible to keep them from six to nine months in cold storage and have them come out good to eat.

The chairman asked: "What is your opinion of the limit of time for storing good eggs?"

"I said not to exceed nine months," responded Dr. Wiley, who also said, when he fixed that time limit, that it was because he would not have eggs carried over to compete with the next season's crop.

It seems that the United States Government does not feel any particular apprehension that perishable products will be kept in storage so long as to become tainted. At any rate, it was the opinion of the secretary that it could not do any good to place a limit by law on the time that perishable products may be kept in cold storage.

One Congressman asked whether "it would relieve the situation as to the rise in the price of foods if we were by law to limit the period of time that meat, poultry, butter, eggs, and other food supplies could be kept in storage?"

To this the secretary replied: "I doubt if it would, for after the fullest inquiry you would limit the time to such period only as that which the meat would be good when it was taken out, and the packers and all others, merchants who use these refrigerators, must do the same thing."

Cold Storage Chickens.

One reason why cold storage chickens sometimes seem disappointing is that the dealer thaws them and dips them in water to make them swell up and look plump. Cold storage chickens should be sold frozen, and never in any other way, said Dr. Wiley.

The doctor added that some of the most grevious evils connected with cold storage were due to the advanced state of decomposition that articles were in when they were placed in cold storage. Cold storage itself he considered practically the ideal method of keeping perishable products.

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

Supplied to the Trade by Sellers.

The MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Ltd., beg to announce to their numerous customers, who have always stood by their renowned "Beauce Brand" Pure and Compound Maple Syrup, that they expect a full supply of both these lines to arrive about the end of March, and look for a continuance of their past favors.

"Kandy Kid," manufactured by Clyde Fuller & Bro., is certainly creating a stir in the confectionery trade. This line has attained a wonderful sale in a short time. It will pay all up-to-date merchants to secure first benefits from this confection. The above-named firm are the largest popcorn manufacturers in Canada.

Brand & Co., through their representative at Toronto, are offering a special proposition to a leading grocer in every city and town in Ontario, in connection with Brand's A1 sauce and their various other lines.

The unique experience of outgrowing two warehouses in a few years has been the good fortune of the Toronto Branch of Red Rose Tea. For some years Red Rose Tea, at its headquarters in St. John, N.B., has occupied one of the largest and best equipped tea warehouses in Canada. This week the Toronto Branch is removing from 3 Wellington St. East to one of the largest warehouses in that city—that lately occupied by the Todhunter, Mitchell Co., at 7 Front St. East. This change shows the remarkable growth of the Red Rose Tea business in Ontario. When Red Rose was first placed on the Ontario market ten years ago the business was transacted from St. John. Soon it was found necessary to open a branch and Toronto was selected as the location. Premises were taken on Front St. and were soon outgrown. Then a lease was taken of the warehouse at 3 Wellington St. East, and the need of larger premises seemed a very distant probability. But with a considerable portion of the lease yet to run more room became an imperative necessity. The new premises at 7 Front St., East, will afford room for great expansion. The building is a hundred and eighty feet long by fifty wide, four stories and a basement, and is in the centre of the wholesale district. The interior is being remodeled and made up-to-date in every respect. The offices will be large and handsomely appointed, and the shipping facilities will be the best. When T. H. Estabrooks, of St. John, N.B., proprietor of Red Rose Tea, entered the package tea business, he adopted for Red Rose a blend of Indian and Ceylon teas that has been found particularly well suited to Canadian tastes and conditions. Then he has steadily maintained the quality believing that in building a business, quality is more than price. The success of Red Rose, due to the quality of the tea, has been phenomenal, and in a few years has made Mr. Estabrooks one of the leading figures in the tea trade in Canada.

Hog Prices at the Highest Point in Forty Years

Another Advance Occurs and Cured Meats are Stronger —An Advance in Lard—Good Butter in Demand—Cold Storage Eggs Running Short, But New Laids Will Take Their Place.

The fact that a real scarcity of hogs is the cause of the high price is now admitted in general, and it is a fight or rather a race between the many packing houses, as to who is to get the pig. All are anxious to keep their factories in operation and make the best of it. Not only are the high prices of hogs against them, but the cost of manufacturing increases in proportion as the supply decreases. If a factory has capacity to handle a certain number of hogs a day, but only gets half the quantity the cost of producing the manufactured goods is almost double. It will be noticed that cured meats have not advanced with each cent on the cost of the hog. With the shrinkage, and extra cost of manufacturing in consequence of the light receipts, the packer claims he would be justified to raise prices at least 3c on cured meats when the prices of the hog advances one cent.

The butter situation is gradually evening up and by the time the summer supply will be available, the held butter will likely have found its outlet, without leaving any serious losses to the holders.

The egg trade, at least, so far as Toronto is concerned, worked out admirably. The cold storage eggs are all sold, and the demand can be safely supplied with the new laid, and if necessary our southern friends will be pleased to help us out.

The figures relating to the imports of cheese are considered noteworthy by Montreal exporters. Canada and New Zealand between them supplied more than four-fifths of the cheese imported into the United Kingdom in 1909.

It will be noted that in the case of butter and bacon Canada has a long way yet to go in supplying even one-quarter of the total amount in demand.

ADVOCATE OF WEIGHT PLAN.

Woodstock Merchant Points Out Unfairness in Selling Any Other Way.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—It is the candid opinion of many people that all grocers should sell such articles as cucumbers, cabbage, etc., by the pound or by weight, instead of selling them at the rate of 2, 3, 4 or whatever the number may be at 5 cents, as is the general custom now-a-days.

The reason these commodities should be sold by weight instead of by quantity is, that by taking the latter course all the customers of a grocer are not treated fairly. If a grocer has a crate of cucumbers or cabbage for sale and he is selling them at the rate of so many for five cents, naturally the first customer who comes into the store to buy these articles will pick out the largest and best articles that there are in the crate. In this way, by the time five or six customers have made purchases all the largest and best of the articles are gone, and customers who come in the store later on have to take "what is left." Any fair-minded merchant can see that this is not the proper way to do business. On the other hand, if such commodities are sold by weight every customer is treated fairly and squarely, as each customer then gets the same quantity.

It is also the opinion of many people that a grocer would help his own business as well as accommodating his customers better if he would sell these articles by weight. When a man puts a crate of cabbage or cucumbers on sale in the morning and all the choice goods are picked up by the early shopper, the customer who comes in, say in the afternoon, does not always feel inclined to pay the same price for the smaller articles as the other customers did for the choice ones, whereas if a customer was told that the goods were being sold by the pound, they would buy at any time during the day, as then they would know they were getting a fair deal.

GROCER.

Woodstock, Ont., March 3, 1910.

ORDER TAKERS GIVE REBATES.

Does This Come Within the Meaning of Secret Commissions Act?

Editor Canadian Grocer,—In reading what has appeared in The Canadian Grocer about the Secret Commissions Act, I am reminded of a discussion that took place some time ago about a certain act, upon which those discussing it held different opinions. One in the heat of his argument forcibly impressed upon the mind of his friend that in order to understand the act it was first necessary to know what it meant, and then to read it to get the right sense of it.

This seems to apply to this Secret Commissions Act, and I must declare that I do not know what it means and therefore cannot understand it when I read it. It appears, however, that the lawmakers aimed to check a certain evil, but did not think of all the details of the trade it would include, or if they did, it remains for us to get busy and find out where we are at. Supposing a clerk in a retail store is sent out to solicit orders, and he does what has been frequently done—tips the cook for the trade. Would that come under this act? It is a well-known fact that this is a serious evil and if this act covers that, it would be well to have a test case as soon as possible. There are instances where good customers are lost through the misrepresentation of the goods by the cook, and this was done for the bribe she received. It is well-known that in order to get trade in some restaurants and hotels, it is necessary to bribe the proper official. Does this act not also cover this tipping habit in every shape and form. Tips are usually given in order to receive something over and above what a person really is intended to get.

If this law covers all these evils, it is certainly an angel in disguise, and should be welcomed by all honest business men. The people are rapidly waking up to the fact that all men are entitled to fair pay for their services, and in consequence the trade can afford to eliminate everything which is unfair and dishonest.

Flour Unchanged in Spite of Wheat Wanderings

Demand Not Extra Good—British Market Using Large Quantities of Russian Flour—Rolled Wheat Shows Advancing Tendency.

Since our last week's issue the wheat market had their usual flutterings, and the price reached the highest point since the last crop went on the market, although 2c below last year at the same date.

The fight seems to be a fairly even one, although gradually but slowly making it more hopeless for those who have to supply cheaper wheat. In this constant, never-ceasing, strenuous battle, every change in the weather, every condition of the growing crops and every supposed or real change in the total wheat supply is watched with an intense keenness, and manipulations follow according to the views big millers take of these changing conditions. Damage to the growing crops is closely watched and made use of in bulling the price.

Under all this high tension in the wheat market, the millers are slow in buying, and are selling their flour at practically the same price, and working on slightly smaller margins as the wheat slowly advances. Russia continues to pour out its enormous crop, which keeps the flour market in England too well supplied to suit our millers.

The Firms Which Will be Included in the New Concern—J. G. Flavelle the President.

Montreal, March 3.—Promoters of the cereal merger announce this week the names of the mills which will be taken over by the newly-incorporated company, and give some facts regarding the stock and bond issue.

Eight leading firms will merge: The Tillson Co., Tillsonburg; the Flavelle Milling Co., Lindsay; P. McIntosh & Son, Toronto; James Wilson & Sons, Fergus; Walter Thomson & Son, London; Woodstock Cereal Co., Woodstock; D. R. Ross, Embro, and Martin Bros., Mount Forest.

These mills turn out oatmeal, rolled oats and flour, chiefly.

J. G. Flavelle will be president of the new concern.

Authorized capitalization will be $1,500,000, 7 per cent. preferred stock, and $1,500,000 common stock. There will be left in the treasury $500,000 preferred and $500,000 common stock, while there will be an authorized issue of $1,000,000 6 per cent. first mortgage bonds.

A. J. Nesbitt, managing director of the Investment Trust Co., Montreal, has been responsible for the bringing together of the firms.

When P. McIntosh & Son were spoken to in reference to the above report, they disclaimed connection with the merger. They had heard nothing definite in reference to the matter, although they knew it had been talked of now for some time.

The Glengarry Match Co., Alexandria, Ont., has been granted an Ontario charter. Among the provisional directors are R. B. McArthur, T. H. G. McCrodan and R. W. Adams.

I'VE JUST overheard a conversation, Brother Grocer. Between the President and Mr. L., one of the FIVE ROSES men.

The President: "What's doing?"

Mr. L.: "Heard a woman complaining."

The President: "How very unusual!"

Mr. L.: "Complaining on FIVE ROSES, sir."

The Pres.: "Eh!"

Mr. L.: "Yes, sir. Called on Jones 'smorning. While discuss-"ing the wheat market, Mrs. B. comes in all flustered. Said "she'd used FIVE ROSES twenty years without "bad luck.' "But the last barrel was a dose of disappointment—couldn't "do anything with it. Quite sore, she was, sir. Yes, sir."

The President: "That's nice. What did YOU do?"

Mr. L.: "Why, nothing. I didn't let on."

"What, you don't mean to tell me you stood there and let a "woman work herself up into a frenzy over a cooking failure "without finding out what's what."

"But, sir, what could I do? She wasn't MY customer."

"Yes, sir; she was. You trot right back to Jones's as quick "as you can get there. Ask him, with my compliments, to see "Mrs. B. and get that flour back. You must send her another "barrel, or her money, all of it, together with our most abject "apologies—and do it NOW."

He did.

You see, Brother Grocer, the results of an accident in transit, flour damaged somehow.

We surely love complaints, because to rectify them makes us all the stronger with our customers.

And the President, quite indirectly, gave me a lesson in salesmanship, drawn from his own vast experience.

He believes, like all successful merchandizers, that Marshall Field was right when he said—"The customer is always right."

But the crucial point, Brother Grocer, is this:

If FIVE ROSES ever causes a disappointment, whatever the cause (for mistakes will happen in the best regulated families, you know), take the flour back as cheerfully as you can or care to and replace the sale, or refund full purchase money, no matter how much flour has been used.

We'll stand the whole loss, Brother Grocer, thanking YOU gratefully for the opportunity of living up to our guarantee.

Do that, and we'll be friends for life.

For, you see, the FIVE ROSES guarantee is in no way worm bitten.

Merchants' Obligations in Trade Reformation

True Co-operation With the Farmers Needed, Says Writer, to Clear Atmosphere of Trade Troubles—Up to Merchants to Take Initiative—Would Tend to Eliminate Buying From Mail Order Houses.

By M. Moyer.

The discussions of the high cost of living have brought out a good many interesting points, apart from the solution of the problem. The one most conspicuous is the fact that people engaged in different occupations, know so little about one another.

That foodstuffs, particularly farmers' products, are unusually high, all admit, but when some tried to put the blame on the retailer, it showed how little they knew of his business.

C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, in a very few words showed up the situation as it really exists. The whole trouble he said was the fact that the production was not keeping pace with the rapidly increasing consumption, and this explained itself when he demonstrated how the rural population was decreasing while the city population was rapidly increasing.

But he made another remark which should be interesting to retail merchants. He said that "farmers need not only co-operation among themselves, but they also needed the proper co-operation of the town and city people." By this I suppose he meant particularly those who handle the goods they produce and also what they have to buy. True co-operation is not to combine together for the purpose of gaining any special benefit at the expense of others, and is never right nor fair unless it works out in harmony with the best interests of all the people.

There are fundamental principles underlying the network of the world's activities, and to discover these and to work them out is the work of co-operation. Only a few years ago farmers were kind to each other in giving assistance to their neighbors and friends when they were in need, but true helpfulness was better understood when they started, through the assistance of the government, to help one another to get better results from their labor, through a clearer understanding of the principles that work for right and greater success.

To open the way to make it easier to succeed was not by producing anything that did not exist, but merely by learning how to utilize and harmonize the means at their disposal.

Merchants Should Break the Ice.

Wonderful has been the work accomplished, but the co-operation with the people who are not farmers, to which Mr. James refers, has not yet been attempted and it remains for the merchants to take the initiative in this work. A good deal is said just now about "co-operative" societies, but when the aims and objects are carefully investigated; it is nothing else than "combination," which means advantages for a certain class at the expense of others. The Co-operative Bill now before parliament is of this character, because it has features in it which aim for profit entirely separate from its intended purpose.

The agricultural industry has been greatly benefited through co-operation among farmers; and so have the merchants, but now is the time when co-operation between the two should be developed.

Taking it for granted that the retail and the wholesale trades are necessary for the convenience of the people and the only system known to the world that can render cheap and complete service, therefore, to bring out the best results for the entire community there should be "true co-operation." Combination destroys individuality but co-operation in its true sense means full individual liberty under the best possible conditions.

What True Co-operation Is.

If the farmer does his very best to produce the highest quality of goods for the dealer to handle and the dealer does his best to give good service in return, that is co-operation, and the best results can only be attained through united effort. Being both in the same locality, the profit accruing from both will, to that extent, improve the value of the property in that neighborhood.

It is estimated that some of the choicest lots in Toronto are worth 4 or 5 million dollars an acre, and as this is made so valuable principally through the products of the farm, an agricultural paper recently claimed that such land does not pay its proper proportion of taxes and that part of them should go back to reduce the taxes of the farmers. But why should the farmer make this land so valuable and impoverish his own property at home, from which he is deriving the taxes in the natural way?

We hear much complaint about people sending their money to the large department stores. This is admitted to be a hindrance to the natural growth of our country. The people would not do it if they understood the true principles of co-operation. It remains for the merchants to get busy.

SOME USEFUL HINTS.

The following hints are useful to the general merchant in two ways. He may use them himself and may advise his customers thus giving a better service:

Candles, dried meats, hams, bacon, and tongue all keep best in a cold but not damp place.

All rice, oatmeal, sago, etc., should be kept carefully covered from the air.

Dirty windows show untidy and careless storekeeping or housekeeping sooner than anything else.

For barley water small pearl barley should not be used. Use only the larger sort ground small.

If ribbon has splashes of mud on it, it should be allowed to dry, then brush it off gently, and lightly sponge the stain with sal-volatile and water.

Firm Market This Week—Dealers Lose Heavily in Apples—Supply Appears to be Too Great for Demand — Good Call for Vegetables all Winter—Fish Market Firm With Some Advances.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruits—Fruit men who have handled apples as extensively as in the past have been keenly disappointed in the outcome of the year's business. It has been a most discouraging season, due largely to the high prices asked and paid for apples early in the fall, when contracts were made with orchard owners. Good prices which were at the time anticipated failed to materialize, and more than one dealer has lost heavily. Many shipments have been consigned to Europe, where the loss has been as great as it would have been here, and, in some instances, greater. There is but slight activity at present. Apple supplies are more than sufficient to take care of all demands, despite Government statistics which prophesied a scarcity. Tallman Sweets are higher. Prices on other varieties have not changed. California navel oranges are firmer, on an advance of 25c, due to a stronger feeling in United States markets. Lemons are stronger, too. Other lines are normal.

Vegetables—Roots are active, but there is no special demand for imported stuff. There have been slight fluctuations in several lines, but no appreciable changes in prices. Considerable hot house stuff is being brought into the city from neighboring places and this is selling freely in small lots. Radishes, mushrooms, and parsley are especially salable.

Fish—A proposal to bring cod fresh from the sea to this and western Canadian markets the year round has been before the trade indefinitely for some time, but active measures are now under way which will result, through the use of the newly discovered Solling wrapping process, in Canadians being able at all times to secure fresh cod from far off Newfoundland, in excellent condition. Trial shipments are now being made. Of course, the new style packing will mean higher expense, but it is thought that the better quality, fresher flavor, will make it easy for dealers to sell to the better class of trade. Haddock continues scarce, with demand active. Halibut is scarce and high. Tomcods are low in price and supplies are plentiful. Dried lines are moving out as usual, Shell fish are being sold freely. Mild weather is affecting sales generally.

Green Fruits—The apple market is completely demoralized. Some apples have to be sold at a very low figure in order to avoid total loss. All apples have their particular time to be at their best, and those that are past their time are selling as low as $1 a barrel. The very choicest spies bring as high as $4. The apple trade this season, on the whole, was disastrous to the large dealers.

The California navel oranges are now arriving in good shape. They are almost free from frost, and are about 25c a case higher. Strawberries are more plentiful and will likely be lower.

Vegetables—The business in fresh vegetables during the winter is increasing from year to year. They do not seem to be a mere luxury, but an every day requirement. Sales are regular and nearly all grocery stores handle them. California celery, which monopolized the market for some time, is almost off the market, but is immediately followed by Florida celery which is now considered superior in quality. Florida celery comes in cases half the size of the California. Cucumbers at $2.50 a dozen and strawberries at 60c a box look a little bit high beside a barrel of apples at $1, but the people will buy them and continue to talk about the high prices.

Fish—The demand for fish is great, but the supply is rather light," was remarked by one of the fish dealers. Another one said: "The fish market is very firm and prices are about 1c higher all round." Fish are scarce and several lines are completely off the market. Fillets are gaining in popularity on this market; they are boneless haddie.

TO DEVELOP FISH BUSINESS.

Montreal, March 3.—A. H. Brittain, Montreal, has returned from a short business trip to Digby, N.S., where he was for a day engaged in connection with preliminary steps incidental to the making of definite arrangements which are expected to result in the greater development of the fish business in that Nova Scotian fishing town. A large smoked fish business is done from Digby every year, and it has been felt for some time that this could be made of larger volume, while the fresh fish industry might be profitably developed as well.

A FACT

Market reports from the largest cities in America: New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Pittsburg, Boston, etc., state that Florida Oranges are selling for more money than any others. The quality is better; that is the reason. Why more of you do not handle Floridas is because you have not seen or tasted the finest oranges grown. Those you are buying you think are good enough, but the best markets are buying Florida Oranges, because they know they are the best. Order Floridas for full-flavored, sweet, juicy fruit. Our pack is carefully handled and graded.

METHODS OF FRUIT GROWERS.

What Does Their System of Co-operation Mean?—How Jobbers Will be Affected.

A report comes from St. Catharines, Ont., to the effect that with the co-operation of all the fruit growers in connection with the Niagara District Fruit Growers' Association, three commission houses each in Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg, and one each in Quebec, Ottawa and London, will be established to handle the fruit from that vicinity, and a stock company to cover the district formed in connection therewith. The distribution committee of the association has taken the initiative in forming the grape growers of Ontario into one large company, with central management, and to include all existing co-operative companies and societies.

In discussing this matter, P. T. Peterson, of the Peterson Fruit Co., Montreal, said: "The establishment of three commission fruit houses in Montreal by the Niagara District Fruit Growers' Association, will not affect the business of the local houses to any extent.

"If these commission houses are established it will be for the purpose of handling small fruits, such as pears, peaches and grapes. These goods are of a perishable nature, and already some of the large wholesale firms have gone out of that special line of the trade, for the reason that the goods were sent here and sold on a commission, and the losses, owing to the perishable nature of the fruits, made the business unprofitable.

"Commission houses of the nature considered will be better able to handle this kind of trade, and they will also be able to make more money for themselves."

The fruit jobbers in Toronto give a different version of the above report, and claim that it is altogether misleading. The Fruit Growers' Association, they claim, do not intend to have their own houses to handle their fruit, but instead of shipping their goods to a large number of commission houses in one city, they are considering the advisability of consigning their shipments to about three in the largest cities and to one or two in smaller places. The growers claim that often the same fruit sold by different firms will come into competition with itself, and result in confusion and also in a loss. In doing this they consider that they can keep the few commission men better posted as to the quantity of fruit they may expect to receive.

The matter, however, is still under friendly consideration between the growers and the jobbers.

CHEAP POTATOES IN N.B.

In Carleton county, New Brunswick, potatoes are being sold by the farmers for 50 cents a barrel. At this price they are secured by shippers and after being culled over are sent to the Cuban market. A number of the farmers are going to share the risks of potato planting this year with the fertilizer men, putting in on halves. In Maine the farmers have asked the boards of trade throughout the eastern part of the state to co-operate in a movement to assist them in selling their crop, a large part of which is still on their hands.

To The Fruit Trade

One way of increasing your fruit trade and your profits is to keep your stock cleaned up. A dozen oranges left to dry out and spoil in the bottom of a box reduces the profits on a whole case. Fruit that doesn't move in a reasonable time is bound to deteriorate in value and will not do your fruit trade any good. Again, if you can double your sales you double your profits, and your stock is always fresh and clean. Its very appearance is an added incentive to your customers to buy.

Every orange and lemon packed in the "Sunkist" wrappers passes the most rigid inspection ever given fruit. Every piece must be well colored, juicy and full flavored. As we ship entire train loads of fruit from California, we have the advantage over all traffic lines, thus bringing to you the best fruit of California in prime condition. "Sunkist" brand is fruit you can recommend, fruit your trade will appreciate, and you can build up a fresh fruit business that will make you more clear money than any other line of goods you handle. "Sunkist" on the wrappers of oranges and lemons means quality insurance.

We are taking special care with our Canadian shipments and believe every jobber can supply you with "Sunkist" oranges and lemons. If you have any trouble in having your order filled, we will be glad to hear from you.

How a Clerk's Savings Can Start Him in Business

Advantages of an Apprenticeship to the Grocer and to the Trade Pointed Out—The Future in the Grocery Business for Energetic Young Men With Business Acumen.

By A. H. Harvey.

While there are some grocers who succeeded without having served an apprenticeship, it is, however, safe to say that in some way or other they had to pay for want of experience and training. There is no getting away from the fact that in order to sueeeed in the grocery business with the keen competition and small profits now-a-days, a man requires a thorough knowledge of every detail of his business.

Unfortunately for the grocery trade, too many drift into it without any fitness for it, and without any training or knowledge of the business. On account of their failures and of their ignorant mistakes in putting the blame on the business, instead of on themselves, the groeery business is seemingly offering very few inducements to clever young men to prepare themselves for the groeery trade.

At the same time, if all the abuses could be eliminated, the groeery business would loom up and eompare favorably with anything a young man could find to do. Like everything elsc the grocery business becomes pleasant and interesting in proportion as it is understood and mastered, and unless it is learned in the natural way by starting young in life, and learning it step by step one will never enjoy the full satisfaction which the grocery business has in store for him.

Therefore to become a successful grocer and one who will enjoy the business, it will be necessary to start as a boy and serve an apprenticeship.

His Natural Appearance.

Before deciding to do this he should first consider whether he is naturally adapted for it. As the grocer handles the goods which the people buy to eat, he should have a good appearance. Any deformity, such as mis-shaped hands, rough skin, imperfect speech, is a handicap in the grocery business.

Possessed of good qualities and with active and industrious habits the grocery business is open for a young man without any other means, to make a success, and gain the respect and confidence of the people. Not only must he learn to do the work in the store, but he must acquire the habits of saving, carefulness, promptness, accuraey, etc., which are all necessary and must be developed to the highest degree.

In making his agreement for his apprenticeship he must begin on business principles, and right from the start make up his mind to save some money even if his earnings are small. The first year he should save at least $1 per week. This will mean that he has to deny himself many things, but as a rule, only those which are of no value to him. As his wages advance from year to year, his bank deposits should correspondingly increase. The second year he should save at least $2 a week, the third $3, the fourth $6, the fifth $8, and the sixth $10.

Capital Enough in Six Years.

If the boy starts at 17 years of age, and is faithful and diligent, he will have $1,560 deposited in the bank when he is 23, in addition to interest accrued, besides his valuable training, which is worth infinitely more. With this capital, good habits, and the training and consequent knowledge of the business, he can begin a business of his own with every chance of sucess.

As said before, through incompetent men, who never learned the business, and who do not even know enough about it to know that there is something to learn, the grocery business is regarded as a slavish business—a business of abuse and no thanks.

THE LATE D. HATTON,

Head of D. Hatton & Co., Montreal, Que., Who Passed Away a Short Time Ago.

This is a mistake and is the outcome of ignorance and suspicion. First, such a merchant does not know his business, then he gets his jealous eye on his neighbor, and he acknowledges his inability to hold his own with his neighbor. With this combination he is a burden to himself and in his narrowness puts the blame on the business.

The groeery business offers opportunities for young men who will serve their apprenticeship and thoroughly learn the trade. The old way, without any qualification or fitness practised by so many of our grocers has run its course, and the people demand a higher and better service. They are willing to pay for it, hence the opportunities for the right kind of boys.

VALUE OF A GOOD NATURE.

"In my opinion about the greatest natural asset a man can have," said a retailer a few days ago, "is that of good nature. And I am speaking entirely from a business point of view, too. Aside from the happiness that good nature brings to the individual himself, it has distinct business advantages that should not be lost sight of for an instant.

"In the first place, the good-natured man has lots of friends, and the value of friends who may be made customers, or who may be depended upon to give one the benefit of any good thing they may have is in itself a good thing. Then, too, the good-natured man is one who is confident, optimistic and willing to take a bigger chance in the course of his daily work than the suspicious and ill-tempered individual, and since all business is the taking of a chance to a greater or less extent, this is another resource that should be taken into account.

"Now it is easy enough to say be good-natured, but perhaps for some of us it is not the easiest thing in the world to become. To get away from the grouch habit, if we have it, is undoubtedly difficult, but it can be done, and all of us know of people who have overcome it. What I do want to say, and it applies to the merchant and his clerk with equal force, is that the result is worth the effort, not alone in making life more worth living, but in putting a larger cash balance on the right side of the account, and that is what all of us who are in business are striving to accomplish."

GENERAL STORE OPENINGS.

Among the business openings for general stores in western Canada as reported by the G.T.R. are the following: Cabot, Deer, Harte, Justice, Rivers, Pope and Uno in Manitoba; Zeneta, Good Eve, Venn, Young and Tako in Saskatchewan, and Ryley in Alberta. In writing to Cabot, correspondence should be addressed to President, Town Council; to Deer, Justice, Rivers, Pope, Good Eve, Venn and Ryley, the Secretary of the Board of Trade should be addressed; to Harte, M. Collins, Carberry, Man.; to Uno, Zeneta, Young, the mayor of each; and to Tako, the Secretary of the Business Men's Association there.

Fred Ryan, of Sackville; A. Gordon Mills, N. W. Eveleigh, W. A. Kierstead, Joseph Coughlan and E. P. Vanwart, of Sussex, N.B., are applying for incorporation as Mills-Eveleigh, Limited, to carry on a general mercantile business in Sussex. The capital stock of the company is $19,000. The concern has purchased a building and expects to be ready for business in May.

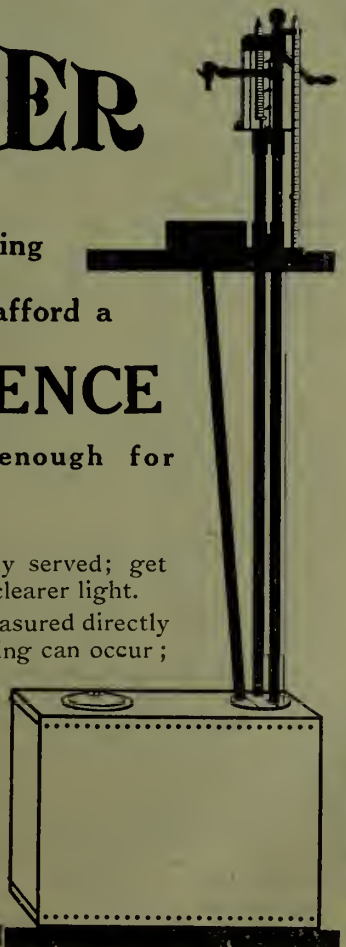
that alone is reason enough for installing the system.



"The convenience is mutual.

My customers are better and more quickly served; get clean oil of better quality that gives a firmer, clearer light.

The barrels are easily emptied; the oil is measured directly into the customer's can; no slopping nor spilling can occur; the odor of oil is not found in the store.

MR. GROCER,

Try the Better Way

That credit customer should not give you trouble at all. His business is as good as the cash customer's, and he will pay just as well if you use the right tactics on him. Don't jump all over him—don't be too loose with him. Just use the good, old, safe, sensible plan that has been tried and proved successful by thousands of grocers all over America.

Allison COUPON BOOKS

systematize credit accounts, simplify collections, please the customer and eliminate arguments. They cost but little and pay for themselves many times over.

HOW THEY WORK

A man wants credit
You think he is good
Give him a $10 Allison Coupon Book
Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10—No trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten-cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

Currants

Of High Repute

Aside from their high quality, the evenness of the packing is a feature that will appeal instantly in currants shipped by

COMPANY

Fine, selected, high grade in every respect and well deserving of the place they occupy in the front rank of popular estimation. The Greek Currant Co. has a reputation to conserve and that's why their product never varies.

Fruits

Dried or Canned

The "Griffin" Brand of dried and other fruits established the standard of quality from which all other brands are judged, years and years ago. Comparisons are made from the "Griffin" Brand.

GRIFFIN &
SKELLEY

Their seeded and seedless Raisins, Canned Fruits, white and green Asparagus, Sterilized Prunes, Cured Fruits, are steady sellers to the most particular people —people who make a hobby out of "Quality." Best because no others are quite so good.

Gelatine

The Best There Is

Cox's Gelatine (in powdered form) is as staple as sugar, tea or salt. It is as safe to stock up with as sugar, tea or salt. No other gelatine claims superiority, because it involves wasted effort so to do.

COX'S

It is the absolutely pure gelatine. It never disappoints the cook. It never fails to accomplish the desired and expected result. And it maintains its unsullied reputation for quality steadily year in and year out.

A "Between Seasons" Opportunity

Now comes the time when the housekeeper---your customer---must cudgel her brains to think up attractive and varying menus. The winter things have about run out---the spring things haven't yet come in.

This is your opportunity. A little effort---a little diplomacy---a few words of recommendation will be appreciated by the housewife. It will make many, many sales for you that would not ordinarily turn your way. In other words, suggest that offer opportunity for an endless variety of desserts, salads and similar table delicacies. For instance, suggest the salad made with canned tomatoes, Pure Gold Gelatine and Pure Gold Salad Dressing Powder.

Pure Gold Products

Some of the deliciously simple desserts---made either with Pure Gold Quick Puddings alone or with staple fruits.

You can see how you can divert many, many sales to your store by such suggestions.

And don't forget our guarantee to you---no matter how large or how small a stock of Pure Gold goods you put in, if any one or all of the articles prove unsatisfactory as sellers or with your trade all you have to do is to return the unsold stock and get your money back---every penny of it.

If you don't carry the goods now write for information and a salesman's call (should you wish it).

These goods can be had of all jobbers and can be shipped from Pure Gold stocks at Victoria, Vancouver, Winnipeg, Montreal, Toronto and Calgary.

The Government's Opinion of Our Factory Is Well Worth Considering—

The Wholesale Grocers' Guild Found Not Guilty

The First Complete Report of Justice Glenholme Falconbridge's Judgment in Important Case Which Closed In January of 1909—History of The Guild and What Defendants Were Charged With—No Violation of the Law or no Restraint of Trade Says His Lordship—Memorable Cases Cited in Justification of Decision.

This is a prosecution for an alleged conspiracy connected with trade and commerce, laid under Section 498 of the Code.

The indictment was found by a Grand Jury at Hamilton, before me at the Autumn Assizes of 1907.

The persons and corporations against whom such indictment was found exercised the option given by Section 581, and elected to be tried before me without the intervention of a jury, and by consent the venue was changed to Toronto.

Partly owing to the fact that witnesses had to be brought from great distances, and from the United States, and partly because regard was necessarily had to the other engagements of myself and counsel, the case was not immediately proceeded with, but it was tried on 21st September, 19th, 20th,, 22nd and 23rd October, 11th and 12th November. The evidence was closed on 7th January, 1909, and the argument at once proceeded, and occupied three days (the 7th, 8th and 9th). The evidence was then extended and copies made of certain exhibits, and after I became (some weeks later) finally seized of the case by the delivery to me of the papers necessary to complete the record, various circumstances of a personal nature from time to time interfered with my disposition of the case.

There are over 1,000 pages of typewritten evidence. The exhibits number 112—two of them being letter-books from which hundreds of letters were read—and other individual exhibits, each comprising in several instances bundles of 30 or 40 letters and documents.

The indictment charges, "that Henry C. Beckett, George E. Bristol, John I. Davidson, Thomas B. Escott, W. G. Craig, Joseph E. Eby and Thomas Kinnear, The Dominion Wholsale Grocers' Guild and the Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Guild, did in and during the years 1898, 1899, 1900, 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904 and 1905 at the City of Hamilton in the County of Wentworth and elsewhere in the province unlawfully conspire and agree and arrange one with the other and others of them and with "some 208 named persons, firms and corporations," and with the several members during the years aforesaid, of such as are corporations and with the several officers and members of committees of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild, and of each of the Provincial Guilds, during the years aforesaid, and other persons, firms and corporations at present unknown:

(1) To unduly limit the facilities in producing, manufacturing, supplying and dealing in sugar, tobacco, starch, canned goods, salt and cereals and other articles and commodities, being articles and commodities which are the subject of trade and commerce.

(2) And to restrain and injure trade and commerce in relation to such articles and commodities.

(3) And to unduly prevent, limit and lessen the manufacture and production of such articles and commodities.

(4) And to unreasonably enhance the price of such articles and commodities.

(5) And to unduly prevent and lessen competition in the production, manufacture, purchase, barter, sale and supply of such articles and commodities, against the form of the Statute in such case made and provided and against the peace of Our Lord the King.

Counsel for the Crown admitted that no case had been made out against defendants under section one of the indictment corresponding to sub-section (a) of Section 498 of the Code (for unduly limiting facilities for transportation, production, etc.), and that the case would have to be maintained, if at all, under the remaining charges corresponding to sub-sections (b) (c) and (d) of the said section.

I have, of course, always been seized of the principal features of the case, and having carefully considered the numerous authorities cited to me and others, I have been for some time in a position to say that I had made up my mind and was prepared to render a general verdict, but I was anxious, in a case of so much importance, to give a very full and elaborate statement of the facts. But, as I have indicated above, every time that I thought I saw before me the two or three weeks necessary for that purpose, illness or some other intimate disabling cause came in the way. And I now realize that it is unfair to all parties concerned further to delay judgment, and I must do so, leaving the details to be filled in hereafter, if considered necessary or desirable.

Origin of The Guild.

The history of the guild has to be gathered from the evidence of defendants and the letters and documents. It appears that the Wholesale Grocers' Guild had its origin in the year 1883.

Prior to the formation of any association of wholesale grocers, the conditions of the trade in tobacco, starch and staple articles, sugar, canned goods and matters of that kind and cereals are proved to have been very unsatisfactory. The wholesale grocers were making a very small profit altogether, and not even a living profit on staples. Price-cutting was prevalent. Defendants claim that it was owing to the unfortunate and unsatisfactory conditions that existed that some steps had to be taken to preserve their existence in trade.

The evils of which the wholesale grocers were complaining and for which they sought a remedy, were that a great many lines of goods were being sold at a less price than they thought they ought to be, and business conditions were not fairly understood, and enforced as the grocers thought they should be. It is sworn that the object of the guild in seeing the manufacturers was to try and get, if possible, sufficient profit to deliver or market their goods without drawing upon the profit of other portions of the business—(Kinnear).

The guild's origin was due to the fact that conditions of the trade were very bad, and it was found necessary in order to prevent disaster amongst those engaged in wholesale business to meet and confer with a view of seeing what measures might be arrived at to improve such conditions—(Beckett).

Mr. Kittson says, that what gave rise to the guild was this. the wholesale trade came together for the purpose of forming an association for their mutual helpfulness, to educate each other as to the conditions of trade, to endeavor to promote legislation when necessary, for the purpose of consulting with regard to the standing of customers, for the general purpose of throwing light on better methods of doing business and to increase the profit if possible.

Colonel Davidson states in his evidence, that the origin of the guild was about 1883, when Mr. Blain and he went east to Montreal to arrange a tobacco price.

Mr. Blain relates, that Colonel Davidson and he went to Montreal with a view of discussing the situation of the trade on the question of tobacco and on that occasion they succeeded in making an arrangement among the wholesale grocers to sell tobacco at an advance of two cents a pound. This arrangement was subsequently made between most of the wholesale grocers.

The next move was in the reduction of time terms given to the trade. Shortly afterwards they devoted their attention to the sugar business. This was the first time any united action had been taken by the wholesale grocers to see what could be done with the refiners. Negotiations with the refiners extended over three or four years, and finally resulted in the wholesalers getting a discount on the price which the refiners were charging, becoming able thereby to make a little profit on sales.

Mr. Blain further says that the bone of contention between the wholesalers and refiners was that the refiners could not afford the wholesalers a profit between the wholesale and retail trade, and the wholesalers' contention on the other hand was that they could not exist without it. The refiners contended that they could not sell the goods themselves for the profit they were getting. In short the wholesalers wanted more profit on sugar from the refiners; the price to the retail trade was to remain the same.

Mr. Blain says that the next move was further to reduce the terms on sugar to the retail trade. Sugar was reduced to thirty days, and other goods gradually came to be put on a thirty days basis, but these negotiations extended over quite a series of years.

Colonel Davidson says, that after his trip to Montreal with Mr. Blain, the wholesalers met occasionally and discussed matters, but for some time there was no regular constitution and no by-laws or anything of the kind.

Mr. Beckett in his evidence, states that the organization was at first rather a "go-as-you-please" affair. There was no system about it, and only a part of the wholesalers appear to have acted in the conference in the early stages. Some took no interest in the matter. The wholesale grocers had what they called a guild, but they did not even have a list of the members. No guild member could tell or knew who the other guild members were, and apparently they had no opportunity of knowing from any records or books of the so-called guild.

No Funds Prior to 1903.

Mr. Blain, says that the guild did not have many meetings during the presidency of Mr. Gillard, and that the guild was never organized upon what might be called a regular system, until 1903. Mr. Gillard seems to have acted largely on his own responsibility, and he did not consult with or represent the guild officially.

Mr. Beckett says that prior to 1903 there were no funds in the possession of the Guild, and no membership fees. That Mr. Gillard or anyone else who was active in the Guild's interests paid his own expenses and that the Guild did not contribute anything towards them.

Colonel Davidson says that the Dominion Guild was the outcome of the local guilds, but they were not at that time called local guilds, but local associations, and then afterwards provincial guilds were formed.

Mr. Cook says that the first and only by-laws of the guild were adopted on January 22nd, 1903; that the Dominion Guild consisted of nearly all the wholesale grocers in the Dominion; that there are also provincial and local associations. Each city where there are wholesale grocers has a guild; each province has a guild. By becoming a member of the local guilds, members also become eligible for the Dominion Guild. A member in good standing on 31st December, 1902, of the local guilds was made member of the Dominion Guild.

Mr. Blain says that the object of forming a constitution was to have a proper system of looking after the wholesale grocery business, and to have it properly organized. The condition of membership in the guild was that the applicant must be a wholesale grocer. The guild was formed for the purpose of giving to its members a reasonable profit for handling the trade in staple commodities of general consumption.

Colonel Davidson says that the guild was not formed for the purpose of enhancing the price to the retailer or consumer, but the guild had the reverse effect; that it had not destroyed competition nor enhanced the price of any article, but on the contrary it has reduced the price, and that there is no difference between the method of conducting business now under the guild and as it was conducted thirty years ago, before any guild was thought of.

Things That Shouldn't Be

Grocers should see that their clerks should not carry fish in their hands from boxes outside the door. It does not look well and they are apt to handle other foodstuffs without washing the hands.

Mr. Beckett says that the guild was not formed at all for the purpose of regulating prices; that the method adopted was to prevent the demoralization of the trade continning, and to remedy existing grievances.

Mr. Kittson says the guild simply endeavored to get the manufacturers to fix their prices of their goods independently of the grocers and the wholesale people then asked the manufacturer to pay the wholesale grocer so much out of the price as his remuneration for handling the goods.

Mr. Cook in his evidence says that the loss of membership was the only penalty known in the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild.

Consideration of Public Policy.

The history and proceedings of the guild are set out in the exhibits filed. They are too lengthy to be transcribed here, but if this case should come to be reported, some of them must be set forth:

(See Mr. Washington's argument, pp. 1-16).

This prosecution is under the statute, but it is instructive to consider the common law on the subject, as defined by several leading cases and authorities:—"The doctrine that certain contracts are void as being in restraint of trade is founded upon considerations of public policy. According to a well-known dictum of Mr. Justice Burrough, 'public policy is a very unruly horse, and when once you get astride it you never know where it will carry you.'" "To determine what is and what is not prejudicial to the interests of trade requires very exceptional insight into economic conditions and the nature of commercial transactions, and consequently, as the late Mr. Justice Cave once remarked, 'Judges are more to be trusted as interpreters of the law than as expounders of what is called public policy.'"

(Jolly on Contracts in Restraint of Trade, 2nd Edition, pages 1 and 2).

In Nordenfelt v. Nordenfelt-Maxim (1894) A.C. 535, several very eminent law lords discussed the question of contracts in restraint of trade, and pointed out that "the course of policy pursued by a country in relation to and for promoting the interests of its commerce must, as time advances and its commerce thrives, undergo change and development from various causes, which are altogether independent of the action of its courts." (per Lord Watson at page 553) and Lord Ashbourne at page 556 says: "The cases that have been referred to are interesting and important as showing the history, growth and development of an important branch of our law. In considering them it is necessary to bear in mind the vast advances that have since the reign of Queen Elizabeth taken place in science, inventions, political institutions, commerce and the intercourse of nations. Telegraphs, postal systems, railways, steam, have brought all parts of the world into touch. Communication has become easy, rapid and cheap. Commerce has grown with our growth, and trade is ever finding new outlets and methods that cannot be circumscribed by areas or narrowed by the municipal laws of any country. It is not surprising to note that our laws have been also expanded, and that legal principles have been applied and developed so as to suit the exigencies of the age in which we live."

Salt Merger Case Cited.

In the Ontario Salt Company v. Merchants' Salt Company, 13 Gr., Ch. Rep. (1871), 540, that eminent judge, Strong, then Vice-Chancellor, delivered an elaborate judgment, the bill having been demurred to for want of equity; the head-note is as follows: "Several incorporated companies and individuals, engaged in the manufacture and sale of salt, entered into an agreement, whereby it was stipulated that the several parties agreed to combine and amalgamate under the name of 'The Canada Salt Association,' for the purpose of successfully working the business of salt manufacturing, and to further develop and extend the same, and which provided that all the parties to it should sell all salt manufactured by them through the trustees of the association, and should sell none except through the trustees." "Held, on demurrer, that this agreement was not void as contrary to public policy or as tending to a monopoly, or being in undue restraint of trade; that it was not ultra vires of such of the contracting parties as were incorporated companies, but was such in its nature as the court would enforce."

At page 542 he says: "It is out of the question to say that the agreement which is the subject of this bill, had for its object the creation of a monopoly, inasmuch as it appears from the bill that the plaintiffs and defendants are not the only persons engaged in the production of salt in this province, and therefore the trade in salt produced here by other persons, and in salt imported from abroad, will remain unaffected by the agreement, except in so far as prices may be possibly influenced by it. The objection on this head is rather that the agreement has for its object the raising the price of salt, and for that reason is illegal, as constituting the old common law offence of 'engrossing,' or at least is void as being against public policy."

And on page 43: "Were I to hald this agreement void on any such ground I should be laying down a rule which, if applied, would cause great inconvenience in trade, and one the necessity for which would at this day be discountenanced by all public and scientific opinion."

So that it would be dangerous to accept as a settled doctrine of political economy or proposition of law, that under any and all conditions, and at all times, every man or corporation should be declared to have an absolute and inclinable right to buy and sell, trade or barter, with any other person or corporation, without restriction as to quantity or price.

Coal Association Decision.

The case of Rex v. Elliot (1905), 9 O.L.R., 648, has been strongly relied on by the Crown. There the defendant was president of, and took an active interest in the conduct of affairs of the Ontario Coal Association. That association was not formed so as to include a whole class. Dealers in Ontario could not became members of the association as of right, and at least one applicant had been refused because the state of the coal business "would not admit of additional competition."

The main object of the association was to restrict and confine the sale of coal by retail to its own members, and to prevent anyone else from obtaining it for that purpose from the operators and shippers. Here the endeavor is to protect the interest and the welfare of the wholesale grocers of Canada, whether they are members of the guild or not. Article 5 of the constitution of the Ontario Coal Association plainly contemp'ated the fixing of prices by the local organization so that in the two particulars that case is entirely different from the present one, viz., the legitimate coal dealer could not get admission to the Coal Association, whereas here the guilds have invited the membership of legitimate wholesale dealers from the beginning, and secondly, the price has in all cases been fixed by the manufacturers themselves.

The Plumbers' Combine Case.

In the case of Rex v. Master Plumbers' Association (1905) 14 O.L.R., 295, persons in the trade who were not members of the Plumbers' and Steamfitters' Association could not buy supplies except at an advance of from 20 to 25 per cent.; in other words, men who were in the same position as the members, either could not buy at all, or if they could buy could only do so at an advanced rate. On page 300 of his judgment in that case, Clute, J., says: "We find that that system was endeavored to be rigidly carried out. Of course, for the purposes here, it is not necessary that it should be shown that it was carried out or that it was put in force—the mere combination was sufficient; but as a matter of fact it was so enforced, and so rigidly enforced, that numbers of plumbers who were not members of the association found it is impossible to obtain goods except by a roundabout way through other members of the association or by importing them from the United States."

And at page 302: "During all this time I find that the existence of this combination continued, that it was being observed as well as it could be under the circumstances, that both parties relied upon it, and that while making a pretence, for use at Ottawa, that they were selling to everyone equally, as a matter of fact, the very firms that were engaged in this business, and who formed the association of plumbers' supplies, were refusing applications of persons who sought to purchase their goods because they were not members of the Plumbers' Association." And then an ingenious scheme was devised whereby through the medium of a supply Association it was thought that the scheme could be carried out without danger.

In the present case any wholesale merchant could buy exactly on the same terms as members of the association. I note on page 309, an observation of Osler J A., which applies to some of the evidence given in this case: "The prosecution, however, went very far afield, introducing evidence, which comprises the bulk of the record, of unlawful acts committed by individuals, members of old unincorporated associations, years before these defendants came into existence. This, in my opinion was absolutely wrong."

A Rage for Writing.

This remark applies very specially to the indiscretions of some individuals, notably of the late Mr. Gillard, who was badly afflicted with the cacoesthes scribendi (a rage for scribbling), and defendant, Beckett, has more than a slight attack of the same malady. In this connection I may cite the extremely fair and reasonable pronouncement of the senior counsel for the prosecution, p. 51, lines 21 to 30: "I apprehend that I am within the judgment of Your Lordship, in saying that if these arrangements, as we have them exposed in evidence now, were on the whole reasonable, satisfactory and free in the main from objectionable features, that Your Lordship would not think it fair or reasonable that these defendants should be pursued into some details of their conduct, which seem perhaps more or less objectionable, but after said and done, which are perhaps out of harmony with the general idea which they have in their mind."

And again at page 82, lines 17 to 27: "Now, My Lord, I shall only conclude, as I commenced, by saying that if Your Lordship reaches the conclusion on this evidence that the general arrangements made by these defendants, are on the whole free from objection, informed by a proper spirit, conceived with proper idea, and aimed at the accomplishment of proper results, then on the part of the Crown I should not desire to see some details of their conduct, which are objectionable, fastened upon for the purpose of finding them guilty of the charges preferred against them."

In the Mogul S. S. Co. vs. McGregor, Cow & Co., 1892, A.C., Lord Halsbury says at page 36: "There are doubtless to be found phrases in the evidence, which, taken by themselves might be supposed to mean that the associated traders were actuated by a desire to inflict malicious injury upon their rivals; but when one analyses what is the real meaning of such phrases, it is manifest that all that is intended to be implied by them is that any rival trading which shall be started against the association will be rendered unprofitable by the more favorable terms, that is to say, the reduced freights, discounts, and the like, which will be given to customers who will exclusively trade with the associated body."

And in Allen vs. Flood, 1898, A. C., p. 138: "I now proceed to consider on principle the proposition advanced by the respondents, the alleged authorities for which I have been discussing. I do not doubt that everyone has a right to pursue his trade without 'molestation' or 'obstruction,' if those terms are used to simply imply some act in itself wrongful. This is only a branch of a much wider proposition, namely, that everyone has a right to do any lawful act he pleases without molestation or obstruction. If it be intended to assert that an act not otherwise wrongful always becomes so, if it interferes with another's trade or employment, and needs to be excused or justified, I say that such a proposition in my opinion has no solid foundation in reason to rest upon."

The case of Wampole vs. Karn, 11 Q. R., 619, deals with a proprietary article, and it is a civil action. It does not appear that any criminal prosecution was founded on it. See Quinn vs. Leathem, 1901, A. C., 506: "Every judgment must be read as applicable to the particular facts proved, or assumed to be proved, since the generality of the expressions which may be found there are not intended to be expositions of the whole law, but governed and qualified by the particular facts of the case in which such expressions are to be found." And at page 512: "In Allan vs. Flood, (1) the purpose of the defendant was by the acts complained of to promote his own trade interest, which it was held he was entitled to do, although injurious to his competitors."

The case of Rex vs. Clark, 14 Can. Cr. cases 46, and, in appeal, 57, was that of an association composed of retail dealers in lumber, and they assumed to fix the price. Eligibility to membership was finally determined by the directors, not as here by the mere fact of being a wholesale dealer, and retailers who dealt directly with the consumers assumed to decree a monoply, and to fix the price at which the monoply should sell.

Protection of the Public.

In the case of the King vs. Gage, 13 Can. Cr. cases, 415, the head-note is as follows:—

1. A conspiracy 'to restrain or injure trade' in relation to any commodity under Code, Section 498, sub-sec. (b) must from the context be taken to refer to 'undue' restraints of trade, such as malicious restraints or those not justified by any personal interest for the protection of which the trade arrangement is made."

2. Traders may legally organize for the protection and advancement of their common interests, provided that the interests of the public are not to be unduly impaired.

3. A regulation of a grain buyers' association, which required that its members on purchasing wheat from producers should pay therefor not more than one cent per bushel below the export market price, and so allow a fixed profit of one cent per bushel on the trade done by members of the association on its own exchange or market, does not constitute an undue restraint of trade, if it appears that such profit is a fair and reasonable one.

It was tried by Phippen, J. A., who adopted the view taken by Killam, C. J., in Gibbons vs. Medcalf, 15 Man., L.R., 583—that sub-section (b) relates to those restraints which are not justified by any personal interests of the contracting parties, but which are mere malicious restraints unconnected with any business relations of the accused. It was held in that case that the combination which the defendants there had entered into, though resulting in damage to some person or persons, is actionable only in cases where its object is unlawful, or where, if lawful, such object is obtained by unlawful means.

In "Eddy on Combinations," volume 1, Section 556, the author says: "Every combination, whether a partnership, an association, a corporation, or a combination of these various factors, is presumed legal until the contrary is shown by affirmative evidence."

"In accordance with the views hereinbefore expressed, it is submitted that the correct doctrine is that all agreements underlying combinations are presumed valid, unless they show upon their face that the object of the agreement is to do that which is unlawful, injurious or oppressive. However, the presumption of validity which attaches to an agreement apparently legal in its terms and upon its face may be overcome by proof that, as a matter of fact, the agreement was entered into and the combination formed for unlawful, injurious or oppressive objects." In section 560 he says: "The right of a combination of dealers to advance their own interests by mutually agreeing that they would not deal with any manufacturer or wholesale dealer who should sell directly to customers has been broadly upheld." For this contention the author cites Bohn Mfg. Co. vs. Hollis et al (1893) 54 Minn. 223, 55 N.W.R., 1119.

When Lawful and Laudable.

I cite the following extracts from a judgment of Mitchell, J., in this case, page 1120:

"The case presents one phase of a subject which is likely to be one of the most important and difficult which will confront the courts during the next quarter of a century. This is the age of associations and unions, in all departments of labor and business, for purposes of mutual benefit and protection. Confined to proper limits, both as to end and means, they are not only lawful, but laudable. Carried beyond these limits, they are liable to become dangerous agencies for wrong and oppression. Beyond what limits these associations or combinations cannot go, without interfering with the legal rights of others, is the problem which, in various phases, the courts will doubtless be frequently asked to pass upon.

"There is, perhaps, danger that, influenced by such terms of illusive meaning as 'monopolies,' 'trusts,' 'strikes,' and the like, they may be led to transcend the limits of their jurisdiction, and, like the Court of King's Bench in Bagg's case, 11 Coke, 98a, assume that, on general principles, they have authority to correct or reform everything which they may deem wrong, or, as Lord Ellsmere puts it, 'to manage the state.' But whatever doubts or difficulties may arise in other cases, presenting other phases of the general subject involved here, it seems to us that there can be none on the facts of the preseut case. Both the affidavits and brief in behalf of the plaintiff indulge in a great deal of strong, and even exaggerated, assertion, and in many words and expressions of very indefinite and illusive meaning, such as 'wreck,' 'coerce,' 'extort,' 'conspiracy,' 'monopoly,' 'drive out of business,' and the like." (This sounds very like the present case).

Selling Direct to Consumer.

"This looks very formidable, but in law as well as in mathematics, it simplifies things very much to reduce them to their lowest terms. It is conceded that retail lumber yards in the various cities, towns and villages are not only a public convenience, but a public necessity; also, that, to enable the owners to maintain these yards, they must sell their lumber at a reasonable profit.

"It also goes without saying that to have manufacturers or wholesale dealers sell at retail, directly to consumers, in the territory upon which the retail dealer depends for his customers, injuriously affects and demoralizes his trade. This is so well recognized as a rule of trade, in every department, that generally wholesale dealers refrain from selling at retail within the territory from which their customers obtain their trade. Now, when reduced to its ultimate analysis, all that the retail lumber dealers, in this case, have done, is to form an association to protect themselves from sales by wholesale dealers or manufacturers, directly to consumers or other non-dealers, at points where a member of the association is engaged in the retail business.

"The means adopted to affect this object are simply these: They agree among themselves that they will not deal with any wholesale dealer or manufacturer who sells directly to customers, not dealers, at a point where a member of the association is doing business, and provide for notice being given to all their members whenever a wholesale dealer or manufacturer makes any such sale. That is the head and front of the defendants' offence."

The Fixed Price Problem.

I refer to the case of the Comonwealth v. Grimstead (1900) 108 Kentucky, 59, affirmed in appeal in 1901, 111 Ken., 203, where it was held that an agreement by one who buys goods from a manufacturer not to resell them for less than a certain price, does not violate section 3915, Kentucky statutes. The Kentucky statute in question provided that "any corporation or individual who shall become a member of, or a party to, or in any way interested in any pool, trust, combination or agreement, for the purpose of regulating the price, or limiting the production of any article of property, shall be deemed guilty," etc.

There is a decision of the Supreme Court of California sitting in banc, in the case of Grogan v. Chaffee, wherein it is held that fixed prices are not in restraint of trade.

The court sustains the manufacturer and holds that price-cutters are liable if they do not maintain prices fixed by the maker of goods.

I cite the following extracts: "The tendency of the modern decisions has been to view with greater liberality contracts claimed to be in restraint of trade. It is not every limitation on absolute freedom that is prohibited. As is held by the Supreme Court of the United States in Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co., 130, United States, 396, 409, 'Public welfare is first considered, and if it be not involved, and the restraint upon one party is not greater than protection to the other requires, the contract may be sustained. The question is whether, under the particular circumstances of the case, and the nature of the particular contract involved in it, the contract is or is not unreasonable.' So, in People's Gas Light Company v. Chicago Gas Light Co., 20 Ill., App., 492, the court says: 'The tendency of the courts is to regard contracts in partial restraint of competition with less disfavor than formerly, and the strictness of the ancient rule has been greatly modified by the modern decisions.'"

"It is suggested rather than argued by respondent that the agreement relied on by appellant is unlawful under the provisions of the statute of 1907, entitled, 'An Act to define trusts and to provide for criminal penalties and civil damages, and punishment of corporations, persons, firms and associations, or persons connected with them, and to promote free competition in commerce and all classes of business in this state; approved March 23rd, 1907, commonly known as the Cartwright Act.'

In the present case there has been no evidence of the enhancing of prices, no complaint by any consumer, no complaint by any retail dealer, but rather approbation.

Most Economical Method.

It is conceded that the proper method of distribution of goods from the manufacturer is through the wholesale dealer to the retailer and then to the consumer, because this is the most economical method. For if the manufacturer attempts to deal directly with the consumer, or even with the retailer, he must in a country like Canada, sparsely settled and of enormous area, maintain a staff of travelers and also establish depots for his goods at important points.

These are great outlets of expenditure, for the traveler carrying only one line of samples gets possibly as large a salary, and certainly spends as much in traveling expenses, as the traveler for a wholesale house who sells, we are told, three or four hundred different articles.

This is one reason why the wholesaler undertaking the sole distribution gets a larger profit, and yet the price is not enhanced to the consumer.

The various cases of alleged oppression and "driving out of trade" of persons who either openly, or by some ingenious device, aim to belong to the wholesale trade, and at the same time sell at retail, are thus easily understood. If this system were to be practised, it would injuriously affect and demoralize the trade, not only of the wholesaler, but of the retailer, and the consumer would certainly not be the better off in the long run.

The same remarks apply to the efforts made to put a stop to the "cutting" of prices.

Equalization of Rates.

There was some complaint about the system known as the "equalization of rates," it being contended that it bore unequally and oppressively as against certain towns or districts. This statement was entirely disproved, and it was shown that the "equalization" was based strictly upon the freight rates of the different railways, so that the retail merchants got their goods at the different points at practically the same prices.

The Court's Decision.

I find the facts then to be as follows:

1. The defendants have not, nor has any of them, intended to violate the law.
2. Nor have they, nor has any of them, intended maliciously to injure any persons, firms or corporations, nor to compass any restraint of trade unconnected with their own business relations.
3. They have been actuated by a bona fide desire to protect their own interests and that of the wholesale grocery trade in general.

As far as intention and good faith or the want of it are elements in the of fence with which they are charged, the evidence is entirely in their favor.

Have they then been guilty of a technical breach of law?

This question is answered by the citations which I have given above and which cover every branch of the case.

I, therefore, say that the defendants are not, nor is any of them, guilty as charged.

There are minor matters as to which I, sitting as a jury, give the defendants (as I am bound to do) the benefit of the doubt; and as to which I warn the defendants and those in like case to be careful, e.g., as to alleged efforts to coerce wholesale dealers into joining the guild.

It is of the essence of the innocence of defendants that the privileges which they seek to enjoy should be extended to all persons and corporations who are strictly wholesalers, whether they choose to join the guild or not.

To Re-enact Extra Provincial Corporations Law

Manitoba Premier Says Act Was Made in Retaliation to Other Provinces—Cabinet Would Not Consider Its Abolition — The Licensing of Travelers.

Winnipeg, March 9.—The last word has been said between the deputation from the board of trade in Winnipeg, and the provincial cabinet of Manitoba, over the extra Provincial Corporations Act, which went into effect on March 10, 1909.

It may seem that the inquiry into the matter of restriction has not been a success on the part of those more vitally interested in the Act, since the Act has been taken up again by the Legislature and will be put through the house in practically the same form as it was passed one year ago.

One change has been made in the Act namely, the words "and a copy of the last auditor's report" has been struck out of clause eight (8). That this alteration, though apparently slight, has a far-reaching effect will be seen later, but those points which at one time loomed up most grievously have either been ignored or dissolved.

The Government's Attitude.

The cabinet were extremely courteous to the deputation and listened duly to all the objectionable features brought to their attention. The premier at the outset explained the situation from his standpoint and this did much to clear the atmosphere. It became evident that the whole Act was compiled as a retaliation to other provinces which had instituted similar legislation. He said that in no wise would the cabinet consider the abolition of the Act, since the reputation of the province was at stake. Manufacturers and corporations in Manitoba were not allowed such privileges in other provinces as companies in other provinces have been allowed heretofore in Manitoba. The government, therefore, must retaliate to equalize the justice of the Dominion as represented by action of the other provinces. Every loyal citizen of this province could be appealed to on these grounds, and may be some citizen who might suffer by the operation of the Act would be willing to sacrifice to maintain the integrity of the province in which he lives.

The premier stated further that although the Act could not be nullified, yet such grievances as the deputation could point out would be fairly dealt with, point by point, in the hope that in some degree certain discriminations might be eliminated. This was done with the result that a clause was struck out of the formalities as stated above.

Effect of Change Proposed.

The dismissal of the obligation of the extra-provincial corporations to submit the last auditor's report has the effect of leaving room for the company to place its capitalization at any figure it chooses with the option on the part of the government of inquiring into the accuracy of the statement. It is obvious that this clears the situation somewhat since the rigorous basis upon which the fees were levied was perhaps the most outstanding grievance against the Act.

Already it has been known that an Eastern Canada corporation has paid the tax on a capitalization much less than it is reputed to possess. Should the company be assured that it is proof against all approaches of the government in connection with the production of a fraudulent capitalization figure, then the company has no cause to murmur against the Act on this point. If, however, another point of law could allow the government to inquire into the exact capitalized standing of the company and fraud could be deduced, then the company is not any more exempt than before the clause was erased. Nevertheless under the present circumstances they feel more secure.

Upon examination of the Act it was pointed out that the Act distinctly reads: "The Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may reduce the fee payable for its license to such sum as he may think just, having regard to the nature and importance of its business in Manitoba." (Sec. 21). This simply means that there is no rigidity in the levy to be imposed, but at the same time such understanding may not be entirely satisfactory to the corporation against which the Act operates, since the matter is one over which the corporation has no control other than drawing the attention of the Lieutenant-Governor to the matter.

It must be admitted that the crude understanding of the Act gave rise to some unwarranted agitation. For instance many were under the impression that the fee was annual, and even the solicitor did not make it clear that the tax was only an introductory fee of corporation within the province.

No Tax on Travelers.

The brokers and extra-provincial corporation representatives resident within the province still maintain, and justly so, that they are unfairly discriminated against in favor of travelers. Their principals have the same cause of complaint. This is an outstanding weakness of the Act and apparently without remedy. An Act respecting the licensing of travelers in the various provinces was introduced in the Dominion House some years ago, but it was dismissed on the advice of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who thought it wiser for the Dominion Government to grant the provinces sums of money rather than have the individual provinces tax the travelers or the firms they represent. It would seem that the brokers have the same cause for elimination as the travelers, and an appeal to the Dominion Government might have the tendency to make some radical changes in the extra-provincial corporations act.

During the time between the verbal agreement that the government would not penalize any agent or company, and the meeting of the cabinet and deputation for the last time, many companies have paid the required license fee according to their interpretation of the Act, and no penalties have been meted out.

It must be said in conclusion that the inquiry has been justified in that it has greatly cleared the situation, and that one change more or less radical was made, and although all grievances have not been swept away the whole question resolves itself into whether the province as a whole should maintain its integrity among the other provinces in the dominion, to the sacrifice of localized individual rights.

TROUBLES OF PRICE-CUTTING.

Grocers in British Columbia Have Worries Over This Problem.

Vancouver, B.C., March 8.—Retail grocers here, who belong to the Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association, are facing the problem of others not in the organization offering staple articles at cut prices as catches for the new customer.

Such things as flour, which is sold with the understanding that the retail price is fixed at so much, is cut say from $1.90 to $1.75. This would be about cost price, and to the consumer looks as if the ordinary dealer is trying to squeeze out an exorbitant profit. The dealer who cuts, realizes that anything lost on the one article may be made up if a customer is gained, and the loss of profit is practically, or may be charged up to the advertising account.

There is talk of combine prices, but those who know jobbing prices and retail figures in Vancouver are aware that little out of the ordinary is gained by the retailer in profit. He has to sell very close or there is a loud complaint from his customers, who are already feeling the upward trend of prices. It is not the retailer who profits, but the bigger houses, for the retailer has to have the goods, and he is the man who has to shave his prices.

A. P. Tippet, Montreal, has returned from a two months' tour of Europe.

S. G. Caldwell, Barrie, Ont., recently purchased the grocery business of E. J. Armson.

The grocery and crockery business of the Coxall Co., Tamworth, Ont., has been purchased by Reuben Richardson.

Armand Chaput, of Chaput, Fils & Cie., Montreal, is in New York, on a holiday trip. Mrs. Chaput and his sister-in-law accompany him.

The incorporation of the Maritime Fish Corporation has been officially announced with a capital of $1,000,000; head office of the company to be in Montreal.

CO-OPERATIVE BILL KILLED.

It will be welcome news to merchants in all portions of Canada to learn that the Harris-Monk Co-operative Bill is again a dead letter.

Just at the time of going to press The Canadian Grocer received a despatch from Ottawa stating that the bill came up in committee and that it had been killed.

It did not even get as far as the Senate where it was blocked by a single vote on the last occasion it was introduced.

Merchants who actively opposed the Bill with this paper, will now realize that their labors to prevent the granting of special privileges to a few have not been without fruit. The circumstances connected with the opposition also indicate what can be done by means of organized effort and a good, strong campaign to secure the rights of the trade.

The death-knell of the bill has, therefore once again been sounded and it is not likely that another member of our Dominion government will be foolish enough—at least for some time to come—to bring in such another piece of unfair legislation.

FROM WHOLESALER TO CONSUMER.

The wholesalers and retailers of British Columbia are working along correct lines when they meet together to clear away differences in respect to the wholesale trade selling to the consuming public.

An item to this effect appears elsewhere in this issue, showing the questions at issue and the unfairness of wholesalers selling to consumers at wholesale prices, and at the same time holding the retail trade down to strict terms in making payments, etc.

The retailers in the western province have certainly a good grievance. It is not fair to them that they should act as the special medium between wholesaler and consumer only when the wholesaler does not have an opportunity to sell direct himself to the consumer. The retailer handles his goods for him and has a right to obtain all his business.

But the point is: no permanent arrangements can be made to right this wrong unless the question is jointly discussed by retailers and wholesalers such as was done in the case of the British Columbia merchants.

True co-operation is needed, and the sooner it comes the better will it be for all concerned. It will assist in a better understanding of trade questions and tend to improve existing conditions at a more rapid rate than they are improving at present.

GERMAN AND BRITISH METHODS.

Canadians are experiencing just now a marked difference between British and German methods of extending business. When in 1897 Canada reduced the duties on British goods 25 p.c., but few British exporters were interested. A year later the reduction was made 33 1-3 p.c. without creating any apparent additional interest. Of course there were a number of exceptions and many bright representatives came to Canada, but they represented a very small percentage of the British firms who could have done business with Canada. Canadian agents and brokers were somewhat more enterprising and many of them visited leading manufacturers in England, soliciting representation in Canada, but as a rule they got a discouraging reception.

On February 15th the Canadian surtax on German goods was removed, but British exporters still have an advantage of 33 1-3 p.c. over the Germans. Yet Canadian manufacturers and merchants have had a greater number of visits from salesmen of German firms since then than we see from Britain in the course of six months. Their methods, too, are entirely different from the British. They are ready to meet Canadian wishes in any respect, and already a number of orders have been placed, and indications are that Germans will do an enormous trade in this country. It has been argued that German goods are not as high class as British. This was true a few years ago but leading German firms are now getting into the same class with the best British manufacturers in the quality of their goods. Canadians should study these German missionaries, their goods and their methods and adopt them wherever it is to their advantage to do so, for Germany is to-day the most progressive nation in the world.

Canadians for sentimental reasons would rather do business with British manufacturers, but the latter must bestir themselves if they expect to hold this market and possibly their own market.

Canadians would rather place their orders with British manufacturers, but the latter, as a class, must adopt better factory and selling methods for, even with the advantage of sentiment and preference, these Germans will take the market from them. Where British firms have modernized their methods they are doing and will continue to do a profitable trade here without fear of German or United States competition.

The great question is, will British manufacturers as a whole do so? The invariable answer of the majority is that they are quite satisfied with the business they are doing, and they point out that in spite of all competition they have been holding their own or increasing. With the great increase in the world's consumption, this is to be expected, but Britain's exports have not increased in the same ratio as other competing countries. It is natural too for old established firms to hold their trade for many years because of their reputation and connections, but the turn invariably comes, and when it does the decline is very rapid.

INTEREST ON CAPITAL INVESTED.

A subscriber writes stating that there are two partners in his firm, one of whom invested $3,000 and the other $2,000. He replies to The Canadian Grocer's statement that interest should be charged on capital invested in a business and asks: "Will there be any deduction or addition to present capital or should interest figure only on the expense account?"

Assuming that each partner gave equal service to the business each is entitled to the same salary. But the amounts invested were not equal, so after salary, rent, and other costs are figured and the year's profits arrived at interest on capital must be deducted. Suppose the profits were $5,000 and interest was figured at six per cent., $300 would have to be deducted for interest, $180 of this going to the partner who had invested $3,000 and $120 to the one whose investment had been but $2,000. This interest would figure only in the expense account and would not affect the capital investment.

ADVANTAGES OF A PLATFORM.

Merchants who belong to trade organizations, and who are interested in association work should always have a policy to advance and stand by before each meeting.

There can be no benefit in attending meetings at which no question is before the members for discussion, and it's the man with the policy thought carefully out in every detail who wins in the debate.

Of course, there will always be some weak points in the argument, but it will be up to the others to establish something better. Many men can pull apart a platform, but when it comes to building another they fail. They are destructive, but not constructive.

If a better policy cannot be advanced, that which has been thought out by the man with forethought stands the blasts of the campaign successfully. His is sure to be a winner.

The benefits to a member of an organization who pursues such a course are many. He gets to the bottom of the question aided by the criticisms of his colleagues. He becomes enthused with his subject, since he has to go into it deeply to obtain arguments to offset any adverse criticism that might occur.

Gradually he becomes a debater to be reckoned with and an influence upon the organization of which he is a part. His views are eagerly sought on every question that arises, and in time outsiders begin to realize his sound sense—and all because he was a constructor in his association and because he developed to a great degree his argumentative ability.

With such men as this in an organization, it is bound to be successful, and to become a power in the trade. Men with good sound policies are needed—policies that will stand criticism. It is no use going to a meeting unless you are prepared to intelligently set before your colleagues a proposition that is going to be of value to the association.

A question that is incidentally advanced at a meeting can only meet with a superficial treatment in debate.

It requires the application of good sound common sense at a time when there is plenty of time to get right down to the substance of the thing.

THE ADVANCING HOG MARKET.

If hogs go much higher they will soon be as expensive as broilers—and they show little inclination to take much of a tumble.

While prices in Canada are somewhat behind some United States sections yet they are higher than they have been for years.

For instance they are now quoted around $9 and $9.15 per cwt., live weight in Montreal, Winnipeg and Toronto and difficult to obtain at those prices.

Reports from Cincinnati, O., are to the effect that hogs went over the $10 mark the other day. Some paid $10.05—the highest since the civil war. In St. Louis they are up to $10, while in Pittsburg they have been up to $10.15. Other United States markets are equally strong.

The wonder is, at where are they going to stop? Dressed hogs a year ago about this time were $10.25; in 1908, they were only $7 and in 1904 only $6.20—much less during the last two mentioned than hogs, live weight, are now.

A year ago at this time hogs were quoted on the Canadian markets between $6.50 and $7. They were about the same in 1908 and therefore were more than $2 less than they are to-day.

If the hogs are not to be obtained they will eventually go so high that the finished food product will be beyond the reach of the ordinary consumer.

This will have a serious effect on the industry. It will tend to divert the attention of the consumer to something else that is within easier reach of his finances and to have a demoralizing effect upon the industry when there are signs of its revival among the farming communities.

THE ALUM QUESTION.

A very important question among houses engaged in the manufacture of baking powder at present is that relating to alum. To use it or not to use it, that is the question. In view of the fact that the question of pure food laws is a live topic at the present time, and also the fact that the use of alum in food is prohibited by law in Great Britain, makes it look as if it would only be a question of a short time when the sale of alum baking powders in Canada will be prohibited.

There seems to be a popular prejudice against the use of alum in baking powder or anything that enters into our food.

ELEMENTS NECESSARY TO SUCCESS.

A very important factor in the success of the traveling salesman in his own special work, as well as in the advancement of his employer's interest, are his relations with the trade which he visits.

As a matter of fact, the position he occupies is not a single-headed, but a three-fold one. Employed first of all to extend the acquantance and the business of the house, he is expected also to see that buyers settle their accounts as provided by contract or agreement. Beyond that he is looked to for the adjustment of any difference that may come up, from whatever cause or source.

The requirements are those of a good salesman, a fair accountant and something also of a diplomat. To successfully carry these responsibilities one must be a thorough gentleman. He will find it worth while to keep himself informed on the topics of the day, and particularly on the progress of events in his own trade. Ready at all times to give an opinion if asked for it, he must not force his ideas upon those who are not interested in what he thinks or has to say. It is essential that he will appear well when calling upon his trade so that, no matter what sort of company he is with, he will feel perfectly at ease. Shabbiness is always self-conscious of being out of place.

So far as possible, one should aim to make friends of his customers and encourage them in the same way towards himself. Genial at all times and in all places, he will never indulge in undue familiarity. Remembering that other calls are likely to follow, one should make no promises that can not be fulfilled to the letter. By this means confidence is established and plain statements come to be taken at their face value. Not only is the dealer glad to see such salesmen, but the latter finds his way smoothed with others, and his reputation as a man who can always be depended upon to do the right thing extended where it will do the most good.

WHERE PERSONALITY STANDS

It is interesting to calculate how far personality really influences the fortunes of business. Is the personal element in business gradually being squeezed out by the mechanical? Any merchant within fifty miles of a metropolis is acutely sensible of the competitive pressure exerted against him by large distributors, whose methods operate with the precision of some cleverly constructed machine.

Personality, as he understands the term, has little if anything to do with the reasons why some of his neighbors buy from the big stores instead of from him. The public has no intimate knowledge of the proprietors of these stores; it is apparently satisfied if its orders are filled with promptitude and accuracy.

Can the local man, by the dextrous exercise of his own personality, defend and extend his trade in face of the opposition from without? That is a question well worth studying. Of course, personality devises and permeates the methods of the mammoth stores.

There are surprising possibilities in the power of the personal element in business, if we strive to discover them, and the return should be repayment for the trouble.

Articles Which Go Well Together in Displays

What Easter Suggests in the W ay of Windows—Care Should be Taken Not to Have Too Man y Varieties of Goods.

Every merchant recognizes that there is at least some benefit to him in dressing a window. If he does not, why does he ever place an article in his window or why does he have a window-sill at all where goods can be kept ?

Therefore from the fact that the window is there and that there are always some goods in it, it is an established fact that every merchant recognizes its value.

The question then is : How to give to the window its best selling properties ?

Easter is near at hand and it is a festive season. Here is one opportunity to make it a valuable asset. Easter is a time when everybody thinks of the table and the good things to be had after the closing of Lent, and preparations for appropriate displays should be made as early as possible.

The illustration shown here represents an appetizing scene. Eggs, bacon, lard, ham, pickles, cheese, etc., are suggestive of the Easter season, but the question is are they displayed to the best advantage ? Is the window a good selling one ? That's what counts.

While it is attractive and appropriate it cannot be said that it is dressed to make the most sales possible. The trouble seems to be that there are too many varieties of goods in it. Had ham and eggs been exclusively used with the same amount of attractiveness its selling power might have been better. The gaze would then have been concentrated on those two articles closely associated with each other.

Such a display could have been used a couple of days in the week and changed for say lard and pastry flour; biscuits and cheese or ham and pickles.

The presence of a few Easter lilies lends beauty to the window and are also suggestive of the season.

Easter Window Dressed by Ralph McKenny, Port Hope, Ont.

Good capital can certainly be made out of the coming festive season and grocers should seize the opportunity to obtain their share of new business which the holidays are bound to create.

By all means introduce a few decorative display cards and one or two price tickets — they are in themselves good salesmen.

SELLING TO CONSUMER EVIL.

Vancouver, B.C., March 9.—At a recent meeting of wholesalers and retailers, three important trade question were discussed, namely, wholesalers selling goods to consumers; wholesalers selling to small camps and boats, and wholesalers supplying goods to employes at cost, who in turn were supplying goods to relations and friends.

Among those present or represented at the meeting were W. H. Malkin Co.; Kelly, Douglas & Co.; Hudson's Bay Co.; W. J. McMillan & Co.; Leeson, Dickie, Grosse & Co.; Oscar Brown Co.; Campbell & Muir; F. R. Stewart & Co.; C. B. Bainsford, J. Goddard, M. Oppenheimer, D. Naismith, C. Milne and the directors of the Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association.

It has been no trouble for consumers in most instances to buy direct from wholesalers, which the retailers declare is unfair, and dicussion was along this line. Moreover, goods are supplied in large quantities and at wholesale prices, to, say, managers of companies who might have some business, and these are delivered direct to the private houses.

Complaint has been made that retailers, who are held down to tight prices and prompt payments, are not given a fair show, since at least one-quarter of the trade is supplied by wholesalers which is in the sphere of the retailer.

These and other points were discussed, after being presented by W. Clark, president of the Retail Grocers' Association, and the chairman remarked that he was sure that any wholesaler who had been selling to the consumer in the past would cease from this time forward. Further, he thought a clear arrangement should exist between wholesalers and retailers, as to what camps and boats were in the respective fields. It was decided that forthwith no more goods should be sold to employes.

What the retailer now wants is these conditions lived up to, for although they have been understood in the past, little attention has been paid to them.

"That clerk of yours seems to be a hard worker."

"Yes, that's his specialty."

"What, working?"

"No; seeming to!"

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

What Halifax Grocer Considers to be Unfair Methods in Doing Business—An Exclusive Tea, Coffee and Chinaware Store—Disadvantages of Over-stocking—Catering to Saturday Night Street Walkers Through Window Displays—Are Newspaper Advertisements Read?

Unfairness in the Trade.

Halifax, N.S., March 9.—"There can be no permanent benefit to any man in any undertaking unless that undertaking is fair to all parties concerned."

This was a statement made by a merchant the other day, and it implies some good advice.

He maintained that if a manufacturer in selling goods to the wholesale trade gave one distributor an advantage over another he was doing something which was unfair and which could have no permanent advantages.

Also if a jobber in selling goods to the retail trade gave to one merchant an advantage that his "across-the-street" competitor did not receive, he claimed that that jobber was not acting squarely. The undertaking was not fair to all concerned and therefore he claimed there could be no permanent trade benefits in it, considering the trade as a whole.

Such a transaction gave to one person a preference a competitor did not receive, thus giving to the one selling advantages over the other. It meant loss of trade to the retailer who did not get the preference because he could not sell the article and make a fair profit.

The tendency was for him to eliminate that article from his selling list and substitute another. That meant loss to the jobber, he claimed, and therefore to the manufacturer.

A Tea and Coffee Store.

Windsor, Ont., March 9.—The retail tea and coffee stores, though not numerous, bear evidence of the importance to the grocery trade of these staple beverages. Some one has yet to start a retail sugar store, or cereal store, or canned goods store. C. T. Bourbeau has a tea and coffee and spice store in Windsor. Mr. Bourbeau carries also a fine stock of crockery, glassware and fancy china. The decorations include oriental umbreallas, fans and lanterns.

Mr. Bourbeau calls his place the Central Tea Store. It is located on the market square. He began his career as a tea and coffee merchant six years ago in a small way utilizing a room in his house. Later he built an extension and about a year ago moved into the present premises which are 25 feet by 45 feet. Before starting for himself Mr. Bourbeau was clerk for a number of years with Geo. Nairn, Windsor, and had charge of the tea and coffee department.

The Central Tea Store is modernly equipped, with silent salesmen, computing scales, and cash registers. The tea and coffee bins are of Mr. Bourbeau's own design. He has installed an electric coffee grinder, and he has taken special care to have his store brilliantly lighted at night. Mr. Bourbeau has two clerks and two delivery wagons. At the start he adopted the policy of giving good value and prompt delivery and he attributes his success to having lived up to it.

The Evils of Over-stocking.

Victoria, B.C., March 8.—"There are too many retailers to-day," claims a local merchant, "suffering from too large a stock.

"A large stock," he says, "is all right, of course, if the trade demands it; but as a general principle it is poor policy to overstock, even if prices seem particularly attractive. It is an easy matter for a dealer to allow a smooth salesman to overload him, and no matter if the dealer really knows that his trade will not warrant it, he finds it hard to resist the argument of price, when he should know better.

"The quick turning of stock, even at only a fair net profit, is one of the great requirements in the retail business. Figure it out. Take, for example, $10,000 invested in stock, turned over once a year with a net profit of 25 per cent—that means $2,500. One-fourth that amount, or $2,500, turned four times a year at a net profit of only 20 per cent., would yield a profit of $2,000, or four-fifths the amount returned by a capital four times as large, while interest at six per cent. on the difference in capital invested would bring the difference in the net returns very close together, the volume of business remaining the same.

"Then, the tying up of so much capital as is frequently invested in what is virtually dead stock often prevents a man from doing that which would add materially to his profits.

"Another advantage in favor of the smaller and better selected stock, to my mind, is the smaller space required and consequently smaller rental, less insurance premiums and smaller taxes, and a proportionately smaller risk all around. It requires a thorough knowledge of local business conditions, excellent judgment of goods and of the trade, a determination not to allow the salesman to unload on one a lot of unsalable stock, or too much of stock that would be salable if given time enough.

"In other words, it requires a man who knows his business throughly and who has the backbone to stand by what he knows to be his own best interests."

Caters to Saturday Night Wayfarers.

Lindsay, Ont., March 10.—The advantage of catering to the Saturday night buyers was illustrated by a Kent St. grocer the other day. In Lindsay the working men, their wives and children, and also men and women of other occupations, who are lucky enough to cease work at the hours of five and six on Saturday's, number in the hundreds. The one popular pastime in the evening is to take a walk down town and perhaps do some shopping. Saturday night is the busiest of times for the grocer. One grocer in particular every Saturday makes it a point to dress up a new window with something special which he wishes to dispose of and something which he thinks will catch the eye. In this way he has made many large sales of some particular line of groceries on a Saturday evening.

Do People Read the Papers?

Chatham, March 10.—"Do people read the advertisements?" echoed a grocer the other day, in response to a query. "Just let me give you an instance.

"We have been regular advertisers for many years. Some time ago, we advertised a certain line of goods as a Saturday feature, and one of the items was cooked ham. The price should have been 30c a pound or thereabouts, but inadvertently we put it in at 25c.

"You should have seen the rush. Our entire stock of cooked ham, and it was a pretty large one, was cleaned out long before 12 o'clock on Saturday, and all afternoon and evening we had people clamoring for cooked ham at 25c. The mistake was ours, and of course we made good, though it involved a dead loss; but it was really worth the money to see that stream of customers.

"Before that, I used to have my doubts as to the efficiency of advertising, but after the ham episode I didn't want any more convincing.

"It showed that our advertisements were being read—how, otherwise, could the people know? It proved that the efficiency of advertising depended solely upon the skill of the advertiser; and that, as long as I wrote the kind of advertising that appealed to buyers, the newspaper would do its part in placing my propositions where they would be read. Now, if a certain advertisement does not seem to bring results, I proceed to pick flaws in my own wprk as an ad. writer instead of wasting time worrying whether or not the paper is doing its part."

Watching the Slow Pays.

Berlin, Ont., March 9.—A change will be made in the collection department of the Berlin Retail Merchants' Association, with a view to having the best results possible. The Guelph Association has placed their collection department in the hands of the Canadian Mercantile Agency, and on the invitation of President Hessenaur, of the Berlin Association, Mr. Vanderburg, their representative came down and addressed the members at their regular monthly meeting on the advantages of the system. After his address, a committee was appointed to investigate thoroughly into all details of the system, and report at the next meeting on April 12, which is also the annual meeting. The members were confident that the present system would be much improved if there was an officer placed in charge.

New Tariffs on Canadian Exports to Germany

Recent Adjustment Which Went Into Effect March 1st Places Our Goods Going to Germany on Conventional Tariff Basis—Schedule Showing Reductions That Have Been Made.

The rearrangement of the tariffs between Germany and Canada can be best exemplified by giving in detail how our exports are affected and by how much the duty has been lowered.

The agreement took place on March 1st and, broadly speaking, removed the Canadian surtax to allow German goods to be admitted into Canada on the General Tariff basis, while Canadian goods going to Germany will be admitted into that country on what is known as the Conventional Tariff rate of duty.

A kilogram mentioned in the accompanying table is equal to about 2.203 lbs. and a mark is equal to 23.8 cents. This schedule shows the Canadian foodstuffs which will now be admitted into Germany at Conventional Tariff rates, the unit of quantity on which the tariff is based, and the general and conventional tariffs.

DEATH OF W. H. SEYLER.

Former Advertising Manager of The Canadian Grocer—The Passing of a "Good Fellow."

The Canadian Grocer regrets to annouce the death of its former advertising manager, W. H. Seyler. His death took place on Tuesday, the 8th inst., at Victoria Memorial Hospital, Toronto. Mr. Seyler had been unwell for nearly a year. His illness began in May of last year with an attack of pleurisy, and although he spent some five months away from the office he never fully recovered. Nerve and kidney trouble was the immediate cause of his death.

The late Mr. Seyler was one of the best known men in the grocery trade. He was with Eby, Blain Ltd. for eleven years, part of which time he was manager of the sample room. Subsequent to this he was for a short time in business for himself as a broker. He was with the F. F. Dally Co. as traveler for a year or two and later still with the E. W. Gillett Co. He came with the MacLean Publishing Co. in 1903, representing The Canadian Grocer in Montreal, and becoming advertising manager about three years ago. His association with The Canadian Grocer has really extended almost from the time of its inception, for while he was not directly employed on its staff until 1903, for years he was a frequent contributor to its columns.

W. H. SEYLER,
Former Advertising Manager of The Canadian Grocer, Whose Death Occurred on Tuesday.

He was a whole-souled fellow, warm hearted and with a kindly greeting for everybody. This was the secret of his popularity, and in his death there are many in the grocery trade—retailers, wholesalers, and travelers—who will mourn the loss of a friend.

None will miss him more than the publishers of The Canadian Grocer. He was a valued counselor and an enthusiastic and hard worker, and the publishers lose a warm friend as well as a faithful employe.

His remains were interred in Waterloo, Ont., yesterday, the 10th inst.

MAKING A STARCH WINDOW.

Grocer Finds That Special Displays Sell The Goods.

Jas. Vair, an Orillia, Ont., merchant, recently got in a large shipment of starch. He made a window display of starch only, and in describing it says:

"Having received a large shipment of starch amounting to over 1,000 pounds, we thounght it best to make a good display, so we displayed it in our front window.

"By filling in the centre of the window with loose starch, then placing the package starch all round and building up pyramids of packages for a background, we found it showed off all the different kinds of starch to perfection.

"We always find that these special displays sell a lot of goods."

AMENDMENTS TO BREAD ACT.

The new bread bill that has occupied so much time in the committee of the Ontario Legislature goes into effect on July 1st. It provides for every baker equipping his bread wagons with scales to weigh the bread. One other important amendment was made making it imperative upon villages and towns to appoint inspectors. The clause providing for a fine of $5 in the case of any person who makes for sale or sells bread in contravention of the provisions of the act was passed without comment. The clauses providing for a fine of $25 against any person who uses or keeps any adulterant or deleterious material which may be used in the manufacture of bread were also passed.

The weighing of bread at the point of sale instead of at the factory was another amendment that passed.

TRADE NOTES.

Solomon Allen, of the Norwich Cider & Vinegar Works, died in a Toronto hospital on March 8th. He was 64 years of age.

W. H. Todd has opened a new grocery at 1052 Queen St. West, Toronto, with everything entirely new. It has a good appearance. It is attractive in many ways and the goods are of superior quality.

I have always believed that people are satisfied with what they get only just as long as they do not know there is something better to be had—I always stand for quality and it has always been my aim to improve on everything that could be improved upon.—C. H. Bolster, manager of the foreign and fancy grocery department of Sprague, Warner & Co., Chicago.

The Markets—Has Sugar Reached its Climax Yet?

Demand Has Been Heavy Recently—Some Think It Will Again Advance While Others are Doubtful in View of so Many Orders Being Filled Recently—Firm Market in Nuts.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—
Sugar—Advance probable.
White Pepper—Firm.
Valencia Raisins—Low stocks.

Montreal, March 10, 1910.

Sugar is interesting at present, and appears likely to advance again, unless something unforeseen happens. Demand has been much above average for this season of the year. Ceylon teas continue strong, with Indians following them. Spices, especially white pepper, are firm. Valancia raisins are running low in supply. Figs are in good demand. Castile soaps are reported as sure to advance, owing to the continued high figures asked for oils. Candied peels are also likely to cost more on account of the scarcity of peels and the advances in sugar. Grenoble walnuts are up again.

Trade is good in the city, but rather slack in the country, owing to bad roads. Collections are satisfactory.

Sugar — Considerable strength continues to be displayed in sugar, and a remarkable demand for this season is felt by most wholesalers. The situation appears to be one that will hold for some little time, owing to numerous circumstances which will contribute toward the maintenance of prices—unless the refiners, holding the key to the situation—care to make reductions. There appears to be no reasons to suppose they will. Consumption of sugar during the past few weeks has been surprising, and considerably in excess of anticipations. Refiners, in making their purchases for the close season of navigation, estimated a certain demand, but their figures were too small, and in consequence their supply of cane is running dangerously low, while there is no cessation to the demand. Reports from the West Indies are firm in their nature, advising the taking up of all sugar offering. Beets in Europe are scarce and the markets are strong. Viewing the situation, and considering that several wholesalers have been displaying more interest in refiners' offerings, some rather large sales for the season are reported. With the price over the $5 mark, and supplies of cane likely to be rather short, it would not be surprising to see further advance, especially in view of the fact that there can be little competition from Scotch sugars until the opening of navigation, as holdings of same apparently are not too large.

Tea—Ceylon teas continue to be firm, both black and greens being held for a price by those who are fortunate in having supplies. Indians are more reasonable, but follow Ceylons, as much as usual. Japans are unchanged since last week. Wholesalers report demand for teas generally to be very good, but in almost every instance buyers are taking only small lots.

Coffee—Lower grades of Santos are quite firm, the lack of receipts from Brazil, owing to the operation of the valorization scheme, adding strength to the situation. The quickness with which recent lots were disposed of in large markets, at good prices, illustrates the truth of the statement that holdings in the trade are limited. Reports of a short crop in Sumatra have reflected strength to the market generally, too.

Dried Fruits—Stocks of Valencia raisins are running low, reports from Denia also advising small holdings. Demand is fairly good. Californian fruits, speaking generally, are firm, as holdings of reliable grades of raisins are in few hands, and prunes are steady. Demand for California seeded raisins is slack, say the jobbers. Demand for figs is noticeably good, with stocks small. Currants are quiet. Patras reports state that the market for currants there is steady, and recently more active. The bulk of stock remaining is said to be of inferior quality.

Nuts—Grenoble walnuts are firmer this week, another advance having been recorded. Watt, Scott & Goodacre, in their report of March 2, say, regarding walnuts: "Goods in shell corralled for shelling purposes. Orders placed for storage in ice houss have been much smaller than usual, and for September shipment nil. Next fall there will be a famine in Canada with shelled walnuts bringing whatever 'the traffic will stand'." Shelled almonds are easier. Peanuts are firm, with stock, especially of higher grades, low.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—Good demand for canned vegetables is reported again this week, sales being made of almost all lines, with tomatoes, peas and corn leading in volume. Canned fruits are in fair request. More activity than usual is noticed in canned salmon, due to the added strength of this market. Other canned fish is moving out in usual quantity. Pork and beans is the line which commands most attention in canned meats, but a fair trade is being transacted in other staples.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—

Sugar—Raws very strong.
Tapioca—Advance of ½c.
Evaporated Apples—Weak market.

Toronto, March 10, 1910.

The wholesale trade is active, with almost everything either looking or actually moving upwards.

Sugar is still very strong, but on account of recent heavy purchases has somewhat quieted, but the prices of raw sugar would still warrant higher prices than are obtained now.

Canned goods are in better demand. Dried fruits are slow, except prunes, which are in fairly good demand. Trade on the whole is satisfactory.

Sugar—The sugar market is still excited and although no change has taken place in refined since last week, the raw sugar situation still warrants prices higher than are obtained at the present time. Some dealers look for another advance, but others conclude that owing to the extraordinary heavy transactions, a lull will follow.

POINTS—

Advance — Sugar, canned tomatoes, walnuts.

Weaker—Beans, evaporated apples.

Stronger—Prunes, sago.

Winnipeg, March 10, 1910.

The wholesale output is not remarkably large this week, but the special ordering has been particularly a feature of the business. Merchants everywhere are indulging in a wider range of goods than formerly, and are more careful in the quantity of any one line stocked. This is a result of manufacturers advertising their lines, and as literature is more and more finding its way in the remote parts, the public becomes acquainted with a more comprehensive range of goods, and the merchant is the source through which they are received. However, staples are moving well, and as the spring approaches the ordering will bulk up more. Grocers are buying strongly in the advancing lines, such as sugar and prunes.

It will be interesting to watch the markets on many lines in the coming weeks, as some declines are inevitable. It is believed that beans will be down as soon as the large stock in the east is let loose.

Merchants have been particularly fortunate in having no trouble thus far with transportation, and facilities of shipment are improving.

Sugar—It is confidently expected by some here that sugar will reach the $6 mark before it abates. An advance of 10 cents occurred last week, and another boost of 10 cents on the N.Y. market is the latest report. That the Canadian market will be $5.70 within a few days, is believed by many. Merchants generally expect a higher price and are stocking well in anticipation of this result.

Foreign Dried Fruits—All lines are moving well and there is no change in prices this week. Prunes form the most interesting feature in the list, since stocks are low and supplies at other points are almost exhausted. That they are to have a stronger market is inevitable, particularly the better grades. Dried apricots have a good market and stocks are quite plentiful.

Honey — At the recent bee-keepers' convention, held in this city, definite steps were taken to materially increase the production in this province. In years to come, the eastern producers will likely have such competition in the west, as will make the market features more interesting than at present. The matter of marketing the product is to occupy the attention of the western associations.

Beans—The future of the bean market is uncertain. It has been thought that supplies were scarce until recently, when it became known that producers were holding stocks in expectation of higher prices. Local wholesalers claim that the scheme of holding stocks is played out and no higher prices will be paid. The following prices hold to-day.

Nuts—Shelled walnuts are up 1 cent, and reports are to the effect that further advances are probable. Wholesalers are ordering freely now, as in the summer season. Walnuts cannot be shipped. Almonds and peanuts are unchanged, but with a good market.

Evaporated Apples—Practically two prices prevail this week, resulting from two grades of goods on the market. Some stuff is selling as low as 7¾ cents. The No. 1 goods, however, are moving at about 10 cents, and as soon as the inferior lines are exhausted the market is likely to advance.

The grocery business is fairly brisk for the season of the year. Prices in all lines are firm and in some lines they have a tendency to go even higher. Among the staples that have been making strong advances this season are onions which are now very high owing to the short crop. The Spanish onions which are imported from Liverpool, and which cost ordinarily from 1½ to 2 cents per pound are now quoted at about equal to 3½ to 3¾ cents delivered here duty paid. The demand in the United States is said to be heavy and the crop is light and late. Liverpool which is the great exporting onion port of England is now importing onions from the United States.

The steady reduction in the price of eggs is the feature, in fact, about the only change in the markets here. Locals are fairly plentiful and retail at 45c. With the big demand for good eggs in this city, chicken raisers have their regular line of customers to whom are delivered eggs at least not more than a week old, and often every day or two. These people generally pay 5c more than the retail price. Californias are strong at 34c, while there is no change in eastern.

[Correction by Wire.]—Sugar market advanced to $5.80. Eastern butter strong at 30c, and may advance to 31c; Manitoba cheese at 14c.

Sugar is again the most interesting commodity in the grocery markets. Last week there were two advances in the quotations and the price now is $5.30 for granulated. Since the first of the year there has been an advance of forty-five cents per hundredweight. There has been a reduction in the price of eggs and butter, but other country products are high. In the fruit market, bananas are quoted 25 cents higher. Present quotations are:

Golden Rule Displaces Old Time "Do or be Done"

Present Trend of Trade Conditions More Edifying Than Past —Value of Co-operation of Retailers Discussed — The Influence Organizations Have on Governments in Passing Legislation.

Kingston, Ont., March 10.—The value of merchants assembling to talk over trade conditions was well exemplified at a smoker held here on Friday night last. Nearly 100 business men were in attendance.

David G. Laidlaw, one of the speakers, was delighted at the change in spirit already manifest among the business men. In other days, when a Smoker was planned, it was expected that about twenty-five would attend. This occasion brought out one hundred business men. All over the United States and Canada retail men s associations were meeting to discuss problems peculiar to their class, and seeking a solution through organized effort. The retail men were done with sitting down before their troubles, disheartened and discouraged. Twenty-five years ago it was the business maxim. "Do or be done." Now the golden rule obtained in business affairs more than ever before, and people had grown to appreciate the change. With right-thinking people it was a great sign for a better commercial world.

"People to-day are getting into the habit of thinking more of their fellowmen," said Mr. Laidlaw. "Who does not remember a few years ago, when life was made a burden and a drudgery for the merchant because there was no early closing movement? Merchants kept open until 8 and 9 oclock because they would not work together."

To-day there are conditions confronting the merchants which they had to fight. Collectively, they could get what they required without raising any dust, any ill-feeling, and without antagonizing the public. The public might not take kindly to new reforms at the moment, but they would soon learn to appreciate them. Another sign of the new spirit of true co-operation was the fact that one man would indicate to his fellows anything that might save them from being bitten. The co-operative spirit was the best thing the retailers could have.

An Influence in Politics.

The influence of substantial gatherings of merchants on the politicians could not be overestimated. The retailers, by standing together as a class, by showing a united front, could make the politicians pay close attention to their needs. The young business men could take their cue from the older men—that co-operation and a brotherly spirit were the most beneficial things they could adopt.

President Steacy had done much, he said, in keeping together the retailers of Kingston as an organization, and he deserved great credit for what he had done in preventing a break—up at a time when interest seemed at a low ebb.

George Mills referred to the great influence of the man who cheered, who boosted. The pessimist was not a desirable man. There should be no room in Kingston for a pessimist. He was one, who in the words of the couplet, saw only the hole in a doughnut, where the optimist saw the doughnut.

Dr. Ryan said that what was needed was the pulling together of the men who made the business life of the city, who were the permanent supports of the city.

Against Unfair Legislation.

E. M. Trowern, secretary of the Dominion Retail Merchants' Association, addressed the meeting on the work which was being done in Toronto and Ottawa legislative halls to prevent legislation against the interests of the retailer and for the promotion of legislation in his interests. After dwelling on the need for organized effort, the same as was put forth by the labor interests, Mr. Trowern took up the question of the big Toronto department stores, telling how and why he thought they might be checked. He argued they were a menace to the retailer. He explained the provisions of the Co-operation bill now before the Commons, demonstrating that it was an iniquitous measure, insofar as the interests of the retail men and the consumers were concerned.

Songs were sung by John Hurley, Geo. Gillespie and Messrs. MacInness and Barry, and recitations given by Messrs. E. Mullen and Plews.

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

Supplied to the Trade by Sellers.

Several important changes in prices of Gillett products were recently made, and became effective March 1st. Correct Ontario and Quebec prices are given in this issue of The Canadian Grocer. The most important changes in prices relate to Magic Baking Powder. For a long time, we understand, a new and improved formula has been used and the Gillett Company, who are the manufacturers of this article, claim it cannot be sold at the former low prices.

Thornburn A. MacNab of St. John's, Newfoundland, who represents several Old Country houses, is now paying a visit to some of his principals in England. He called at the London office of The Canadian Grocer a few days ago, after having visited Carr & Co.'s biscuit works in Carlisle. He was very much interested in these bakeries and somewhat surprised at their magnitude. He reports excellent sales of Carr's biscuits in his island territory.

Another Advance Occurs in the Prices of Lard

Hog Products Getting to be a Luxury — Cold Storage Egg Stocks all Gone—Market in Healthy Condition and Declines Occur—Butter Situation Looking Good.

It now appears that the hog product will soon be regarded as a luxury and beyond the reach of ordinary mortals.

From November 1st the decrease in the number of hogs killed in the Western States compared with last year was 2,695,000. The scarcity is general and prices are firm and the hog products must undoubtedly rule high for some time to come.

Butter has a better outlook. The stocks are not heavy, and butter is considered good property, so far as Canada is concerned, even in the absence of foreign demand.

Cheese is firm and is moving gradually and satisfactorily out of the hands of the dealers, who will be ready to tackle the new crop when it becomes available

Butter—There has been an advance of ½c in fresh dairy rolls since last week, which illustrates the firmness of the market. Supplies are dwindling, and the tail-ends of holdings are now being offered. Some shipments have been made recently to Toronto, Winnipeg and other western points. They were of the best creamery, chiefly. Demand from the United States for poorer grades, to be worked over, continues brisk. There has been more trade of this nature this year than in the past, importers taking all that has been offered.

Butter — Fresh-made butter of good quality is in good demand, it will bring a little more money.

With a light supply of fresh-made butter, it opens the way to clear out all the storage butter, which also is growing less from day to do. On the whole, so far as Toronto is concerned, the conditions are favorable to meet the spring butter-making season.

Eggs—Cold storage eggs are now all off the market, and with the exception of a small stock of limed eggs, which are used by bakers, the demand must depend entirely on fresh laid eggs. To meet the demand it was necessary to import some from the States, but if the mild weather continues, our own supply will soon meet all demands. In view of these favorable conditions the prices have dropped to 27c, and will likely drop further in the near future.

Poultry—The receipts of fresh stock are decreasing from week to week, but on account of the cold storage equipments, the public need not fear that they will not be able to get anything they want in the poultry line later on. When anybody approaches a merchant for a gift for some charity or charitable institution, let the merchant inform the solicitor that the store business cannot give to such things at all. The members of the firm or the merchant personally may give, but not the store.

The merchant must be approached as an individual and not as the head of a business. He may give as much as he likes, but it is not just that the store business, which receives no advantage from such things, should be expected to donate. It is an institution of a purely business character. This we conceive to by the correct attitude.—Oregon Tradesman.

Other Things High Besides Cold Storage Goods

Can the Merchant Pay His Landlord Twice the Rent He Used to, Pay His Drivers Salaries Instead of Wages, Feed His Horses 50c Oats and Sell on Same Margin as Before?—Several Queries Unanswered.

Under the heading, "Who Knows," the following satire on the high cost of living and cold storage appeared in a recent issue of The Egg Reporter, Waterloo, Iowa:

"Some of our Congressmen and other law makers and world movers have recently discovered that the cold storage warehouse is responsible for the high prices of food. They have overlooked the fact that some other things that are not carried in cold storage are also high; at least they seem so to us when we try to foot the bills—such as city lots, farm lands, wheat, corn, oats, lumber, Pittsburg stogies Champagne, labor, etc. Some of the labor we have noticed ought to be kept in cold storage. However, being in the business, we perhaps are inclined to resent this new line of defamation, although we have long ago accustomed ourselves to hearing most everything bad in eatables called "Cold Storage," and seeing all the goods that really came out of our warehouses sold over the retail counter for fresh; but we have all the time been encouraged by the idea that we were really a boon to mankind and on that account could take some pride in running a business where tremendous investment yields tremendously small return.

Perhaps and Perhaps Not.

"Perhaps the farmer can raise hens on $200-an-acre farms, hire expensive farm labor to feed on 70c corn through the winter, sell his eggs and poultry for the same price he used to and then have money left to buy violets for the automobile. Perhaps the storekeeper can pay his landlord twice as much rent as he used to, pay his truckmen salaries instead of wages to drive those 50c oat-eating horses, look after the wants of an up-to-date blonde stenographer and still sell the eggs and poultry on the same margin as before. Perhaps the housewife who hollers the loudest against the ruinous prices will dust off the market basket and try to take a personal interest in her hubby's welfare instead of ordering a few best short-weight deliveries sent up quick in the gasoline wagon, as she has a 'bridge' on. Perhaps the average between 10c a doz. for eggs in the spring and $1 a doz. in the winter would be less than 30c the year round.

"Perhaps prices are reduced through a billion dollar Congress preventing Canada and other countries from relieving the famine, thereby soaking the consumer but avoiding that terrible income tax. Perhaps the boy who was asked his opinion regarding a certain barn-door and who gave his entire attention to a blue-bottle fly that was crawling on the surface was able to render an intelligent verdict. Perhaps if our law makers prohibited storing wheat in grain elevators, wheat would be cheaper. Perhaps a gold dollar will buy just as much when there's twice as many of them and they're one half as scarce. Perhaps —— will some time freeze over.

"Who knows?"

The Alarming Loss of More than a Million Dollars

This is What is Represented to be Happenening in the Egg Industry—Cause of Troubde Placed at the Door of Farmers and Lack of Co-operation With Merchants and Packers—A Convention Suggested.

Editor Candian Grocer.—You published a report in a recent issue of a speech of John A. Gunn, Montreal, on the waste in the egg industry and also its possibilities if properly carried on. Does this not show clearer from day to day your contention, that there should be a better understanding between the producers and the men, called middlemen, who handle their goods?

If his statement is correct, and from the knowledge I have of the egg business myself, I believe it is no exaggeration, then it shows how important it is for farmers to become familiar with the best methods for handling their products. Instead of discussing at their meetings how to beat the middleman out of his profits, they should consider with the dealers the best way to prepare and handle their goods.

According to Mr. Gunn's statement, 17 per cent. of the entire egg product is lost through careless handling, which sums up to the enormous amount of $1,850,000. Is it not like trying to stop a very small leak in a barrel and allowing a much larger one to run? I have been watching your paper, because The Canadian Grocer is the first and only paper which seems to have the right idea of true association work between the different organizations.

As long as the farmers are a separate organization and consider all other progressive efforts as antagonistic to themselves, so long will they block the wheels of progress against their own inerests. Through the foresight of cold storage men, and at great cost, they have provided facilities for taking care of the farm products, and the farmer is reaping a large share of the benefits; but in spite of all this, he has never even considered how he might work more advantageously with the packers.

Think of 17 per cent. of all our eggs lost, and why? Where is the trouble? The trouble is entirely on the part of the farmer, in not understanding what the packers and merchants know, and could teach them, if the proper connection was made between different organizations. This entire loss could be saved through a proper system of handling the eggs, and this system the farmers should understand, and for their own interests carry it out, and save $1,850,000 per year.

This is an absolute loss, without any necessity for it. All this great loss can be saved without any cost to the country, by only knowing how to do our work better and more fairly towards each other. This can only be attained by cultivating proper relations and harmony between the different parts of the great machinery of trade and commerce.

Organization, first in each particular line of industry to produce better results, is right and very much good has been accomplished, but you are perfectly right in your views in advocating the connecting link between the different organizations.

If the farmers would meet the packers or dealers and find out what they require to enable them to give the farmers the best returns, the loss on eggs would soon disappear.

To carry out your idea why not let the farmers, merchants and packers all appoint representatives and meet to discuss the whole situation and adopt such methods that will be of mutual benefit to all. This could also be done between manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers.

LABELS SHOWING BUTTER WEIGHTS.

Councilmen of Youngstown, O., U.S.A., are struggling with a new weights and measures ordinance. It is proposed to require stamps or labels showing the weight of butter sold in rolls, lumps or prints and to provide for sale of bread by weight. A question was raised in council as to whether manufacturers of package cereals might be required to label each package with a statement of the net weight of its contents. The director of public service, said that the weighing of cereals and breakfast foods is being investigated in Washington and in a year or so new laws governing the above will be hade.

Pure Cream of Tartar

GROCERS—As you are interested in knowing about the quality of goods which you are supplying to your customers, we recommend that you get a copy of Bulletin No. 195, just issued by Inland Revenue Department of Dominion Government.

It will show you that the claim we always make of having chemically pure goods is correct.

Gillett's Cream Tartar

You need not take our word for it—see what the Chemists employed by the Government say on the question. There is possibly no article adulterated and tampered with as much as Cream Tartar. The Government Chemists report that many samples examined did not contain any Cream Tartar at all, but were composed of a mixture of phosphate and alum.

GILLETT'S CREAM TARTAR is reported in the Bulletin as being up to British Pharmacopœia Standard of purity.

CLERKS ANSWERING THE PHONE.

A Woodstock Merchant Appreciates "Things That Shouldn't be."

Editor Canadian Grocer,—The cartoons which you are now using under the heading, "Things that shouldn't be," are undoubtedly good ones, as they seem to be meeting with the approval of all who see and study them. Perhaps the best one you have had to date was the one in your last week's edition, "Retailers should be careful to allow only the brightest clerks in the store to take orders over the 'phone."

This is indeed a very true article, and in the writer's opinion merchants should be very careful to allow only a bright clerk to take an order over the telephone, or perhaps a better way is to have one certain clerk take all the orders over the telephone. Above all things a merchant should should keep an absent-minded clerk from doing this work. If all the others in the store are busy at the time it would be better to delay taking the order over the telephone until some capable person is available than to let any clerk with a poor memory tend to it, as this kind of an employe is liable to forget about the order right after he has taken it, and by so doing he may rob his employer of the patronage of a first-class customer.

There are many clerks who are very responsible in other ways who cannot take orders over a telephone, and perhaps the best way of all is to have one person to do the brunt of the telephone order work and to have another to relieve him (or her) in case he or she) is busy or away.

CATS IN GROCERY STORES.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—I am glad to see that you are touching on cats in the grocery stores. A pleasant scene which caught my eye one day was a cat asleep in an open chest of tea which had been placed in the window for display purposes. The display attracted attention but, it is needless to say, did not sell goods. Get after the cats. Possibly it may turn attention from the mad dog scare, as well at draw the attention of grocers to the evil of allowing cats to roam at large in their stores.

Decline of Ten Cents in Rolled Oats this Week

Demand Not so Good as it was—Easier Tone to Wheat and Flour Markets—Chicago and Winnipeg Wheat Decline.

Flour and wheat markets, contrary to the general expectations, passed through a week of gradual decline, and wheat is now in Chicago for May 3⅞c, and in Winnipeg 1⅛c lower than a week ago. Why Winnipeg held up as it did, compared with Chicago, nobody can explain and it is rather remarkable that with the constant fluctuation of wheat, milers have been selling their flour at the same prices during the last two months or more.

The cereal market this week shows a decline of 10 cents per bag in rolled oats. Demand is not so strong as it has been, due to the approach of spring.

Flour—Local millers are laboring under difficult conditions this year, being handicapped on account of the high price of Ontario wheat. During previous years Ontario wheat brought to the mills by farmers, was always cheaper than what they had to get shipped in, which gave them that much advantage in competing with the large western millers, but this year they have not got that advantage, and, therefore, have to work on smaller margins.

SUGAR IMPORTS TO HALIFAX.

They are Heavy Just at Present—Dealers Think Prices May Advance Further.

Halifax, N.S., March 10.—All interest in the grocery trade now centres in the sugar markets, the rapid and numerous advances having been unexpected. There have been three advances within less than a month. The dates were Feb. 16, ten cents per hundred pounds; an advance of five cents in Feb. 23, and an advance of ten cents on March 2. The advance was on all grades of sugar.

The imports of sugar into Halifax at the present time are very heavy. The steamer Boston that arrived here this week from Trinidad landed ten thousand bags of sugar.

The first full cargo of Cuban sugar landed at Halifax in some years was brought to this port this week in the Norwegian steamer Sneastad. She had over twenty-six thousand bags in all, or close on to four thousand tons. The cargo was from Puerto Padre, on the north-east coast of Cuba.

The Cuban sugar is being imported under the tariff clause, which permits Canadian refineries to import twenty per cent. of their requirements at the same duty levied on British West India sugar under the preferential rates. Last year a cargo of San Domingo sugar was landed here under this regulation.

Extra standard granulated sugar is now quoted at $5.15 per hundred pounds in barrel lots, and some of the dealers say that they would not be surprised to see the price go still higher.

TO DISCUSS LIVE QUESTIONS.

Winnipeg, March 10.—Some important questions, showing that the Western Retail Merchants' Association are adopting a progressive policy, will come up for discussion at the next general meeting to be held in the Traveler's Building on Thursday evening next, March 17th. Among the topics slated for discussion are:

- How to deal with the mail order problem.
- Business Tax.
- Collection of Small Accounts.
- Mutual Fire Insurance for Merchants.
- By-laws Affecting Retailers.
- Protection for the Retail Man Against Fake Advertising.
- Credit List and Collection of Debts.

Whether he may be a member of the association or not, every retail merchant is invited.

Bookkeeping System with Counter Check Books

How a Merchant Keeps Tab on Unpaid Accounts by Using Them Alone—Does Not Use Slip in Counter Check Book in Case of a Cash Transaction—Transfers Accounts Which are Unpaid From Filled Book to Back Cover of a New One.

By J. M. Donovan.

An accurate and simple method of keeping books in the grocery store is something to be desired by every merchant. I do but little credit business, but there is always at least a fraction that I cannot get away from entirely. However, I only give credit to those whom I know well and am pretty sure of.

At one time I gave out my goods to everyone asking credit, to my sorrow, but I believe I profited by the transactions, as it is worth something to know who and what kind of people you are dealing with.

Many grocers issue counter check slips with all goods, whether paid for or not at the time of ordering. I only give a counter check slip with goods going out on credit, or ordered over the phone. c.o.d., as in the latter case very often the party ordering is indisposed to receive and pay for the goods at time of delivery.

When a person comes to the shop and orders goods to be sent to a certain address, and when I do not know whether they will be paid for on the spot or not, I tear off a neat strip of paper from the counter roll, on which to put down the articles with prices. If paid for at the time, that piece of paper goes with the goods, but if it happens to be a person to whom I am giving credit for a few days, and whose former slip is filled (for I have my customers educated to bring back the same slip as they would a pass book until it is filled), then I give a new slip, and in most cases, with amount of former slip rendered up to date. Many of my customers like the latter, as they have then but one to look after; but some are careless and want a new slip with every order. I have had customers get as many as twenty slips before settling up, and probably they would not have as great an amount on them as the person with only two or three slips filled. Besides, the persons having many are apt to lose two or three and are that many short when they bring them for settlement; but, of course, when I can show them the copy and give date and numbers of the missing slips, they are more particular and anxious to fall in line with my style of doing business and have their whole account on as few slips as possible. Also by that scheme I save hundreds of slips, hence a few cents by so doing.

I now come to the more particular part of the idea, showing its simplicity.

Keeps Tab on Old Accounts.

When the leaves in the check book are all used and removed from the frame for a new book, the names of those who have unpaid accounts in the old book are transferred to the back of the new, under same date as on the front cover of the new, with the numbers of the accounts following. This is our only delay and extra work, but it well repays us. We do it at our leisure, but as soon as convenient. It does away with keeping another book, which would also have to be indexed.

The old books holding unpaid accounts are placed in a receptacle with the names up. I have a desk that will hold fifteen books, and I have never had occasion to put more in it. If there should be a name not marked on the oldest book, I render a new account—mark out the name, throw away the old book, which then leaves room for another—and it's very seldom that a person owing an account that long will refuse to pay it. When a person comes to pay his account, the books being conveniently placed behind the counter, anyone attending the store can turn around, find it immediately and merely draw a line through the name. I do not even look up the account to mark it paid. By simply drawing the line through the name and number settles it for all time.

Another point is, should a person lose a slip and dispute the goods and say they never got the slip, I can show them the items quite easily. This usually settles the matter.

A SAMPLE OF DISCOURTESY.

Scale Salesman Ordered Out of Grocery Store—The Attack Renewed.

A young scales salesman, calling on a city grocer, had been ordered out of the store. The next morning, supported by his sales manager, he advanced to the second attack. They were scarcely over the threshold when the aproned grocer saw them. Anger, simmering from the day before, boiled over.

"I though I told you to keep out of here," he shouted at the salesman. "I don't want any of your scales, and I told you so. Now you get out of that door. I———"

"We didn't come here to be insulted," the sales manager cut in at the proprietor. "I came here to buy groceries. Get out your pencil and take this order," he continued, as he drew a $10 bill from his pocket.

"But I didn't know——" protested the shop-keeper, eyeing the money.

"Shut right up," snapped the sales manager, "and take this order."

When the order was on paper, the grocer was still mumbling his apologies. The sales manager had twisted his anger into attention, and was now ready to broach the sale.

"Mr. Wilkes," he said, "I came in here to talk to you like a gentleman, and you know how you treated me. There is just one way that you can apologize to me, and I'm going to give you the chance. My office is at 69 Winthrop street. Come over there and I'll show you how one gentleman should treat another. I don't care whether you buy a scale or not; I just want to give you an example of business courtesy."

"I'll come," said the unhappy merchant.

"When?"

"This afternoon."

"What time?"

"Two o'clock."

"All right; see that you keep your appointment. I'll be waiting for you."

The grocer was prompt, and within an hour the sales manager, with his suavest manner, had sold him two machines.

The sales manager afterward admitted that some men would have kicked him and his money into the street, but a slight knowledge of the grocer's reputation precluded that possibility.—System.

FARMERS PAYING BY CHEQUE.

The analysis of the employment of cheques and similar instruments of credit by farmers and laborers is one of the features of a report made public by the National Monetary Commission on "The Use of Credit Instruments in Payments in the United States."

The deposits in national banks by retail dealers on a selected date, showed that outside of reserve cities under the national banking law the retail deposits aggregated $36,255,308, of which $24,929,620, or 68.7 per cent., was in cheques.

An examination of retail deposits in five agricultural states, leaving out cities of more than 25,000 inhabitants, indicated that cheques are used more generally by farmers in making their payments than is sometimes supposed.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruits—Sicily lemons are in good supply, and prices continue to be sufficiently attractive to induce good buying. Limes are quiet, and in small demand, owing to the situation in lemons. Oranges, Californias, are moving freely at unchanged figures. Pineapples and strawberries are easier, notably the latter, while kumquats are slow at reduced prices. Apples are inactive, with a tendency to lower quotations. Cranberries are firm. Mild weather has not affected trade to any extent.

Vegetables—For several days past there has been a glut in the potato market, and trading has been slack. Comparatively warm weather induced numerous shippers to send holdings into town, with the result that early in the week there were eight to ten cars on track. With supplies so heavy, buying was limited, in anticipation of lower quotations, most dealers being afraid to purchase more than for immediate requirements. The result shows in the lower figure quoted below. Turnips are in large supply, too, and weak prices rule. A fair trade in different imported lines continues to be transacted, while hot-house stuff is selling freely in quarters where the price is forthcoming.

Fish—Cod is slightly easier this week, and lower prices rule. Haddock and halibut are still very scarce, and dealers are finding it difficult to fill orders. Green Fruits—The demoralized condition of the apple market is slowly improving, but still out-of-season apples have to be sold at a loss. Real good, firm apples of the better varieties are expected to command a fair price as soon as the belated goods are disposed of. California navels are of better quality now and are firm, and will likely bring a little more money. Cuban and Florida grapefruit are rivaling each other in the same-sized cases, the one at $2.25 and the other at $4. This difference is in the quality and packing. The Florida fruit is carefully packed with only the best fruit, while the other is not so reliable and frequently contains useless fruit. Strawberries are arriving regularly, packed in ice, and will remain high for some time.

Vegetables—During the spring-like weather of the last week vegetables looked more natural, and people felt that they should be able to buy them cheaper. To eat fresh onions, tomatoes, strawberries, radishes, lettuce, etc., when the snow is blowing, and the thermometer down to zero at sky-high prices seems to be quite reasonable, but when the sun shines bright and warm the prices appear ridiculous, and the demand falls off. California celery cannot hold out any longer against the Florida celery, which has practically crowded it from the market. Potatoes are weak and plentiful, and dealers would like to see some outside demand. The Northwest may soon give us a call for some.

Fish—Owing to the mild weather the demand for fish fell off considerably, but as the fish are scarce it rather favored the dealers in filling their orders. Weather conditions are unfavorable to the fishermen, which is the cause of the scarcity. Finnan haddies have not been as scarce for five years. Fillets had a good run, but it is found that they do not keep as well as fish with the bone in it, and for that reason may not be a great success on this market.

Loss of Trade from Boxes Piled Inside the Store

Customers Do Not Care to Wend Their Ways Among Cases Sacks and Boxes—Gives Incomplete Service and Tends to Repel Custom—Storeroom the Place for Surplus Stock—Shelf Arrangement Should be Attended to.

By a Traveling Salesman.

A food many grocers still make the mistake of using their stores in place of warehouses. Some stores are so crowded with goods or rather with boxes, barrels, sacks, etc., that there is little room left for customers. If any retailers think that people are so anxious to come to their stores that they will crawl over boxes, or elbow their way through narrow passages, they are certainly making a mistake. Plenty of room to make customers feel that they are not standing in the way of others is always a good feature in a retail store.

With a mountain of goods piled in the centre of the store, containing lots of goods which are not touched for weeks, and during all that time are seen by the customers, it is not reasonable to suppose that much of those goods will be asked for. Customers know that they are dusty and that for some reasons other people are not buying them, and they think it is better for them to leave them alone.

Nobody wants to buy anything from a box that has either not been touched for some time, or which has been exposed to dust. Why then have them there to take up the room and show people that they are not salable articles?

Merchants grow into certain habits, and they do not see their goods as their customers see them. They want to sell them, but their customers want to eat them. Things look entirely different when they are viewed from these two different standpoints, and grocers often forget this.

The idea in the mind of a grocer should not be to stick things in the faces of his customer, and in that way almost force them to buy, but rather in a way that shows that they are clean and good to eat.

Better Services Rendered.

The Canadian Grocer has beeen pointing out the importance of better service on the part of the grocers, if they intend to hold their trade, and a marked change is evident, but still some continue in their old slovenly methods and then blame anybody and everybody but themselves, because their trade is not what it ought to be.

The Grocer, I am glad to know, has also frequently called the attention of grocers to the importance of getting their clerks better posted in their work. This can only be done, either by the grocer himself, if he himself has the training, or else by reading the many valuable articles that appear from week to week in The Canadian Grocer.

There is no more important thing to my mind than system in arranging stock. Boxes and cases in confusion tend to repel custom rather than attract it. When a consignment of soap, tea, or canned goods arrive, as many cases as are needed should be unpacked for the shelves and the remainder stored in the warehouse for future use.

How Money is Lost.

Certain portions of the shelves should be exclusively set apart for certain goods to prevent confusion. Otherwise it means a loss of time and hence a loss of money due to slow service, and to not being able to buy according to requirements. And when a merchant discovers he is losing money on account of poor system, he should quickly rectify that system.

Confusion caused by piling cases and boxes of goods all over the store tends to poor service and therefore loss of trade and a continuance of loss of trade means failure in business eventually.

It therefore behooves every merchant to pay the closest attention to the interior appearance of the store since it has so much to do with getting and holding trade which means an increase in the business.

Europe Controlling the Raw Sugar Situation

Market Higher Than it Has Been Since 1905 — Speculative Interests With Short Beet Crop and Reports of Cuban Drouth Cause of Advancing Markets.

New York, March 10.—That Europe practically controls the raw sugar situation is claimed to be the cause of the present high market in raws compared with a year ago, and the recent advances made in refined sugar.

The situation in raws here has not been paralleled since 1905, when the memorable boom carried prices of Cubas to 5.35c duty paid New York, and granulated to 6.15c per pound. Recently a lot of 5,000 bags was taken by one company for last half April shipment at the record price this season—4.39c—following purchases of fully one-half million bags at 3 cents during the week by local interests. What this means to the refiner is indicated by the fact that last year at this time Cuban raw sugar sold at 3.73c, or 63 points less than at the present.

The interesting feature of the situation is the part Europe is playing in forcing our refiners to pay high prices when the heavy Cuban crop movement has made for the reverse tendency, the shipper usually being at the mercy of the buyer. It was the advance in London beet options of 4½d over Washington's birthday that caused refiners to abandon their waiting policy and rush in, cables from Cuba reporting severe damage to the sugar cane by drouth being also a factor. This same thing has happened twice before this campaign, European speculators taking away our market, as London was 6 points higher than New York parity.

While there is real scarcity abroad owing to the 332,000 tons shortage in beets, speculation of a Brazilian plunger has played a considerable part, this operator being credited with carrying 500,000 tons, of which he is said to have liquidated 120,000 tons last week. It is this fact that causes head-shaking in conservative circles, where the sharp collapse of the 1905 bull campaign is fresh in mind. Never was lower Wall Street more confident, Cuba being apparently 1,000,000 tons short, but the shrewd German quietly spoiled the whole game by increasing his beet output about an equal amount.

The wholesale grocer refused to purchase at the 6.15c level and for two months lived on the invisible supply of refined in the country, forcing refiners and individual speculators to carry the burden, losses of $25,000 to $100,000 being the rule.

The Shipper Benefiting.

There is still a goodly margin between present prices, 5.15c and 6.15c in 1905, so that distributers have purchased freely of late, until they must have fully six weeks' supply. Yet the refiner is not making much money, his margin over raws being only 74 points. The Cuban shipper is benefiting this year, a profit for him of $22 a ton being figured, as against $10 in 1909. On a recent sale of 30,000 tons the owner realized $660,000 clear gain. Porto Rico and Hawaii will also have prosperous campaigns, for which the consumer will pay the piper.

Commenting upon the situation, Federal Sugar Refining interests take a cheerful view of the situation, they looking for a large Cuban crop, despite the drouth. They say: "Receipts showed a falling off of 6,000 tons from the previous week. This, combined with the news from Cuba that the weather was too dry, was considered a bullish feature, and was the direct cause of the advances noted above. We have previously referred to the fact that while the weather in Cuba has been fine and dry, and excellent for grinding, it was too dry for the cane, the spring canes suffering particularly, and a continuance of this condition would have some effect on the ultimate outturn. A general rain, even if it interrupted grinding for some days, would be of great benefit to the country, both on account of the good it would do the cane fields and also because it would allow the planting of land prepared to receive cane for next year. There is no assurance that Cuba will not get these rains, and it must be remembered that all districts are not suffering from drouth, also a proper allowance must be made for the probability that reports of bad conditions are more or less exaggerated by the planters, who are naturally anxious to see the market advance."

LICENSE NOT NECESSARY.

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association is sending out a circular to its members announcing the repeal of the provisions of the British Columbia extra-Provincial Corporation Act, under which companies holding a Dominion charter from any of the other provinces were forbidden to do business in British Columbia through travelers, agents or commission houses until they had first taken out a license. This cost from $25 to $250, according to capitalization, under penalty of a heavy fine per day.

The new Companies Act seems to remove all cause for complaint in this regard, only firms with a branch house, a commission house, a broker or resident agent, or who carry stock in the province having to provide themselves with a license, or with travelers who reside in the province. There is a penalty of $50 a day for firms doing business illegally, and a withdrawal of all rights in the courts until a license is obtained.

To The Fruit Trade

One way of increasing your fruit trade and your profits is to keep your stock cleaned up. A dozen oranges left to dry out and spoil in the bottom of a box reduces the profits on a whole case. Fruit that doesn't move in a reasonable time is bound to deteriorate in value and will not do your fruit trade any good. Again, if you can double your sales you double your profits, and your stock is always fresh and clean. Its very appearance is an added incentive to your customers to buy.

Every orange and lemon packed in the "Sunkist" wrappers passes the most rigid inspection ever given fruit. Every piece must be well colored, juicy and full flavored. As we ship entire train loads of fruit from California, we have the advantage over all traffic lines, thus bringing to you the best fruit of California in prime condition. "Sunkist" brand is fruit you can recommend, fruit your trade will appreciate, and you can build up a fresh fruit business that will make you more clear money than any other line of goods you handle. "Sunkist" on the wrappers of oranges and lemons means quality insurance.

We are taking special care with our Canadian shipments and believe every jobber can supply you with "Sunkist" oranges and lemons. If you have any trouble in having your order filled, we will be glad to hear from you.

Can a Retail Salesman Save $1,560 in Six Years?

Question Asked by a Beginner Making Inquiries About Apprenticeship System—What Salary a Clerk Should Get Who is Faithful to His Duties—How Much he May Spend and What he Should Save.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—I read with much interest the article in last week's issue by A. H. Harvey, which, to some extent, opens the way to me. I have a natural ambition to be a retail grocer, and have a little experience, but without any means. I could never see how I could manage to get both the experience and the capital necessary to conduct, in time, a business of my own. The article I refer to looks very well in theory, and if it works out in practice it will solve a problem which has been troubling many a young man whose choice in life is merchandising.

I would, however, like to ask Mr. Harvey whether there would not be some difficulty in securing an apprenticeship with a good, reliable, sensible, well-qualified grocer, who could give a young man the training which, he says, is essential to business success.

I would also like to know how much salary a young man should get during the six years he is expected to save $1,560, and what system he would suggest in making these savings?

I fully realize that it means a struggle and close application, but I also know that success cannot be gained any other way, therefore I do not look for an easy way, but rather a possible way. If Mr. Harvey, therefore, will give us further light on this subject I believe he will not only do me a great favor, but give hope and encouragement to many a boy who aims to be one of the future merchants of the country, and not merely a mechanical machine to be operated by some one at his pleasure.

BEGINNER.

Ottawa, March 7, 1910.

Advice of an Authority.

The above letter was submitted to A. H. Harvey, who has supplied us with the following answer:

"It is gratifying to know that there are young men with ambition who aim to be merchants, and if I can be of any assistance to them in putting them on the royal road to success, I have attained the object I have in view.

"In spite of all the abuse, there is no occupation that offers any greater opportunities to a young man of ambition than the retail business. I mean not only from a financial viewpoint, but in many other ways. He has opportunities to become acquainted with the people, learn more of their peculiarities, and bring his own personality more before the people than in any other line of industry, and if he has the qualities which a good, practical commercial training and experience give him he will stand at the top notch in the estimation of the people.

"Feeling this, and knowing this from experience, I can conscientiously recommend retailing to any clear-headed, active, diligent, honest boy, who has not the means to put himself through a college training, and yet who has the snap and grit to reach a standing in society surpassed by none.

"If a retail merchant makes the best of his opportunities, does not allow himself to wear down into a rut, but keeps up with the times, he is the best-informed and best all-round useful man in the community. This high level is open for the right kind of a boy and can be reached, without fail, through energy, industry, perseverance and honesty.

"Now I will answer my young friend's question. While a great many retail grocers are in business who are not competent to give a young man the right kind of training, it may, however, be stated that there are grocers, and they are rapidly increasing, under whose management a boy can acquire the proper training.

How $1,560 Can be Saved.

"As to what the salary should be to enable the boy to save $1,560 in six years, I would say that he can do it if he gets $4 per week the first year, $6 the second, $8 the third, $12 the fourth, $14 the fifth and $16 the sixth. These figures, I should judge, would gladly be paid by a competent grocer in a city to a first-class young man who would do his full duty. The boy could then, the first year, pay his parents $2 a week and have $1 for pocket money and deposit $1 in the bank; the second year $3 to his parents, $1 pocket money, deposit $3; the third year $4 to his parents, $1 pocket money, and deposit $3; the fourth year, $4 to his parents, $2 pocket money, and deposit $6; the fifth year, $4 to his parents, $2 pocket money, and deposit $8; the sixth year, $4 to his parents, $2 pocket money, and deposit $10. Of course, his parents in such a case should provide him with clothing, board, etc.

"Any boy who would enter into such an arrangement and carry it out would have everything in his favor, and success in life would be absolutely assured.

"Good conduct, which always pleases parents, keeps him out of bad company, and swells his bank account, secures for him the respect of good, honest people, and what is still infinitely more, the satisfaction of knowing that he has done his best.

"I trust that my young friend will see that my theory is really practicable, and that if followed out will land him safely in the delightful field of success."

NOVA SCOTIA IN THE LEAD.

The extent to which the sea and other waters of Canada provide for the food wants of the people is indicated in the report for last year of the fisheries branch of the Department of Marine and Fisheries. While all of the provinces are producers of commercial fish, those on the sea naturally take the lead. Thus in 1908-9, while the whole fisheries product of the country was valued at $25,451.000, over $21,000,000 was credited to Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and British Columbia, the other provinces together showing a little over $4,000,000. The figures in detail are:

Nova Scotia	$8,009,000
British Columbia	6,465,000
New Brunswick	4,754,000
Ontario	2,100,000
Quebec	1,881,000
Prince Edward Island	1,378.000
Manitoba and Keewatin	600,000
Saskatchewan	152,000
Alberta	59,000
Yukon	49,000

How Your Refrigerator Should Work

THESE arrows show the circulation of air in a McCray Roll Top Refrigerator—warm air rising and striking the ice, becoming cold, falling down behind the ice, which is as real as though caused by an electric fan and chilling the contents of the refrigerator. The circulation removes odors and moisture, besides producing efficient refrigeration. The inside of a McCray Refrigerator never smells stale or musty and keeps so dry you can scratch a match on the Shellaced Spruce lining. You can get such perfection only in a McCray Refrigerator. It also uses less ice than any other. Think what it will mean to you in dollars and cents to reduce your ice bill, yet have perishable goods keep perfectly. Send us your name on a postal card asking for "Free Catalogue No. 66," which is especially written to explain McCray Grocers' Refrigerators.

For a Brainy Person with an Idea

"What's In a Name?" We Think There's a Lot

Suggest a name by which we may call our line of high class chocolate goods, and, if it suits us, and we use it, we will pay you $25.00.

We cannot think of a catch phrase, or better, a word that pleases us—perhaps you can. Try. Read this ad. carefully. Consider what is said, and think of, or create, a word or a short descriptive catch-phrase that will fill the bill.

Pertinent Facts to Guide You:

We are makers of highest grade biscuits and confectionery, and have a reputation from one end of Canada to the other as manufacturers of reliable goods.

We occupy one of the largest and most sanitary factories in the Dominion.

Every step in the manufacture of our biscuits, confectionery and high-grade chocolates is personally superintended by competent foremen, who are under the supervision of our factory superintendent, who has been with us many years.

Scrupulous cleanliness is everywhere observed.

Our chief line is our "Chocolate Bordo" (registered), the premier Bordeaux chocolate—for 25 years the leader.

We make a full assortment of high-grade chocolates and a complete line of confectionery.

Remember it is for our high-grade chocolate line we want the name.

The Montreal Biscuit Company.

We prefer one word, but if the phrase is short, explanatory and applicable it may do.

We desire something that will connect in your mind quality chocolate and the name of The Montreal Biscuit Company.

Competition closes April 25, 1910.

Prize-winning idea and name of winner will be published in this paper on June 3.

Get busy right away. You can use $25 as well as the next one.

Consult the panel to the left and learn something of the goods for which you are to suggest a name and then put on your thinking cap and see if that head which has successfully directed your affairs all this time will not yield you a money-winning idea.

You ought to pull in that $25.00.

Get into the game to-day. Few of us are devoid of at least One Idea—Perhaps you have a Winner in Your Mind. Let's have it.

Ask Us for More Facts about Our Goods if You want Definite Information.

THE HIGH PRICES OF EATABLES

Have caused the consuming public more closely than ever to observe the scales used by the grocer and butcher. People lack confidence in Spring Scales, Beam and Even-Balance Scales. But they like to buy over Toledo Scales, because they can see the beautiful Toledo Springless Mechanism which automatically does the weighing; the scales show them the exact weight of their purchase; they see on the scales the signs, "No Springs," "Honest Weight," and have full confidence that their purchases are weighed correctly.

NO WAITING—NO ERRORS

There is no waiting for a salesman to find a balance or to figure what to charge. The Toledo itself does the weighing and calculates the exact value mechanically, instantly and accurately. Thus time is saved, errors avoided, profits assured, customers pleased. Any customer prefers to trade where his purchases are weighed by the most modern, automatic, reliable weighing machine than to buy supplies over old-style scales.

YOU CAN GET THESE ADVANTAGES

Write us and learn how profitable it would be to you to get a profit-increasing and trade-bringing Toledo Scale. We make allowances for some scales in part payment for Toledos. Tell us what you have. We guarantee a better computing scale for less money than you can get from any other source. Write for our Book 3, showing scales and prices.

Overstocking Cause of this Retailer's Failure

Whenever he Was Able to Buy a Little Cheaper in Large Quantities he Overloaded—His Assortment Became so Poor That Customers Eventually Began to Deal Somewhere Else—Turnover Not Proportionate to His Buying and he Gradually Got Behind in His Payments.

Failures in the retail grocery business are due to various causes and it is desirable that merchants should study these with much care.

A case recently occurred of a Canadian grocer going out of business and settling up with a compromise of 40 cents on the dollar because he did not pay scientific attention to his stock.

Neither the buying, storing nor interior arrangement of stock was scientifically done; mistakes ensued one after another, not because the grocer was unwilling to do his work properly, but because he did not know how.

These mistakes were costly and eventually he could not meet his payments.

One of his chief troubles was that of over-stocking in various lines, many of which were slow movers.

Here is how it happened: A traveler called on him one day to sell him canned goods—meats of various kinds, beans, etc.

This was a specialty salesman, but he sold through the jobbers.

He quoted his prices and made an appeal for a small order on two or three lines of the goods—enough to last three or four weeks at the current rate of selling of the retail grocer.

Objections were taken on the plea that the prices were too high—the grocer wouldn't purchase and the traveler wouldn't lower his prices, because he wasn't permitted to.

A few days later that same grocer purchased $100 worth of the same class of goods from the traveling salesman of another house.

How the salesman managed to get such a large order was because he quoted his goods at jobbers' prices, but there was the stipulation that certain quantities had to be taken.

Had small quantities been taken, his prices would have been the same as those of the competing house.

The grocer was so tickled at beating the first traveler and making a few dollars "clear profit," that he determined to buy in large quantities whenever he could obtain better prices.

When Drafts Had to be Met.

The result was that in the next few weeks he had laid in large stocks of many lines and had saved, in his estimation, quite a few dollars.

But the goods had been bought on 30 days' time and soon an account for $100 had to be met, whereas the grocer had scarcely made a turnover in those goods of $10 during the month.

There were also many other expenses and accounts to meet about the same time.

Following this up, more large drafts kept coming in from time to time; he had to pay for the goods that had been bought in large quantities.

But the turnover was not sufficient to meet them all and gradually the grocer kept running behind the scheduled time for making his payments.

Soon he found himself paying interest on overdue accounts, which, naturally, was disastrous to his business and to his financial standing.

Lack of Assortment.

Another of his unscientific methods was this: Unless he could obtain a better price on goods than his competitors he often refused to buy at all, even in small quantities.

This prevented him from keeping up his assortment.

Customers frequently called for goods which he did not carry and he substituted so often that gradually many of his best customers traded with competitors, and some even with mail order houses.

His assortment was so poor that he could not be depended upon.

Mistakes were also made in storing his stock and in arranging it on the shelves.

Enough attention had not been paid to sanitary conditions around the store.

Butter was carelessly handled, so that particular customers would not buy it; the grocer bought it promiscuously, and often it was of a poor quality.

This drove more customers away from the store.

In stocking his teas another error was made; he bought in large quantities, with the result that much of it lost its flavor and became stale before it was sold.

Customers began to complain about it and eventually some were lost simply on account of the tea—all of which meant several hundred dollars less turnover during a year.

With many lines, when a new shipment arrived, the old goods on the shelves were pushed back to the walls and fresh goods substituted.

This meant that later on these stale goods—very stale now—brought numerous complaints, and were the cause of losing more customers.

No study was made to determine what goods imparted their flavors to others or absorbed the flavors of other goods.

Spices, teas, lemons, coffee, etc., were piled promiscuously, while no care was taken in the storeroom to keep all goods away from the coal oil tank.

The flavors of many goods were spoiled before they left the store, and consumers who dealt there lost confidence in them.

Why He Failed.

Because he did not attempt to do business on a scientific basis, he did not study his own interests in buying; he did not look to the arrangement of his stock, neither in the store-house nor in the store.

He was carried away by the fact that he was buying rather cheaply in large quantities; he did not consider his turnover, and was not able to meet his payments when they fell due.

He was one of those retailers suffering from the carrying of too large a stock when his trade did not demand it.

He forgot or did not know that the quick turnover of stock, even at a fair profit, was one of the requirements of a successful business.

Too much capital had been tied up in the business in what might be called dead stock—since much of it was not turned over in months.

The only ultimate result of doing business on such an unscientific basis was—failure.

And he failed.

SUGAR REFINERY PROJECT.

St. John, N.B., March 15.—The bill to permit the common council of the city to grant a free site to F. C. Durant for the erection of a sugar refinery will be presented to the local legislature this week and unless some unforeseen obstacle should arise the project will go through. The matter has already been approved by the Dominion parliament on the recommendation of the railway department which has transferred a portion of its property at the Ballast wharf to Mr. Durant to further the scheme.

With the view of inducing new industries to come to St. John, the board of trade has asked the council to seek to have the act relating to new industries amended so that more could be offered in the way of exemptions to manufacturers, who might locate here. It is also proposed to assist manufacturers already here who may wish to enlarge their plants.

A HARD LUCK TALE.

Jas. Murray, a young Woodstock, Ont., grocery clerk, last week packed all his worldly goods in a box car and started for Saskatchewan, where he was going to take up land. The car in which he was riding, along with his outfit, was burned at Barrie through the upsetting of a lantern, and everything in it was destroyed. The stock included six horses, three head of cattle, and some hens. A fur-lined overcoat, with $60 in one of the pockets was also lost, while Mr. Murray himself very narrowly escaped death buy burning.

Western Mail-Order House Competition Alarming

Movement Fermenting Among Retailers to Bring About Co-operative Buying in Order to Offset This Competition — Complaint That Some Manufacturers and Jobbers Sell Direct to the Big Department Stores—Meeting at Brandon.

Brandon, March 16.—At the present time there is much unrest among the retailers of the west. In fact, the restlessness has been felt for some years, but it is taking on new form just now.

The causes are chiefly two. One is that the small retailer by a combination of circumstances, is forced to pay high prices for his goods in comparison to the dealer who is located in wholesale centres. He is made to believe that the expense of shipment and the smallness of the quantity warrants the manufacturer or wholesaler in stipulating a higher price. The result of this leads to the second cause for the present agitation, and that is, that the retailers cannot compete with the mail-order houses in the matter of prices.

The effort is not to form an association among retailers for the purpose of issuing a catalogue as a retaliation on the mail-order house, as is the case with the merchants of Winona, Minnesota. Nor is the present tendency of the merchants to merge their interests in one huge concern in order to buy in larger quantities, as was the case with the merchants of Cartwright, Man., about three years ago. This latter endeavor, however, was the beginning of organized effort to compete with the mail-order house, but, unfortunately, it was not a success for reasons entirely foreign to the principle of co-operation.

It, however, laid the basis for a movement that may yet realize its ambitious objects.

On the evening of March 9, about twenty retail merchants of Manitoba and Saskatchewan, met in Brandon to organize a Retail Merchants' Buying Association.

The 'Selling Direct' Trouble.

The partiality shown by jobbers and manufacturers to mail-order houses was severely commented upon, and in order to put themselves on a fair competitive footing, the trade decided to organize for the purpose of buying at more advantageous rates, and thus combat the inroads of the catalogue houses. H. E. Hill, general merchant, Hartney, Man., was appointed chairman and W. McLandress, Redvers, secretary.

The scheme, as was partially planned, was to establish a buying and distributing station for all the merchants who wished to connect themselves with the movement. Just where this station is to be was not decided, but it is contended that to make the idea feasible it will have to be Winnipeg.

A committee consisting of H. E. Hill, G. W. Stockton, Carlyle, and G. S. Munro, general merchant, Reston, was named to circularize the retail dealers and inform them of the object of the association with a view to co-operation in purchasing, so as to secure better rates.

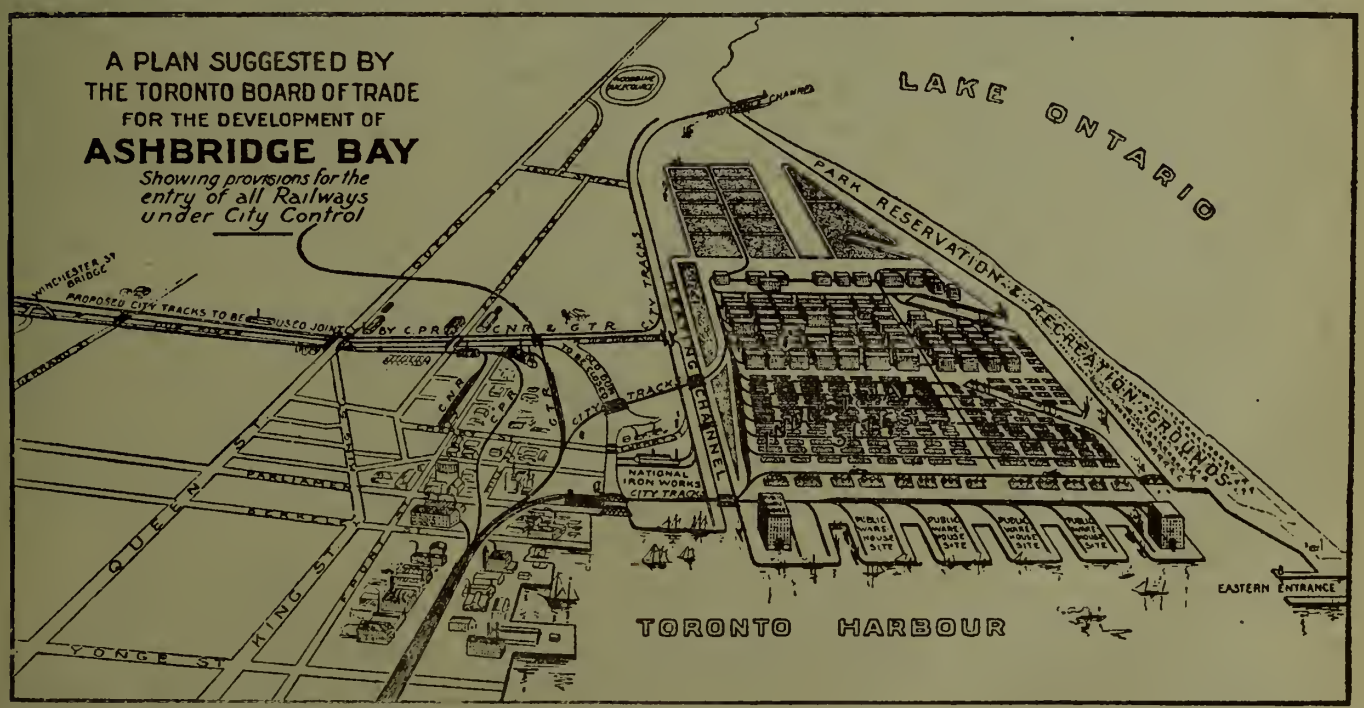
It is argued by some that the co-operative buying scheme cannot work out successfully without a co-operative selling system, and in the light of this criticism the new adventure will be interesting to follow.

Movement is Widespread.

To show that the new tendency is widespread, it is interesting to note that at the time of the meeting in Brandon, a retailer living in Killarney, Northern Manitoba, issued a circular letter to about twenty-five of his fellow merchants, outlining a similar scheme as that proposed by the merchants who met in Brandon.

The Killarney merchant suggested that sometime during March a meeting of retailers, consisting of a representative dealer from about twenty towns should be held providing the responses to his letters were sufficient to warrant such an action.

Since the movements in both centres are identical, they will likely be joined together.



At a luncheon given by President W. J. Gage to members of the Board of Trade, Toronto, recently the following resolution was unanimously passed :—

"Whereas the Board of Trade of the city of Toronto consider the control of the waterfront in and contiguous to Toronto is essential to the commercial development of the city ;

"And whereas no satisfactory plan of development can be devised and carried out without permanent concentration of authority ;

"And whereas the proper development of the waterfront will enrich the city many millions by enhancing the actual value of its property in Ashbridge's Bay and elsewhere ;

"Be it therefore resolved that this meeting most strongly urges placing the management of our waterfront in the hands of a commission, and that the Secretary be instructed to forward a copy of this resolution to the Mayor, Board of Control, and Council of the city of Toronto, with a request for immediate action."

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

Price-cutting and Rebating in British Columbia—Talk of Summer Half Holiday —Device of London Grocer for Turning Lights Off in His Store at a Certain Time—Something Original in Window Dressing.

Half-holiday Question.

Lindsay, Ont., March 17.—The time is fast approaching when the question of early closing will be again before the grocers. It is understood that this summer the grocers will consider arranging for a half-holiday on which to run an excursion and have a day of sports. To make such a day an annual affair might not come amiss and would tend to establish a deeper and more friendly relationship between the clerk and the employer.

Thirty Feet of Plate Glass.

Berlin, Ont., March 17.—One of the recent additions to the retail establishments of Berlin is the grocery store of George Faber. The store is located on Weber Street, West, near the Grand Trunk station. It has a frontage of over thirty feet, practically all glass, giving it an exceptionally fine appearance, which is enhanced by the tastily-arranged and clean stock. Mr. Faber formerly conducted a grocery store, but sold it to start a factory for the manufacture of aluminum ware, with two brothers, but recently disposed of his interest in that business to return to his first love, the retail grocery business.

Price-cutting and Rebating.

Vancouver, B.C., March 15.—Manufacturers of some of the standard brands of flour are annoyed at the action of some grocers in Vancouver cutting the price from the regular quotation of $1.90 to $1.75. It is done to entice business, the reduction in such a prominent staple acting as quite an inducement. The flour is sold with a fixed retail price, so as to make it fair to all grocers, but even this is not carried out. A traveler for one of the Manitoba houses found his flour advertised thus in a window, and it may be that some action will be taken, if it is found possible.

Along this line, the remarks of another traveling salesman might be quoted, though the truth to offenders might not be palatable. He said that there was too much cutting into another's business in what he considered a manner not legitimate. For instance, a large grocer here has been buying from a certain wholesale house for years. Another wholesaler comes along and asks for his business or a part of it, and when it is seen there is not much chance of a change swings the scales with an offer of a gunny of sugar with every order of so much. The prospect of getting something for nothing wins the day.

Lights Turned off by Alarm Clock.

London, March 17.—"The best ad. we've got," is what John S. Cummings, manager of John Diprose's No. 1 grocery on Dundas Street, says of their plan of window illumination at night. The windows of this store have been dark for some nights, and enquiry was made if the plan had been dropped. It appears, however, that John Cummings' alarm clock, which shuts off the electric lights at a certain hour, is out of order, but it will soon be repaired.

The windows of this store, as well as Mr. Diprose's other two stores on Dundas and Richmond Streets, are always dressed in a particularly attractive manner, and they are generally well lighted till late in the evening. All three stores are situated where large numbers of people pass during the evening, and although they close early, there is no doubt that many sales are made next day on the strength of the display of the previous evening. Oranges and other fruits are used extensively, and the price tickets are not forgotten. New lines of goods and seasonable articles are often given an introduction in this way to prospective buyers.

"I used to have two clocks," said Mr. Cummings, "one to turn on the lights at half-past eight, and the other to turn them off."

"Do they never fail?" he was asked.

"Only twice, the lights burned all night."

"What does it cost you?"

"About 38 cents per night."

The plan is not followed by many grocers in the city, presumably for lack of a clock arrangement. They naturally will not go to the considerable inconvenience of coming up town from their homes to turn off lights late at night.

Viaduct Made of Canned Soups.

Toronto, March 17.—Something unique in window display was shown last week by R. Higgins & Son, Yonge Street, consisting of soups and condiments so formed as to represent the much-talked-about Yonge Street viaduct. The pillars were built up with the soup cans, and railway tracks were graded over the viaduct. The display also showed a locomotive with cars attached, loaded with soup. A number of miniature automobiles, as well as delivery carts, were in the foreground all loaded with cans of soup.

The whole scene was flanked and backed up by pyramids of the same goods. These, with large dummy cans and handsome red and white banners, together with show cards, etc., made an effective display and caused considerable talk among those who saw it. It also increased the sales of canned soups in the Higgins' store.

R. H. Patchett, with R. Higgins & Son, was the artist who dressed the window and originated the idea of the viaduct.

Combating Mail Order Houses.

Hamilton, March 16.—"The retailer who is not afraid of work, and is willing to use both his brains and his hands in building up his business, need have no fear of big store competition," remarked a business man here recently. "It is not the progressive merchant who is hurt the worst; it is the man who fears to try some new plan for fear it will fail. The retailer with plenty of backbone will try one thing after another, knowing that a plan which will interest some people will not appeal to others. He does not try one plan, then give up the fight and croak about the mail order houses ruining his business. That is exactly the kind of advertising that kind of house wants. They are progressive, and are going after customers every day. The more you whine about them the surer your customers are that you cannot sell in competition with them.

"Some say the best thing to do is to never mention them to your customers, as it only advertises them that much more, but that depends upon how you mention them. If you are always croaking about how they are ruining your business, you are advertising them. If, on the other hand, you are always able to tell your customers of some new thing you have to sell which is just as cheap as the catalogue houses offer it, or a little cheaper, or of better quality, you there have a talking point which gives you an advantage, and as you are on the ground and talking direct to your customer it ought to be an easy matter for you to compare your goods with those in the big store catalogue for an hour at a time and still show that the customer can save money trading at home, quality considered.

"The first thing you need for this big fight is to make a thorough study of the store catalogues and compare prices with your own. Do not take the word of anyone else as to what the big store people ask for the same kind of goods you handle. Look at the figures, and the more you study the figures and the goods described, the more confidence you will have in your own ability to sell goods."

TRADE NOTES.

E. Dion, merchant, Valleyfield, Que., is adding a confectionery department to his business.

Primeau Bros., grocers, Valleyfield, Que., are adding an account register to their store equipment.

At a representative meeting of the merchants of Fredericton, N.B., held recently, it was also decided to hold another meeting at an early date to discuss the advisability of forming a Business Men's League and of holding a Merchants' Week.

Figuring Waste in Meats When Fixing the Prices

Writer States that Average Grocer Does not do This—Loss in Shrinkage and in Waste-Ends—Mistakes Made by the Careless Grocer in Cutting Prices—In Many Cases He is Selling at an Actual Loss.

By Victor Lauriston.

"I don't believe," declared a grocer the other day, "that the average grocer has any conception of the actual cost of the meats which, in this day of high prices, he still sells as a rule at the same figure as he did a few years ago.

"To my mind the meat trade is something which needs the closest attention to make it profitable. Even with the closest attention the risks of loss are great.

"I don't think," he concluded, "that the average grocer pauses for a single moment to take into account his inevitable loss through waste."

All of which affords food for thought.

Does the grocer who handles meat products—and pretty nearly every grocer does handle them—ever ponder upon the inevitable loss involved through waste, and has he any conception of the amount of shrinkage which takes place?

Take the item of cooked ham, for instance. A few years ago cooked ham, bought for about 18c a pound, was retailed at about 30c, affording a comfortable margin of profit. At the present time it costs from 22c to 25c. In fact, after allowing for removal of the skin, the cost figures all of 26c in many cases. But it is still sold at about 30c.

Loss From the Waste-End.

This would not be so bad were all the ham sold at this price. But with every ham there is a waste-end for which, in the average small city, to say nothing of country towns, the grocer is glad to receive as low as 10c lb., where it does not become a dead loss. In large cities there is usually a good demand for ends. There is a certain class of people who make a practice of buying them, enabling the grocer to maintain a fair price. But in the small city or town there is no such class; with the result that the grocer sells for what he can get.

The size of the waste-end varies, depending largely on the way the ham is cut. In some cases it may run as high as a pound; but half a pound is a fair average. Even half a pound at 10 cents serves to pull down the retail price per pound quite a bit nearer the price the grocer pays.

Then there is the problem of shrinkage. The shrinkage depends upon the age of the ham. the manner in which it is kept, the speed with which it is disposed of, and other items to which the grocer is apt to give little thought. Enquiry of a grocer who has thought upon this matter brings forth a startling statement.

Loss From Shrinkage.

"A twelve-pound ham will shrink one pound in a week," he stated.

This statement, moreover, was based, not on guesswork, but on actual investigation, he claimed. The shrinkage, as stated, depended on the conditions under which the ham was kept, and how much air it got. If there was not enough air, the ham would mould; while if it were kept in a draft sufficient to prevent it from moulding, the loss would be as the grocer had stated—one pound a week.

Rather a novel dilemma? but the condition is one which, to a greater or lesser extent, applies to most of the lines carried in the meat-dealing grocer's stock in trade.

Where meat is, as in the case of cooked ham, the problem of waste calls for exceptional watchfulness. The loss of a small section of canned corn beef will eat up the profits upon many pounds.

In no branch of the grocery trade does cleanliness count so high; and the buyer who for anything else would be content to go away and let the grocer put things up himself, is apt to stand by watchfully while his meat is being sliced. Whoever else may be willing to take it, he for one doesn't want the fag end, while he is on his guard against any part of the "main chunk" that looks suspicious to his hypercritical eyes.

Strict cleanliness must be observed, and waste of any kind guarded against. With even the most careful grocer, there is bound to be waste to some extent.

The Mistake of Cutting Prices.

To the careful grocer, it is a hardship that a large number of grocers never think of these things, and never stop to calculate just what effect waste has upon the ultimate cost and profit. To such grocers cooked ham—to revert to that topic—simmers down to the following business proposition, at least in one particular instance:

Purchase price per lb.....	24c
Selling price, per lb.....	30c
Profit, per lb.....	6c

Nor does such a grocer ever reflect that the amount of ham which he buys at 24c (more or less), is likely to differ as much as a couple of pounds from the amount which he sells at 30 cents, and to differ, too, to his own disadvantage.

The hardship to the careful grocer lies in the fact that his careless and non-reflecting contemporary, relying upon the superficial figures just given, religiously believes that he can now and then cut his cooked ham to 28c, or even 25c, and still sell it at a slight but safe margin over his original investment. Such competition is all the more regrettable in that it is based upon a wrong conception of the exact financial status of the meat trade, and that the grocer who cuts is doing so, not merely to his fellow-grocer's detriment, but also to his own.

FITTING A MODERN GROCERY.

Halifax, N.S., March 16.—The new commodious grocery of T. F. Courtney & Co., was opened to the public last week. The new store is considered to be one of the most modern and finely fitted groceries in the city. Everything about the premises is of the most up to date kind. During the opening day hundreds of persons visited the premises and enjoyed the refreshments and the music furnished by an orchestra.

The building is situated at the corner of Jacob and Brunswick Streets and is quite an addition to the north end of the city. It is a four story brick structure with red stone facings, and is decidedly attractive. The store is the centre of attraction, as it is brilliantly lighted by a multitude of electric lamps, the shelves are well filled and the fixtures show up to good advantage. Modern bins are used for biscuits and other goods carried out of packages. The smaller bins have mirror fronts. The cases are of oak, which is the wood used in all the fixtures, a pleasing uniform effect being obtained.

The big oak refrigerator is one of the features of the store. About a half ton of ice can be stored in it. It contains self-contained compartments and is well ventilated. Silent salesmen hold the tobacco goods and the confectionery.

Automatic scales are on several of the counters. The mechanism of these visible from both sides of the counter and they do their work swiftly and with absolute accuracy. The counters are detached, with spaces between for passage and there is much window space for the display of goods. The spacious appearance of the store is intensified by the absence of pillars, one in the rear of the shop being the only obstruction. The floors are of hard wood, and the building is heated throughout with a modern system of hot water. The firm have also installed a modern electric coffee grinder, which will turn out a pound of ground coffee in fifteen seconds.

A DOZEN MAXIMS.

The following twelve maxims formed part of the will of Meyer Anslem Rothschild, the founder of the great banking house at Frankfort:

Seriously ponder over and thoroughly examine any project to which you intend to give your attention.

Reflect a long time, then decide very promptly.

Go ahead.

Endure annoyances patiently, and fight bravely against obstacles.

Consider honor a sacred duty.

Never lie about a business affair.

Pay your debts promptly.

Learn how to sacrifice money when necessary.

Do not trust too much to luck.

Spend your time profitably.

Do not pretend to be more important than you really are.

Never become discouraged; work zealously and you will surely succeed.

THE LATE W. H. SEYLER.

The Grocer wishes to acknowledge—and state its appreciation of—the many expressions of sympathy that have been received in connection with the death of the late W. H. Seyler.

In common with a large circle of friends in the trade, the staff of this and the other MacLean papers feel his loss keenly. The bereaved family have found a great deal to comfort them in the numerous evidences of the esteem in which the late Mr. Seyler was held by those with whom for years he came in almost daily contact in a business way.

DRIED AND CANNED FRUITS.

With the housewife's stock of home made fruits running low in many cases, grocers should give some extra attention to canned and dried fruits just now.

Prunes, apricots, pears and peaches are among the dried fruits that should be good sellers, as well as canned apples, plums, pears, peaches, etc.

How to attract buyers is a question which naturally arises and one of the best answers is through the window display. A few clean, attractive trims using the above mentioned articles are bound to bring business especially if a few price tickets and show cards are utilized.

The show card might be used to describe the uses of the goods shown while price tickets are often alone responsible for making sales.

In addition to the displays, the selling plan should be backed up by some strong talking points in the local paper or if there is no paper by means of circulars. Dried and canned fruits will sell and sell well until we again hear from the strawberry growers. What is needed is some energy behind the selling plan and some judgment.

LICENSE FEE IN B. C.

In last week's issue reference was made to the repeal of objectionable features of the British Columbia Extra-Provincial Corporation Act, and the new act now in force.

The features which did not appeal to manufacturers were that Canadian business houses holding Dominion charters, or charters from any of the other provinces were forbidden to do business in British Columbia through travelers, agents or commission houses, until they had first secured a license at a cost of from $25 to $250, according to capitalization, under penalty of a heavy fine per diem, coupled with a refusal to concede any status to such a company when attempting to use the British Columbia courts to collect debts.

Under the new act it is stated that taking orders for, or buying or selling goods by travelers or by correspondence, so long as the company has no resident agent or representative and no office or place of business in British Columbia, shall not be deemed a carrying on of business within the meaning of the Act. Firms doing business through a branch, a commission house, a broker or resident agent, or who carry stock in the province, must provide themselves with a license, but those confining their business to such sales as may be effected through correspondence or through travelers not residents of British Columbia are exempt.

Another section provides a penalty of $50 per day for every company doing business illegally, and states that so long as it remains unlicensed it shall not be capable of maintaining any action, suit or other proceeding in any court in British Columbia in respect of any contract made in whole or in part within the province. There is, however, a proviso to the effect that upon the granting of a license, any action, suit or other proceeding may be maintained as if such license had been granted before the institution of any such action, suit or other proceeding.

For a company whose nominal capital does not exceed $10,000, the fee applicable to extra-provincial corporations, is $25.

For a company whose nominal capital exceeds $10,000, the fee of $25 shall be paid with the following additional fees: For every $5,000 of nominal capital or part of $5,000 after the first $10,000 up to $25,000, $5; for every $5,000 of nominal capital or part of $5,000 after the first $25,000 up to $500,000, $2.50; for every $5,000 of nominal capital or part of $5,000 after the first $500,000, $1.25; provided that companies having less than 50 per cent. of their capital invested in British Columbia may commute the fee applicable under the above schedule by a flat payment of $250.

PROTECTING RETAIL PROFITS.

At a meeting some time ago the London Retail Grocers' Association passed a resolution condemning the sale at 10 cents apiece, of goods costing $1 per dozen.

Recently the wholesale price of a well-known proprietary article that has always retailed at 10 cents per six-ounce tin was advanced by the manufacturers from 75 cents to $1 per dozen, subject to a trade discount of 5 per cent. in five case lots.

The London association has decided that its members would in future retail this article at 12½ cents per six-ounce tin.

At the old price of 75 cents the retailer made a gross profit of 45 cents or 60 per cent.

At the new price of $1, if he still sells at 10 cents a tin, he makes 20 cents or 20 per cent. This is increased to 26 per cent. gross, providing he buys in five-case lots.

At the selling price of 12½ cents per tin London retailers get $1.50 per dozen, or a profit of 50 per cent. on single case lots.

One reason the manufacturers give for advancing the price is that the cost of production has increased, due to the adoption of a new and improved formula that means a material betterment of quality. They purpose advertising extensively this improvement in the goods.

Higher quality furnishes an argument that will assist the London dealers in selling at the price they have decided upon.

The action of the London association reflects a growing feeling on the part of dealers generally that their profits must be protected. The Grocer hopes that it indicates a movement toward that time when we will see a better equalization of profits than at present. Now some lines of goods paying real good margin are expected to bear the burden of retailing expense on other lines that are actually handled at cost or even less.

WILL THERE BE TARIFF WARFARE?

If one can judge from the despatches which are being sent from Washington by the special corespondents of the daily newspapers, a very acute stage has been reached in regard to tariff matters between Canada and the United States.

The United States undoubtedly wish to take advantage of the provisions of the Payne-Aldrich tariff to squeeze some concessions from Canada, but in the event of this country refusing to comply with this wish, we can scarcely conceive it to be possible that it will bring down upon us the provisions of the maximum clause of the tariff.

The Globe's special correspondent at Washington said a few days ago, "that the view of the President's advisers seems to be that the crisis might be averted if Canada offered even a short list of articles on the intermediate schedule now given to other countries." He also said that "They see no other possible escape from the application of the maximum tariff."

This is rather throwing the onus on Canada, and not only that, but, by implication at least, would tend to give the impression that the President of the United States, under the conditions as they exist to-day, has no alternative other than to apply against Canada the maximum tariff. The clause in the maximum tariff which is designed to govern the action of the President of the United States in regard to the matter declares in brief that the maximum tariff shall only be levied against the government of any foreign country which unduly discriminates against the United States or the products thereof.

It has not been proven that Canada unduly discriminates against the United States. At any rate it does not appear that the special commissioners whom President Taft sent to Ottawa made any such discovery. No official statement has yet been given out, but the little that has leaked out does not at any rate infer that they did. In fact, the New York Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin, which had a special correspondent in Ottawa during the negotiations, declared that the United States delegates would unequivocally urge President Taft to tentatively, at any rate, accept any proposals which the Canadian Government may make and to leave the matter open for further discussion and for a larger scheme of adjustment.

A tariff war between the two countries would be a serious thing. Tariff wars, like actual warfare, cannot be waged without injury to both parties. Those which have broken out between continental European countries in years gone by prove this.

While the onus for any such warfare cannot be accepted by Canada, if there is anything she can do to prevent it without sacrificing her principles or her dignity she should do so. The spirit of compromise is a good thing for nations as well as for individuals. But Canada cannot consider anything which would result in injury to any phase of her industrial life. Public opinion would not for one moment countenance it. Canadians have not yet forgotten the tariff treatment that has been accorded them and is still being accorded them by the United States, and they are in no mood to submit even to the appearance of dictation from that country.

If Canada had discriminated against the products of the United States the trade returns would certainly show it. For every $2 worth of goods which we buy from them they in return only buy $1 worth from us. And we are to-day their third best customer.

The average percentage of the duty collected on the $180,000,000 worth of goods imported from the United States last year was 12½ per cent., which was only a small fraction of one per cent. higher than the average levied on goods imported from Great Britain, which of course enjoys a preference in our market. As the average duty on imports from all countries was 16½ per cent. it can readily be seen that the average rate levied on products from the United States is lower.

No less than $80,500,000 of our imports from the United States last year were free of duty while from Great Britain the value of the free imports was only $18,500,000. To put it in other words, of our total imports from the United States 57 per cent. were free and from Great Britain only 25.

It is a significant fact that Canada's importations from Great Britain since 1897, when the preference went into operation, have not grown as rapidly as have the importations from the United States. In the one instance the increase up to March 31st, 1909, was 58 per cent., while the increase in the importations from the United States during the same period was no less than 65 per cent. During the period of 13 years our imports from the United States have increased three-fold, while their purchases from us during that same period have scarcely doubled.

If any country has reason to complain it is Canada, and we can quote no less an authority for saying this than the New York Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin, the largest and probably the most influential daily financial and commercial paper in the world. In its issue of March 11th it made this significant statement: "Tariff war is what we have been inflicting upon Canada ever since 1890 and earlier. Every tariff since 1890, except the Wilson Act (and even that in certain particulars) has made it harder for Canada to do any business in the United States."

The so-called minimum tariff of the United States is after all but a subterfuge. It is, as the New York Journal of Commerce says, "nothing but the general tariff, and concedes nothing." If the worst comes to the worst and the United States is determined to levy the maximum tariff against this country, we shall have to make the best we can out of it. If the maximum goes into force against us there will be no alternative for us but to put into operation the surtax of 33 1-3 per cent. on the tariff, which for seven years was imposed on the importations from Germany.

While tariff warfare between Canada and the United States is something that all right thinking men should deplore, and try to prevent, Canadians cannot forget that the tariff poison which the United States administered to Canada in the McKinley and Dingley tariffs proved a tonic to the industrial life of this country.

It is understood that President Taft is of the opinion that were it not for the treaty Canada has with France, which grants that and thirteen other countries favored nation treatment in this country, there would be no obstacle whatever in the way of exempting Canada from the operations of the maximum tariff. But the treaty with France was not designed to discriminate against the United States.. It was negotiated some three years ago and was practically closed then, ratification only being suspended in order that certain little inequalities might be rectified. Canada as a self-respecting nation could not refuse to ratify the treaty at the eleventh hour because of a possibility that the United States would not look upon it with favor.

If President Taft is anxious to prevent tariff warfare with Canada, and it is said that he and his Cabinet are anxious to prevent this, he should not have to seek far for a reason for not putting the maximum tariff in operation. The leading men of the United States, business, professional and political, to say nothing of the strongest newspapers, would be at his back. It is to be hoped that these interests will be sufficiently strong to influence him in his ultimate action.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—

Canned Tomatoes—Advanced.
Sugar—Steady Market.
Molasses—Good demand.
Peas—Weaker market.

Montreal, March 17, 1910.

An advance in tomatoes is the feature of the markets this week. Demand has been so strong, and so steady, that the higher price demanded will be paid without question. The high prices asked for meats is responsible in a large measure for the continued activity in canned goods. Canned lobsters are quoted this week—the new season fish.

Sugar is steady, with an advance more likely than a decline. Dried fruits are in good demand. Molasses continues a seller, with syrups less active. Nuts are firm. Teas are steady. Beans are strong and peas weak.

Sugar—The markets are firm, with no change since last week in the general situation. At present an advance seems much more likely than a decline.

Dried Fruits—Advices from California state that the markets are still quite firm for prunes and raisins. Locally prunes are selling freely, spring demand causing considerable activity. Prices here rule steady. Stocks of Valencia raisins are running low and prices are firmly held. Cheap to medium grades of Malaga raisins have been moving freely, but stocks are practically exhausted. Some lots are on the way, however, and will be received shortly. Currants are featureless. The demand for dried fruits generally has been satisfactory of late.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—An advance in tomatoes is the feature of the canned goods market this week. Demand from trade and consumers alike has been particularly strong for some weeks past, and the advance is not a surprise under the circumstances. All vegetables have been selling freely of late, largely owing to the high prices asked for meats. Corn and peas are steady. Opening prices for 1910 lobsters were announced this week. They are as follows: ½ lb. flats, $2.40 doz.; 1 lb. flats, $4.50 doz.; 1 lb. talls, $4.25 doz. These figures are quoted on stock to be delivered June-July. TORONTO — Although Montreal quotes tomatoes higher there is no change here. Jobbers claim that tomatoes should be advanced and from the feeling among them, retailers cannot make a mistake in buying at present prices. The stock is rapidly diminishing and it is supposed that not only tomatoes, but also peas and corn will all be required before new goods will be available. The best lines of salmon may also be all sold out before the season is over. Canned vegetables may go higher, but it is almost certain that they will not go lower.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—

Sugar—Not much moving.

Prunes—Good demand.

Canned Vegetables—Getting scarce.

Toronto, March 17, 1910.

The wholesale trade this week has not measured up to the expectations of the wholesalers. It has been quiet and some said it was dull, while others would admit no more than "they could have done more business if it had come their way."

There is nothing of any special interest to report. The markets in all lines are steady, but a notable feature is the fact that all goods have an upward tendency. Although sugar has taken a rest in its wild upward course, there are no indications that the leap was a mistake. The market is very strong, and after a little rest another upward move would not be unexpected. While sugar has reached the $5.20 point it is still not much above the average and much lower than it was in 1905, which is only a few years ago.

Dried fruits have so far not moved in proportion to other goods, but this is owing to the large quantities of preserved fruits. Their best selling time, however, is during the spring, so that they may still reach their usual sales.

Sugar—After several weeks of excitement and advances with heavy purchases the sugar market has lapsed into a state of unusual dulness. This is accounted for from the fact that heavy buying was done, and now all are supplied and little is required. The market, however, is very strong, and shows no sign of weakness. It is the general opinion that present prices will be fully maintained for some time and the out-

What a Clerk Said

An experienced clerk, starting with a man beginning a general store business, wrote me the other day enclosing an opening order for RED ROSE TEA and Estabrooks' Blends, and said "I was telling him it would pay him to push Red Rose Tea."

It always pays to push good tea. Let the opposition sell the cheap tea. The more he sells of it the better it will be for your business, so long as you push the better grades. There is neither money nor reputation in selling poor cheap tea. Let the other fellows do it if they want to. When you sell "good tea" you are sure to please your customers, and that is where the real profit is, the double profit—

(1) The cash register profit.
(2) The good-will profit.

It will pay YOU to push

Tea—"Tea is very firm just now," was remarked by one of the large dealers, but while a slight advance means much to big dealers, it does not affect the retailer so much because so many teas are sold in packages at fixed prices.

Coffee—Quietness rules in this market and not having any news to report in the coffee line, one of the large coffee houses showed the writer through their factory, and explained the process the coffee is put through in preparation for the retail grocer. This was certainly interesting and proved that it requires great skill and care to get it exactly right to give the best results.

Winnipeg, March 17, 1910.

The output is quite as heavy as can be expected. In comparison to other years, it is found that the volume of trade is much in excess. Whether it is as large per capita, however, is another question. During 1909 the total immigration into Canada was about 100,000, and this will explain the growth of business in every line.

There have also been many new stores opening in every centre of the west, and there is room for many more. Last week two opening orders were taken in southern Manitoba. Also last week a trainload of one hundred and seventy-five United States settlers were unloaded at the Town of Kindersley, Alberta, and two of that number are opening stores in that place. These facts, together with the bright prospects for an excellent business year, and an early spring rush of business, gives the trade a good aspect.

Wholesalers are already making preparations to take care of the railway construction camp trade, which is always heavy. Manufacturers, canners and packers everywhere are prepared to utilize all crop products in order to meet the demand for goods.

This week has seen an increase in the ordering, which goes to show that the country trade is more active. The cereal market is still quiet, with the exception of beans, which seem to be cornered in crop centres.

There seems to be a steady tendency to advance the general lines and prices this week are on the whole stronger.

Sugars—There was a further advance of 10c per 100 lbs. to all points in Saskatchewan last week. Alberta and Manitoba prices are unchanged. In Winnipeg, B. C. sugars are 5c per 100 lbs. under Montreal sugars. The market is firm and a further advance may be looked for.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, March. 17, 1910.

At last an advance in the price of sugar has been announced on the Coast, the increase being from $5.60 to $5.80. The change has been slow in coming, and it was thought because of the presence of a foreign product in this market, at a cheaper price, that an advance might not be made. The sugar from Glasgow is quoted at $5.25, and so far notification has not been received of an advance in this.

California eggs have dropped to 32 cents, while eastern eggs remain at 30 cents. Locals are to be had in good quality and quantity now at 40 cents, so the supply just now is good.

Eastern butter is strong at 30 cents, and there is talk of an advance to 31 and even 32 cents. It is claimed that selling eastern at 30 cents, gives no profit, as it takes that much to land it here. Local butter is still very high, but with the advent of spring weather, which is now in the air, better quality and more reasonable prices should come.

Manitoba cheese can be found at 14 cents. The quotation might be given at this figure, though it is more of a price to meet current conditions. Prices in this market are not governed by what they are in the east, but by the supply and demand. If the stocks are large, prices are lower, but if the demand is keen and stocks not too large for ultimate clearing, the figure is stiff at about what the trade will stand. Lack of competition in the instance say of the dog biscuits referred to two or three weeks ago, also helps to hoist the price.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, N.S., March 17, 1910.

Fine weather conditions and improved roads helped business greatly during the past week. Some of the jobbers report an increased demand for canned goods both fruit and vegetables. Sugar is now steady there being no change in the price since last report.

Dairy butter is coming in more plentifully but the quality is only fair. Prices are a shade firmer but as the advance is small it is thought to be only temporary. Eggs are coming on the market in fairly good supply and prices are a little easier. Fresh laid stock can now be purchased for 24 cents per dozen.

Fish is in good demand and the grocers who handle certain lines of salt and pickled fish report heavy sales. Onions continue firm, but the price is unchanged.

A marked advance in the price of pork products has been the feature of the local markets during the past week. American clear pork is up $1.50 per barrel, and pure lard is a cent a pound higher. United States and Canadian plate beef are also quoted much higher, and eggs are likewise firmer.

INFORMATION TO BUYERS.

Supplied to the Trade by Sellers.

John Fullerton, of Rowat & Co., Glasgow. Scotland, is in Canada at present, on his annual visit. He crossed with A. G. Snowdon, of Snowdon & Ebbitt, Montreal, who are now agents for Rowat's pickles and olives, and Paterson's sauce, for Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba and the Northwest. Mr. Fullerton and Mr. Snowdon were in Ottawa and Kingston this week.

MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co. are now booking orders for their new season's Beauce Brand Maple Syrup. They expect early delivery and improved quality this year. Prices and samples forwarded to buyers promptly.

Another United States manufacturing concern come to a realization of the importance of the Canadian field is the C. B. Knox Company, of Johnstown, N.Y., who have secured premises on St. Paul St., Montreal, where up-to-date machinery is being installed for the manufacture of Knox's gelatine. W. H. Dunn is sales agent for the Province of Quebec.

Attention is being drawn by the Imperial Syrup Company, Montreal, to the fact that they intend to prosecute all dealers selling "Beauce Brand" maple syrup, if same is not put up under their name, as the brand is registered by the company.

When the Ontario Lantern & Lamp Co. added their Patent Positive Automatic Safety Lock to their "Banner" cold blast lanterns, one would have thought that this lantern was as near perfect as human ingenuity could make it. This, however, was not the opinion of the makers and they have been constantly experimenting during the past twelve months and the result to-day fully repays their watchful zeal which will prove an inestimable boon to all users of lanterns. The "Banner" 1910 is certainly a winner. Not content with one improvement, there are several and we should advise all traders handling this class of goods to wait and see this wonder of 1910.

As all grocers know, the "Adulteration of Food" Act makes the vender directly responsible for the quality of the goods he sells and in case of trouble he is the one who suffers unless he protects himself when buying from the manufacturer or dealer. In an article recently written by A. McGill, Chief Dominion Government Analyst, he states: "The Adulteration Act recognizes the importance to the retailer, of his dependence upon the honesty of the manufacturer, and provides for his being able to call into the case, as third party, the manufacturer himself. This he does by the production of a Warranty from the manufacturer; and it is not too much to ask of any person, having intelligence enough to go into business at all, that he should be wise enough to secure himself by having such a guaranty furnished him with all goods he buys. For the further protection of the retail dealer, the Act provides a form of guaranty, so that he cannot plead anything but his own gross ignorance, or carelessness, if he fails to fully protect himself against all charges of having, with knowledge, any adulterated goods in his stock." Realizing the importance to the grocer of full protection White Swan Spices & Cereals, Limited, are now placing on every package of White Swan Brand spices and coffees—large or small—the form of warranty approved by the Government. This is given voluntarily to their customers to insure them against trouble for any reason. In other words the grocer has their warranty in the proper form which places the onus on them as manufacturers. This voluntary Act on the part of White Swan Mills (no other Canadian manufacturer gives this warranty) will, doubtless, be fully appreciated and taken full advantage of by the trade.

Limit of Prices of Hog Products Not Yet Reached

Another Series of Advances Occur — Lard Goes up Also— Shortage of Supply Shows the Reason—Fresh Butter Higher— Receipts of Fresh Eggs Increasing.

Irrespective of all that has been said and written about the high cost of living, the price of hog products are still going higher, as the people will have them in spite of all the newspaper talk. And as long as they eat more than the country will produce they will have to pay the top figures. The production of hogs both in Canada and the United States is about 25 per cent. less than last year. This, with the increased demand, will naturally keep prices very high for some time to come.

The butter market in general is firm with a fair demand, enabling holders as a rule to clean up at a profit and get ready for the next season.

While the cheese trade throughout the year has not been very profitable to all the dealers, there are, however, comparatively small quantities on hand and these are good value at present prices.

MONTREAL.

Provisions.—Remarkable strength is being displayed in hogs and all by-products. The scarcity is quite marked, and packers have no hesitation in periodically raising quotations. This week several advances will be remarked. Hams are higher by one cent all along the line, while fat back pork is up 50c. Demand continues strong, despite high prices which tends to further strengthen the situation.

Provisions—Hogs are up higher, and cured meats have advanced from half to two cents per lb. all round. Butter—The butter market is active. Prices are from 1 to 2c up for the best fresh-made butter, and the demand is good. The cold storage creamery is diminishing, and is giving the holders some profit. On account of the high price of lard, the lower grades of butter are also finding sale. With the good prices and the time of the year when the make will increase, it is reasonable to suppose that the supply will soon exceed the demand and prices will decline.

ALL CLOSING AT 6.30.

Members of Grocers' Association Decide To Have a Longer Rest.

The Retail Grocers' Association of Kalamazoo, Michigan, after a canvass of all the grocers in that city, have united in establishing an early closing hour.

Commencing with February 14, these merchants suspended business each evening at 6.30, excepting Wednesdays and Saturdays, and as the grocers have for some time past expressed themselves as being in favor of this movement, it is to be adhered to rigidly, out of consideration alike for the employe and employer.

The agreement having been made by all the grocers, the chance of any loss of business is eliminated.

This is another instance of what getting together will accomplish. In this case, where all grocery stores close at 6.30 the buying can and will be done before that time.

TRADE NOTES.

The grocers who are members of the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association have decided to close their stores on Good Friday.

W. J. Andrew, formerly of Mulmur, who has been on a farm at Blyth, Ont., for the past six or seven years, has given up farming and bought out a grocery business in Blyth.

The Bowmanville News says :—The Canadian Grocer is one of the best trade journals that comes to this office. Every grocer should be a subscriber. Each week a page or more is devoted to "Practical methods used in retail grocery stores" sent to this magazine by successful grocers from Vancouver to St. John. How is it we never see any suggestions from Bowmanville grocers ?

PLENTY OF CUBAN SUGAR.

E. S. Kirkpatrick, Canadian Trade Commissioner at Havana, Cuba, says under date of Feb. 1st:—Now that the "Zafra" or sugar harvest is on in Cuba in earnest, and all the mills are working to their utmost capacity day and night for seven days in the week, some estimates regarding Cuba's great crop may be of practical interest.

Last year 171 mills were in operation; this season 174 are busy, while the improvements made in many make possible an increased output. At the beginning of the grinding season last year the best estimate of the Cuban sugar crop was 1,397,571 tons; the total amount of sugar ground during the past season was 1,513,582 tons, which shows that sugar estimates are made on a conservative basis.

After a thorough survey of the situation, Pedro M. Conception, a well-known writer on the sugar industry, estimates that 1,730,044 tons of sugar will be ground in Cuba this season. In these calculations the long ton (2,240 pounds) is used. Where the output is stated in bags, it is understood that each sack contains a little less than 13 arrobas (about 300 pounds). According to the estimates of Mr. Conception, the mills of Cuba will grind 11,924,000 bags of sugar this season, which would be 1,228,928 bags more than last year.

SAP'S RUNNIN'.

Reports from correspondents in Sherbrooke and Richmond, Quebec, state that the maple sugar season is on and that the initial run of sap was unusual for so early in the season. In Sherbrooke new sugar was offered last week for 12c. and new maple syrup at $1 per gallon. In Richmond the weather caused the sap to freeze up. Some was secured last week and new goods have been offered for sale there.

It takes all sorts of people to make a world, says a philosopher, but give me the cheerful people every time. Optimism has pessimism beat a mile, and especially in merchandising. Even if things are gloomy, there's no sense in dwelling upon the prospect and pulling a long face. Trouble is half cured when the victim resolutely determines to look upon the bright side of events and ignore the dark side. There are grocers whose gloomy, sour faces scare trade away from their shops. They have acquired the habit of being worried by little troubles, probably owing to chronic indigestion, sluggish liver or something similar, and their features become set in the melancholy, ill-tempered or discontented expression that does more harm to a trade then even excessive prices can do. Crack a smile when things look gloomy, and you'll feel the better for it.

P. J. Girard, grocer and crockery merchant, Richmond, Que., expects to open a new store about June 15th.

Probable Effect of Growing Crop on Flour Market

Tendency Will be to Weaken Prices if Fall Wheat Comes Out All Right—Little Changes Occuring at Present — The Oatmeal Decline.

The flour situation is uninteresting. The fight between the two opposing forces in the wheat market is even. One day the bulls may get the better and then again the bears, but on the whole the market has varied very little for several months. The prospects of the growing winter wheat crop is closely watched, but nothing has happened to affect the flour market.

It is still the impression that the farmers hold far more wheat than was expected and with the prospects of the new crop the market is inactive, and is waiting for something to turn up. Taking a view of the whole situation as it appears at the present time, the outlook is rather in favor of lower prices.

Flour.—The flour market is dull with no export demand, but the prices are well maintained. Millers still claim that they have to work on small margins, but they have to keep their customers supplied. Feed is high which gives them a good price for the offal and to that extent helps them out.

COST MARKS ON GOODS.

Some Suggestions for Using a System Which Can be Secretly Maintained.

Since the changing of the selling mark of an article in the average store from a blind figure to a plain figure, says a merchant, there has been a lost interest among clerks in the search for the key to the system. The average clerk of today does not puzzle his brain to discover the workings of the cost price as he did in years gone by, when it was necessary for him to know the key to the selling price, which was written in blind figures. There is, howere, he maintains, a necessity for the merchant to keep secret the cost price of his goods from his clerks. The better class of clerks if they discover the key to any cost mark, possibly, would not use it to the store's disadvantage, but there are many clerks coming in the store, who sometimes remain but a short time, and who do not understand the necessity for keeping secret the cost price of merchandise. If they learn the secret key they are inclined to spread the news that their employer is selling an article which cost $2 or $3, asking a dollar on on each sold. They do not understand that the selling expenses has anything to do with the matter.

Department stores in the larger cities make a practice of using a different cost mark for each department. This cost mark is usually changed each season. Now, that it is not far from the first of the year, this is a good time to change the cost mark and instal a different one, the old one having possibly become familiar to salesmen who are not now in the store. A mark of some sort is necessary to record the cost item of stock. All sorts of sytem of letters, characters or signs to represent figures have been devised, the primary purpose being a system that would, by the aid of the key, be clear to the salesman and unintelligible to the purchaser.

Some of these systems are so simple that even a novice can decipher it with a little study; others are made more difficult by the use of blinds and other complexities.

In the following lists a character must be substituted for naught in the nine-letter variety and the last letter of the eleven-letter variety used as a repeater.

A FELLOW came along this A.M. and said to me: "I see you're advertising FIVE ROSES pretty hard in the papers. I say, old fellow, do YOU write that "stuff? Why, you know, it's long enough to sell "automobiles. No woman's going to read that long-legged "'copy.' Seems to me flour's such a small matter that a nice "catchy picture is enough to keep the name before her. Cut "it short, old chap. Brevity's the soul of wit, you know."

And he sauntered away warbling, "Expert, That's Me."

Of course, Brother Grocer, brevity's the soul of wit, so it is.

But, you see, I'm not trying to be witty.

Comes natural, maybe.

Moreover, I'm not trying "to keep the name before the public." How I hate the man who started that phrase!

We simply try to explain to every busy, worried homemaker what "good" flour really is, and what it isn't, what good bread means, what pastries can be at their best.

So that when she wants such results and wants them in the "wuss way," she will think of FIVE ROSES and get them every time.

We try to keep the meaning of FIVE ROSES before the kitchen manager, not the name itself, which really means nothing when separated from the flour qualities it stands for.

FIVE ROSES is nothing but a combination of excellencies, and you must tell about these excellencies to excite desire in the buyer.

Not the pretty pictures we can buy, Brother Grocer, but what good flour we can make for YOU to sell, that's all our advertising is.

Just as we would speak to her over your counter with a sale of FIVE ROSES at hand.

Did you ever consider that flour is everything in the kitchen? Have you ever seen the look on a woman's face when taking a baking failure from the oven the day "hubby's" folks were coming to dinner?

I have, Brother Grocer.

That's why we tell her how to prevent accidents, soul-vexing mistakes.

That's why the FIVE ROSES "copy" is longer than usual, longer than the copy written by those who don't see it the way we do.

Don't YOU think we are right, Brother Grocer?

Don't you want to add such selling advertising to YOUR selling force?

Then sell FIVE ROSES, too.

FOUND HIS PROPER LEVEL.

Climbed to Presidency of House — A Grocery Trade Romance.

About thirty-seven years ago a tall, sinewy youth entered Francis H. Leggett's office and told him he wanted to enter his employ.

"Sit down," said Mr. Leggett, bluntly. "What can you do?"

"Well, I can tackle almost anything."

"But can't you do some one thing in particular; can't you keep books?"

"I can't say that I can keep books, but I will keep books, if you want to put me at it. All I desire is to get in! I'll find my proper level afterwards."

He went to work. He worked! Then he worked more! He never ceased working! Up he went, and before he knew it, he was handling Mr. Leggett's money behind a sign that read, "Cashier."

And it was not very long before he became the head of a department. The youth was growing, and his growth was the work which work wrought. He became vice-president. And it is evident that even then, when most men think, "It is about time now for me to take my ease and loll a while," he thought otherwise.

So, at a special meeting of the board of directors of Francis H. Leggett & Co., New York, held recently that boy of thirty-seven years ago, who knew how to stick to one thing until that thing was done, was unanimously elected president of the company in which he entered with no other thought than that of finding his level, plus the determination to succeed. He was John C. Juhring.

Geo. Bates, of Seaforth, Ont., has purchased the Broadway Grocery in Mitchell from W. M. Hord.

High Prices Not Standing in Way of Consumer—Carload Florida Tomatoes in this Week—Oranges in Great Demand—Potatoes a Little Firmer—Fresh Fish on the Market.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruits—During the week there has been a fair trade done in oranges and lemons, but aside from this there has been little activity in fruits of late. Favorable shipping weather did not increase sales appreciably. Monday's snowstorm put a further damper on the situation.

Vegetables—Potatoes are firmer this week, supplies which glutted the market a week ago having been fairly well cleaned up. Quotations at present range from 60c to 70c a bag, which is 5c higher than the best price obtainable a week ago. Demand is fairly brisk now that purchasers do not fear a sudden slump. Turnips are firmer, too, though transactions have not been numerous. Florida celery is easier this week by 25c, while mushrooms are selling at lower figures, too. Some firmness is displayed in red onions, which are 10c higher. Cucumbers are not coming in as freely as might be desired, and are worth more money. Tomatoes are still arriving from Florida, and prices are elastic. Business is satisfactory, on the whole.

Fish—Several lines of fresh fish are quoted this week, including dore, pike, perch and mullets, all locally caught, and mostly coming in by express. Dealers report strong and steady demand, especially from the Hebrew trade, in view of the approaching Jewish holidays, around Easter time. Stock which has come in so far has been satisfactory. Fillets are in better supply than they have been for some time, but prices are well maintained owing to continued demand. Finnan haddies, cured from fresh fish, are arriving, and selling freely, trade in the frozen article dropping off in consequence. Fresh cured kippered herring and bloaters, are also freely sold. In salted and pickled fish there is considerable activity in imported Holland and Scotch herring, consumed largely by the Jewish trade. The cold spell early in the week made better business. The coming of Good Friday next week will undoubtedly cause an increased demand for fish during the week.

Green Fruits—The apple market is still unsatisfactory. The demand is light. This is supposed to be owing to the supply the retail stores receive direct from the farmers. It seems rather strange and yet quite in line with the high cost of living craze that the wholesale houses are selling far more oranges than apples. The orange trade is enormous, and is constantly increasing. The frosted fruit is off the market, and the quality is now excellent. California navels, Floridas and Jamaicas are all in good demand. Grape fruit is another great seller and is more fashionable than apples. Strawberries are arriving in good condition and find ready sale at 60 to 65c a box.

Vegetables—All kinds of fresh vegetables are in abundance, and the turn over is large. High prices do not seem to stand in the way. In spite of our excellent quality of potatoes, cabbage, beets, etc., large quantities of new potatoes, new cabbage, new beets are coming in from the south and are selling at much higher prices. A car of Florida tomatoes arrived this week and is said to be in splendid condition. Florida celery is another article that meets with great demand, and so is cabbage, which both reach the city regularly in car lots. Prices of vegetables are high but will gradually get cheaper as we approach spring. The potato market is weak and lower prices will be accepted. With all our cheap potatoes and excellent qualities we are still importing some from the eastern provinces, and pay more for them. The reason they find sale here is because they are more of the same size, and in this respect our farmers might learn a lesson from them. California celery is off the market.

Fish—The cooler weather has improved the fish trade, and the demand is quite active. It is expected it will continue so during the remainder of Lent. Some lines are scarce, especially fresh caught fish. Finnan haddie are still scarce and 1c higher.

Determining the Value of the Retail Salesman

On what He Should be Judged—More to Learn Than Prices and How to Wrap up Groceries — What a Study of a Customer's Tastes Means in Holding Trade.

By F. W. Ross.

That there is a difference in the value of clerks is admitted by everybody, but if their earning powers and real value as salesmen are considered, and fully understood, the difference in their wages should be much greater.

Two men may work side by side, apparently of equal ability and who are drawing the same salary and yet one may be worth much more than the other. The difference in their services may not even be observed by the employer and yet there is a vast difference. Even if they should get the same amount of money in the till every day, that does not prove that they are of equal value.

If there is, therefore, a difference in the value of two good men, what is the difference between a good man and a poor man? If a young man has reached a point in his occupation where he no longer finds room for improvement, he will soon find that others have passed him and that he is a back number. The keen race through progressive methods is continually going on, and the moment one does not keep up the pace, he will fall behind. If then, the best retail salesmen have to struggle to keep at the head of the race, what about those who have never entered the race, who are mere counterfeits, as clerks, who have never learned enough about the grocery business to see any interest in it and who never think it worth while to read anything in connection with the business—in short, who do not know that their is anything to learn except the selling prices of goods, how to wrap them up, and make the change.

Must Have Judgment.

The most competent salesmen know that the greatest skill and knowledge is required to please and satisfy the customer, not merely while she is in the store, but the sales must be judiciously made, so that the customer will not regret when she gets home that she has been influenced to buy things she did not ask for. The customer should be made to feel that through the help of the grocer and his salesmen she just got what she wanted.

To assist people on the part of the grocer to buy to the very best advantage is one of the great secrets in the success of a salesman. It used to be said that anybody can sell things which people want, but it takes a good salesman to sell things they do not want. This is entirely wrong. It is better to hold a customer than to make a smart sale with a few cents profit and lose a customer who may be worth a good deal of money in a year. To learn this part of the clerk's duties is of the highest importance and requires the greatest perseverance and careful study.

To hold trade is the secret of success, and to do this one must have his heart as well as his mind in his work. This is by no means slavery, but here is the point where the work becomes interesting and enjoyable. No one has ever held trade on cut rate prices, but a well-trained clerk can not only hold trade, but he is constantly gaining new customers without cutting prices through his knowledge of true and right methods of doing business.

The value therefore of a good salesman cannot well be exactly estimated, but it is clear that there is room for young men to learn more of their work and increase the value of their services. I am not comparing an ideal salesman now, with one who is a bill of expense to his employer through blundering and ignorance, but with what is considered a good clerk, and yet I will show that there is a great difference between them.

Some save a great deal in taking bet- care of the stock, in being more accurate in weighing, more careful in making change, etc., but I will at present consider only the difference in clerks in holding and gaining trade.

A clerk may wait on a customer with all the qualities that make up an ordinary good salesman, and yet lack the judgment and knowledge which are necessary to permanently hold trade. The trick is not so much in making a favorable impression during the few minutes the customer is in the store, as to sell her the goods that will make a favorable impression during all the time she is using them. She will soon forget what you may have said to her, or even if you tried to please her by making a reduction in the price, but she will now judge her purchases entirely from the value and satisfaction she gets out of them.

To please the customer in the store so that she stays pleased during the week is the acme of good salesmanship, and a clerk who reaches this state of perfection is the one who is entitled to an advance in his salary.

Study Customer's Desires.

How to do this can be better done than described, but a good salesman must become familiar, as far as possible with the customer's circumstances, her ideas of economy, and then sell her the goods that will give her better satisfaction than if she had selected them herself. This can be done, and she will soon learn that your advice was in her interests and she will gain confidence and be a permanent customer. She will not only stay, but she will influence her friends, often unconsciously, to deal in the same store. What does this mean to the employer? In a business with 300 or 400 customers, if a grocer is able to hold 10 who would have been lost with poor salesmanship, and through them gain 10 new customers during a year, it means a profit of probably a thousand dollars.

This is gained through the superior knowledge of the clerk as a result of constant study and close application to business. There is no limit to the possible attainments of the salesman, and the more he learns the better will he enjoy his work.

WHERE NO FUNDS EXIST.

The directors of the Merchants' Association of New York City recently adopted a resolution as follows:

"Resolved, that the board of directors of the Merchants' Association of New York approves the law proposed by the American Bankers' Association to punish the giving of cheques or drafts on any bank or other depository wherein the person so giving such cheque or draft shall not have sufficient funds or a credit for the payment of the same,'

"Provided, however, that the penalties prescribed in the act be reduced to five hundred dollars or imprisonment of one year, or both."

Another resolution adopted by the same board follows: "Resolved, that the board of directors of the Merchants' Association of New York approves the draft of law passed by the American Bankers' Association 'to punish the making or use of false statements to obtain property or credit,' to be enacted in all states where this matter is not already covered by statute or by judicial decisions."

Objections in West Indies to Preference to Canada

Many Afraid it Would Offend United States Shippers—Delay of Canadian Goods Going to the Islands and Why it Occurs—Difference Between U. S. and Canadian Methods—System of Collecting Not Approved of.

By D. Williams, now in the Indies, and written especially for The Canadian Grocer.

A great deal of interest is at present being taken in the West Indies Islands in the question of closer trade relations with Canada. The visit of the Royal Commission to the different islands, collecting and hearing evidence upon the subject, has brought it prominently to the front, and it is being discussed freely in the different Chambers of Commerce, by the press, in private conversation upon the street, and elsewhere. The opinions one hears and reads upon the subject are varied according to the viewpoint of the speaker or writer, or to the probable effect any change of policy on the part of the islands may have upon his individual business.

Whether the present enquiry will result in anything definite being done in the near future seems doubtful; but whatever its outcome may be, it will have the effect of making the people of Canada and those of the West Indies much better acquainted with each other than they have previously been.

There is throughout the islands an almost universal feeling of great friendliness to Canada and a strong desire for closer relationships.

The greatest difficulty in the way of consenting to a preference to Canada is the fear of offending the United States, and thereby imperilling the market that now exists for West Indian products in that country. This feeling has, no doubt, been fostered by the agents of U. S. houses doing business in the islands, and is being worked for all it is worth to deter any move in that direction, because a substantial preference in favor of Canadian foods would sooner or later destroy the U. S. trade in several lines.

One of the lines that a preference to Canadian trade would materially benefit is flour. It is well known that the West India Islands do not grow wheat, so that all their flour has to be imported. In the Barbadoes, where there is a population of two hundred thousand people, the duty upon imported flour is one dollar per barrel, and in Trinidad, 80c per barrel, so that the effect of a substantial preference can readily be seen.

Slow in Filling Orders.

Apart from the fear of retaliation by the United States in case of a Canadian preference, there are some other objections to it by West Indian merchants, that would be well for Canadian millers and shippers of flour to seriously consider. One of these is the complaint that Canadians are not prompt in filling orders.

Several large flour handlers put it this way. They say: "Our climate being warm we cannot carry large stocks on account of the tendency to spoil quickly. A result of this is we are sometimes caught short when it is necessary to have prompt and immediate delivery..

"Now, if we cable to New York for say 500 barrels of flour, we can depend almost to a certainty that it will be shipped next boat, and as the steamboat service from there is more frequent and much faster than from St. John or Halifax, we get the flour in ten or twelve days after cabling."

A factor that enables New York commission houses to fill orders so promptly is the holding of large stocks of flour of almost every brand ready for immediate shipment. West Indian merchants say: "If we sent a similar order to Halifax or St. John, we could not depend on anything like such prompt service."

This is owing to several reasons. One of these is, there are no large commission houses handling every brand the same as in New York, and no large stocks are held at seaboard, enabling prompt shipment, but the order must be forwarded to the mill or office of the firm handling the respective brand. Another cause of delay is the infrequency of the steamboat service—every twelve days—while there are boats from New York every two or three days, and much faster than the Canadian steamers.

Too Much Substitution.

Another complaint frequently heard is that Canadian flour is not always up to standard and that there is too much substituting of similar brands, when the shipper does not have on hand the one ordered, while still another is, United States shippers study West Indian conditions more than Canadians and give them what they want and not what the shipper thinks they should have or what he has on hand. It should be borne in mind by all Canadian exporters to these islands that the merchants are largely English in their make-up, and consequently somewhat conservative in their ideas. A result of this is they want what they want, and naturally so, and not something else.

One merchant put it this way: "The Canadian too frequently give us what they have, while the English shipper usually gives us what we order."

One practice of Canadian shippers which is particularly annoying to West India merchants is that of drawing upon them with bill of lading attached. As the flour comes by the Canadian route, which takes twelve or fourteen days at best, and the draft usually by New York in eight days, the consequence is the latter often arrives before the shipment, and the merchant is under the necessity of either accepting the draft or allowing it to be returned. Either of these alternatives is very unpleasant to a reputable house.

If the Canadian shipper would take the trouble to enquire into the commercial standing of many of the West India houses, they would find their credit rating excellent, consequently could treat them as New York commission houses do—await remittance, which would be promptly sent forward. Of course, there is liability to get up against unreliable dealers, but this can be guarded against by the study of conditions and careful enquiry.

There appears to be little complaint of the general quality of Canadian flour, while the objections enumerated could be eliminated.

Complaints About Boat Service.

There is much complaint about the efficiency of the Canadian steam service, and it certainly is not all that could be desired. However, those complaining do not always give due consideration to all the circumstances. It should be remembered that a boat from Halifax or St. John must make a number of calls among the islands on the way down, where there is frequently more or less unavoidable delay in discharging the cargo. Few of the ports-of-call have docks, so that steamers are compelled to anchor some distance out, and land their freight, often in row barges, frequently of small size.

On our way down on the "Aurora" we called at Monserett to leave several tons of cargo. It was about ten p.m. when the boat cast anchor. Soon after four or five small boats came out to take the freight ashore, and brought over a number of men to help unload. Many of these were inefficient and the result was, the little freight that should have been taken off in a couple of hours, took nearly all night.

Among the cargo was a few thousand feet of lumber. For this the captain was unable to get a boat to take off at all, so was compelled to build it into a raft and float it ashore as best he could, towed behind the row boats that were unloading the balance of the cargo.

These are difficulties that time and improvement of harbors will no doubt remedy, but at present they exist.

There are a number of other articles, such as lumber, hay, fish, butter, cheese, etc., exported by Canada to the West Indies, nearly all of which could be materially improved by a careful study of conditions.

BOWSER

Long Distance System

For Handling

Kerosene or Gasolene

meets the highest approval because it is SAFE

The old method of handling oil by gravity or any kind of pressure was very dangerous, as a leak in a joint or elsewhere was most apt to result in an explosion.

Every feature of the Bowser Long Distance Underground Storage System meets the requirements of Insurance Companies and Fire Underwriters.

HEAR IS THE PLAN:--The oil is stored in a tank buried outside, any distance that you desire away from the building. The tank is made of best heavy sheet steel riveted and soldered, tested and guaranteed leak and evaporation proof. It is painted with three coats of asphaltum, which absolutely prevents the damp earth from acting upon the metal. The pump is the latest improved, all metal, and measures accurately gallons, half-gallons, quarts or pints at a stroke. The nozzle is fitted with a lever shut-off that absolutely prevents evaporation.

THE SYSTEM HAS NEVER CAUSED A FIRE, nor has an explosion of a Bowser Tank ever occurred. One hundred aud eighteen outfits passed through the San Francisco Fire--not one explosion resulted. Some of the pumps were warped and melted by the heat, but the oil remained in good condition in the tank. The Bowser System is safe in every way.

SODA-CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

To Win The Trade Of The Particular Home-Baker Just Get Her To Try One Bag Of

PURITY FLOUR

Every particular home-baker would like to improve the flavor, the color and the nutritiousness of her bread, if she knew how to do it.

You are the one who can tell her how to do it. Just advise her to use PURITY flour.

PURITY flour consists exclusively of the high-grade constituents of the hard wheat berry.

The Quality of PURITY shows in the baking.

The flavor of a PURITY loaf is much more delicious than a loaf made of lower grade flour.

The color is more delightful—a beautiful, snowy white loaf.

The nutritiousness—the food value—is greater, as the high-grade constituents of the hard wheat berry contain more nutriment than the low grade.

Of course, such a high-class flour as PURITY costs the customer more, but PURITY makes up the small difference in price by producing "More Bread and Better Bread"

Perhaps your customer may not want to buy a barrel or a 98-lb. bag of PURITY Flour for her first trial. She will, however, be easily persuaded to try a small bag—a 7, 14 or 24-lb. bag—especially when you tell her that PURITY Flour is guaranteed satisfactory or money refunded.

But after she has tried PURITY Flour she will be so delighted with her baking-day results that she will never again be willing to go back to a lower grade flour.

To improve your flour trade become a "booster" for PURITY Flour. Other dealers are finding that a profitable plan. Just send us an order by next mail—and ask us about our plans for helping the dealer increase his sales.

PURE FOOD PRODUCTS

PINK'S Food Products the World Over are Admitted to be the Perfection of Purity

Of the numerous and varied commodities manufactured by the great house of E. & T. Pink, the head and sole proprietor of which is Sir Thomas Pink, the best known and appreciated are Pink's Jams and Marmalade, the annual output of which reaches the enormous figure of 10,000 tons. To make a comparison and in order to demonstrate the magnitude of this output it may be mentioned that if the Jam was packed into one pound jars and the jars set in a straight line they would extend for considerably over 1000 miles.

To obtain the best knowledge of the work entailed in the manufacture of Pink's Jams one must needs visit the factory, to an inspection of which by their patrons, Messrs. Pink extend at all times a hearty welcome, but for those who are denied this highly interesting and instructive pleasure, the few following facts may be of interest :

The factory and stores cover a ground area of 7½ acres and have a floor space of 15 acres.

An army of 2,000 people are employed in making the Jam and operating the various branches of this vast business amongst which may be mentioned the manufacture of Confectionery, Pickles, Candied Peel, Jellies, Potted Meats and other Table Delicacies, Bottled Fruits, Spices, Mustard, etc., etc., the grinding of Pepper and Spice, the furnishing of all descriptions of Canned Goods, Fruits, Sardines, Salmon, Lobster, etc., and in fact all commodities applicable to the operating of a Grocery Store.

To aid the army of workers all kind of labor-saving machines and appliances are called into requisition as well as twelve steam boilers (3,600 H.P.) numerous steam and gas engines as well as electric motors, 100 Vans and Carts, 120 Horses, and in addition a fleet of Lighters, the latter being extensively used in connection with the ever-growing Continental and overseas export business of the firm.

Taking care of the customer and his requisitions are over 100 travelers and agents, which fact will convey to the ordinary commercial man the extent of the operations effected.

In the manufacture of their Jams, Pink's are easily first in the field in having the pick of the choicest fruits grown in the renowned fruit gardens of Kent and all the other fruit-growing districts of England, and thus it is ensured that all the fruit used in the manufacture of their wide-world known and sterling quality jams is freshly gathered day by day from the finest of the English fruit gardens. It may here be mentioned that as much as fifty tons (112,000 lbs.) of strawberry jam alone have from such daily arrivals of freshly gathered fruit been made in a single day.

Immediately upon the arrival of the fruit at the factory it is transported from the vans direct into the reception rooms and at once conveyed therefrom by elevator to the sorting department, where experienced operators remove the stalks and pick out any bruised specimens, the sound fruit being placed in scrupulously clean earthenware containers and therein carried by trucks to the boiling room where with the requisite quantity of the finest refined crystal sugar it is placed in the boiling pans of which there are 75, each having a holding capacity of one hundredweight. After the jam is made it is emptied into spotlessly clean receptacles which are transported by means of conveyances on wheels to the filling room.

In the filling room a large number of hands are employed to ladle the jam into a great variety of different sized glass and earthenware jars, cups, jugs, teapots, butterdishes, tumblers, tins, etc., etc., according to the requisition of each customer. As each container is filled it is carefully wiped on the outside so that any chance splashes may be removed therefrom, cleanliness in this factory being the ever predominant feature from the outset of the process of manufacture to the despatch of the goods ; the container is then placed aside for the jam to cool prior to being transported by elevator to the finishing department preparatory to despatch to the customer.

The finishing department consists of three large rooms where about 250 women are employed in covering and labelling the jars, etc. One has to see this process in order to believe that it takes the practised hands so short a time to top, cover, tie and label the container, wrap it up and affix another label to the wrapper. The completed article then being ready for the Grocer's counter.

The rapidity with which the whole process of manufacture and finish is effected, coupled with the scrupulous care in handling the goods precludes the entry therein of foreign or harmful matter of any sort, and ensures the preservation of the aroma and rich flavor of the fruit for which Pink's Jams are famed.

It will be of interest also to learn that a large percentage of the fruit used in the manufacture of Messrs. Pink's Jam is never touched by hand after it is gathered.

Is it to be wondered at that whilst taking care of the purity and flavor of their products Messrs. Pink are usually enabled, by the immensity of their transactions, embracing as they do the buying of sugar by the ship load and fruit by the million pounds, to furnish their goods at more inducing prices than other manufacturers, and far beyond comparison with the cost to the careful housewife of making jam at home.

The railway facilities making it possible to ensure during the fruit season daily arrivals at the factory of freshly picked fruit, the housewife may have on her table jam, the principal ingredient of which was growing in the fruit garden the previous day.

The floor space required for the manufacture of jam and marmalade is very considerable, but each line of goods manufactured or handled by the house has its separate building or department. In this manner a large building has been erected and fitted up for the manufacture of candied peel of which the firm claim to be the largest outputters in England. The process of manufacture is of very considerable interest. As the reader knows, candied peel is made from citrons, oranges and lemons. Immense quantities of these fruits are imported by Messrs. Pink for the purpose of this trade.

During the process of manufacture of candied peel the juice is extracted from the fruit. This forms a very important branch of business. Very large purchases of this fruit juice in bulk are made by manufacturers of cooling drinks and beverages, who bottle and send same out to their customers under their own labels.

Bottled fruits, of which E. & T. Pink are the largest outputters, bottling as they do from 15,000 to 20,000 dozen per season, may also be instanced as a speciality of the house. The immensity of the output may be taken as an indicator of unassailable quality.

Another important department is that apportioned to pepper and spice. This department is under the personal direction of Mr. Leonard Pink. But in order to demonstrate what is done in this section it will suffice to mention that "Pink's Perfect" is the recognized household pepper, and that of pepper alone the nominal weekly output of the mills is 15 tons. Visitors should not miss seeing and having explained to them the highly interesting process of pepper and spice grinding and mixing.

At the branch establishment of the firm, at 6 and 5 Eastcheap, London, E.C., are the city offices and sale rooms. Here an up-to-date assortment of inducing samples of the principal commodities offered by the firm are displayed for the convenience of its customers.

And so one might continue elaborating upon the ramifications of this beehive of industry, and thus fill a large volume with but a scant description of the manufacture of a few of the very many articles manufactured by Messrs. Pink, but space precludes this being done. In passing however mention may be made of the immense pickle factory from where it has aptly been said, is drawn the world's supply of pickles. Here the pickles are not only packed in bottles and similar containers, but also in casks, the latter being for customers who buy their pickles from Messrs. E. & T. Pink in bulk, and bottle them for sale to their customers.

The confectionery department also cannot be passed over without mention, employing as it does a very large number of hands, and turning out hundreds of tons of different sorts of delicious sweetmeats, too numerous to enumerate. But it can only be hoped that the reader may at some future time be fortunate enough to make a personal acquaintance with the factories of this very important business where the minutest detail in fabricating its manufacture being taken care of, the acme of perfection in the outturn of the commodity under fabrication is assured.

In the meantime if a word of advice is acceptable it is "Switch on to success by going into business with E. & T. Pink" and, as a preliminary, write to them for a price-list wherein is sure to be found offering just the right article at a price which fits the requisition of your customer.

The business from its modest inception has been steadily built up to its present great magnitude by scrupulous attention to the unrivalled purity of its Pure Food Products, the name of E. & T. PINK on any article or package of food being the recognized guarantee of perfection in taste, quality and purity.

THE HIGH PRICES OF EATABLES

Have caused the consuming public more closely than ever to observe the scales used by the grocer and butcher. People lack confidence in Spring Scales, Beam and Even-Balance Scales. But they like to buy over Toledo Scales, because they can see the beautiful Toledo Springless Mechanism which automatically does the weighing; the scales show them the exact weight of their purchase; they see on the scales the signs, "No Springs," "Honest Weight," and have full confidence that their purchases are weighed correctly.

NO WAITING—NO ERRORS

There is no waiting for a salesman to find a balance or to figure what to charge. The Toledo itself does the weighing and calculates the exact value mechanically, instantly and accurately. Thus time is saved, errors avoided, profits assured, customers pleased. Any customer prefers to trade where his purchases are weighed by the most modern, automatic, reliable weighing machine than to buy supplies over old-style scales.

YOU CAN GET THESE ADVANTAGES

Write us and learn how profitable it would be to you to get a profit-increasing and trade-bringing Toledo Scale. We make allowances for some scales in part payment for Toledos. Tell us what you have. We guarantee a better computing scale for less money than you can get from any other source. Write for our Book 3, showing scales and prices.

that an article which has a huge amount of consumer advertising behind it to pull it through the stores, as has must be a profitable and quick-selling line to handle.

But, in addition to this ad-pulling force, "2 in 1" has sterling merit behind it. It preserves the boots and makes them pliable; is waterproof; shines quickly and lasts a long time; does not soil the clothes or clog the brush, and is just now in increasing demand.

Fresh Tea Is All Important

—it is the life of your trade. Any tea kept in stock six months loses one cent per pound in value, after one year two cents, after two years it is positively unfit for sale.

Tea is at its best the day it is fired in the gardens, and although in sealed metal packages, it keeps very much better than in bulk, still it loses flavor. We do our utmost to have "SALADA" reach the consumer in all its garden freshness and fine flavor, and ask the co-operation of every retailer in our efforts to serve the public with FRESH tea. Our advice is to buy not more than three months' supply at a time. Eighteen years' experience proves to us that this is vitally important.

If any retailer—anywhere—at any time, has any "SALADA" in stock that is over six months old, ship it back to us (freight collect) and we will refund the full purchase price. We back up our belief in the paramount importance of FRESH tea by this sweeping guarantee.

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

Keeping Lemons Fresh With Wet Cloth—Value Montreal Grocer Places on Metallic Ceilings—Stratford Grocer Gets General Public to Write Advertisements for Him—Show Cards Increase Sales—Price Tickets Appropriate for St. Patrick's Day.

Wet Cloth Keeps Lemons Fresh.

Vegreville, Alta., Mar. 23.—H. A. Meredith has been using a simple plan to keep lemons from drying up too rapidly and which may be used with scarcely any trouble.

"We had been greatly troubled with lemons drying up," said Mr. Meredith, and going bad in a very short time.

"For the past three months I have been experimenting with them by placing a clean, wet cloth over the basket or bin and I have discovered to my entire satisfaction that the rind now keeps soft and the lemons retain their usual fresh looking appearance."

An Electric Easter Design.

Chatham, March 23.—The local branch of S. H. Knox & Co. had a striking Easter window this week. The window display was devoted to Easter cards, candy and novelties. In the centre stood a large cross several feet in height and completely covered with artificial (purple) violets. In the frame of the cross were set a number of incandescent lights about eight inches apart, there being five lights on the cross bar and seven on the upright, the common central light being the third from the top of the upright which was also the middle light of the five on the cross bar. As electric designs rarely appear in the windows, this one, particularly in view of its appropriate nature, attracted much attention.

Favors Metallic Ceilings.

Montreal, Mar. 23.—It is the opinion of a Montreal retailer that interior store appearance cannot be too highly emphasized. He maintains that perfect sanitation is an important feature and by having spotlessly clean silent salesman, counters and shelves and metallic ceiling and walls he aims to run a store which is as sanitary as careful attention can make it.

He takes great pride in his ceiling and walls. Being of the metallic variety they are easily kept perfectly clean and they present an appearance which cannot, he says, be obtained from wood or plaster.

"They can always be made to look attractive by having them redecorated and this can be done at little expense. They keep the store bright even on dark days and I know they always appeal to the eye of the particular customer as soon as she enters."

Is Your Staff an Asset?.

Chatham, March 23.—As a rule merchants seem to prefer to sink the personality of the individual clerk in the general business, the contrary policy has on quite a few occasions been adopted by C. Austin & Co., who have the distinction of being the largest advertisers in Chatham.

Last Christmas, for example, the firm's entire half page of advertising space on Christmas Eve was devoted to wishing the customers and public generally a Merry Christmas from the employes of the store. The names of all employes, numbering 75, were given in the advertisement.

On other occasions prominence has been giving in advertising to the names of department heads.

Merchants rarely give their employes prominence of this sort. The impression seems to be that to thus advertise an employe will give him or her a prestige which later, in the event of a change from one store or another, will prove detrimental to the original employer. Nevertheless, the example of the Austin company would indicate that the policy of introducing the individual employe to the public in this fashion possesses some advantages.

Introducing a New Store.

Stratford, March 23.—A local firm some time ago adopted a scheme of introdueing their newly established store to the general public.

Shortly after setting up in business, the announcement was made through the press and otherwise that the firm wanted the public to write its advertisements. Prizes of $10, $5 and $2.50 respectively were offered for the three best "write-ups" of the store and its advantages (not over 1,000 words in length) handed in by a certain date. In order to induce people of no literary pretensions to compete, the stipulation was made that professional writers were ineligible to enter the contest. Emphasis was placed on the fact that a plain, business-like write-up of the store and its methods was desired, and that in prize contests inexperienced writers frequently carried off the biggest money. Would-be contestants were cordially invited to visit the store and look it over and secure any desired information from the clerks.

Several hundred competing manuscripts were sent in, the prizes were duly awarded and the winning write-ups were published in the city papers. In the meantime, in addition to the general publicity the store secured through the comment aroused by the contest, not only the actual competitors but a large number of other people who contemplated competing but ultimately did not, visited the store, looked over the stock, and became acquainted with clerks, proprietors and business methods, thus giving the new business a good foundation upon which to build.

Show Cards Add to Sales.

Calgary, Alta., Mar. 23.—"I find that people like to know what an article is going to cost," said a retailer the other day, "and that is the reason why you always see price tickets and display cards in my windows."

He explained that often these cards sold the goods themselves. A purchaser frequently comes into the store and says that she wants a dozen of those 50 cent oranges, a dollar's worth of some particular sugar or two bottles of a jam that happens to be on display, without asking the price.

"I know that the show cards and price tickets sold the goods because the customers were new," he said.

Price Tickets Shamrock Shaped.

Lindsay, Ont., March 23.—The maple syrup season is just about to hand and already the first consignments of the delicious liquid has been offered for sale by Lindsay grocers. A good display of the jarred goods and also of the sugar cakes in a window at this time of the year tempts the onlooker to step in and buy. W. E. Baker dressed such a window to attract the Saturday buyers and reports excellent results.

St. Patrick's day saw many bright and catchy windows here. Some of the grocers had windows for the occasion, one of the prettiest being that of A. L. Primeau. The display was well arranged while everything was ticketed with the prices, the tickets being cut out of green cardboard and formed like shamrocks.

No Limit to Possibilities.

Montreal, March 23.—"Possibilities of the grocery business," said a Montreal retailer to a Grocer representative, "why they are so far reaching and numerous that it would be hard to list them. One thing is very sure, no man has ever entirely exhausted the possibilities of the grocery trade, and it has been a road to wealth and prominence to many.

"The greatest stumbling block to the average grocer, is his own inability to see the roads lying easily within his reach. The man who is ready to meet any sudden demand of his trade, to see a new popular line before others, and is generally wide awake, will find a sure road to success in the business, while the man who says it is all humdrum tediousness and sits down to wait for wealth, somehow seems to keep sitting there."

EMPLOYES AS SHAREHOLDERS.

Hamilton, March 23.—Considerably over one-quarter of the employes of the Stanley Mills Co., are now shareholders in the concern. The co-operative system whereby employes may become financially interested is being received with increased interest. During the coming year a plan will be worked out whereby a number of the preferred shareholders will be admitted to the directorate of the company. In his annual report, Stanley Mills, the president, stated that the actual business of the company since they moved into their present building was in excess of three and one-half millions.

An Address on Meeting Mail Order Competition

Western Merchant Points Out the Discrimination Made by Some Manufacturers and Jobbers—Farmers Forget the Harm Done Their Communities When They Order From the Catalogue House.

Winnipeg, March 23.—About one hundred retailers of the Western Retail Association met in the banquet hall of the Travelers' building on March 17. Although it was the regular monthly event yet the meeting proved to be of special importance as was outlined by President Devlin in his opening remarks.

A. E. Hill, Griswold, Manitoba, spoke on the subject: "How to deal with the mail order house."

Mr. Hill had experienced mail order competition in the early days of the retail business of the west, when eastern Canadian houses circulatcd catalogues throughout the west. But now the competition had become more serious since it was centered in Winnipeg.

"The difficulty should be dealt with," he said, "from the manufacturers' standpoint. The retailer is being eliminated by the excessive low rates that are given to the mail order house. It costs about 20 per cent. of the turnover to run any business, and the mail order houses have heavier expenses than small retailers. Their business is secured by the attractive prices which they offer to the consumer, made possible by the low prices which they purchase the goods.

"The variation between some prices quoted to the country retailer and the mail order house is too great for the retailer to tolerate. We should say to manufacturers and jobbers that are cutting prices that we will not buy from them and I would like the city merchants to join the country merchant on that stand.

"We have been planning further west to unite our buying forces in order to secure the quantity. The price will depend to a great extent upon the quantity, and the quantity will depend upon the combined efforts of retailers.

Where Prices Come in.

"The mail order house lacks the personal touch which belongs to a business and the retailer of the right sort should get a hold upon the people. Sentiment, however, is not strong in business and the price of the article must of necessity enter into the case.

"When the farmer sees a list price in the catalogue he docs not consider that the freight must be covered, and to that extent he is not getting value for his money, nor does he consider the wrong he is doing the local retailer and the community. It is the price that speaks.

"To meet the price I have taken the idea of the cataloguc in offering combination list prices. For instance, therc appeared in one catalogue a combination grocery offer. The order cost $4.15 and sold for $5.00. I advertised the same goods at the same price and succeeded in selling a good quantity.

"The lack of good advertising of the country retailer's goods is a severe handicap, and advertising is of unspeakable importance."

In closing, Mr. Hill urged the attention of the association to the discrimination against them by the manufacturers and instanced a case where grain bags could be purchased for 1½ cents less from city retailers than the country retailer can purchase from the wholesaler. He thought that such matters should be rectified at once.

(Edit. Note)—Other addresses given will appear in later issues of The Grocer.

HOW THE NUTS WERE CRACKED.

Two would-be wags entered a grocer's shop the other day, and noticing a bowl of shelled Barcelona nuts on the counter thought they saw their way to a little joke.

"I've just been having an argument with my friend here, about those nuts," said one of them. "He says that you keep a squirrel to crack them, and I say that it is a monkey. Which is right?"

"Neither," smilingly answered the grocer. "We keep an ostrich to hatch 'em out."

Then they shut up.

FROM CASH BOY TO MILLIONAIRE.

"Every man should try to save at least one-fourth of what he earns," is the advice of Jacob L. Kesner, who recently retired from the position of general manager of one of Chicago's famous "big stores" to look after the millions he has accumulated. Mr. Kesner is one of the largest owners of down-town realty in Chicago. His entire fortune, he says, has come through strict attention to business and the savings out of his earnings.

Born in London forty-five years ago, he was brought to America by his parents when three years old. His parents were poor, and it was necessary for him to go to work at an early age. He had very little schooling, but at night he put in his time at a business college.

At twelve years of age he obtained employment in a Chicago department store. The store is now one of the largest retail mercantile establishments in the world, but in those days it was a comparatively small affair. After working several years as a cash boy, Mr. Kesner became a salesman. In 1881 he was given the management of one or two departments of the store, and as the establishment increased in size he was given added responsibilities.

Never satisfied with merely making good to the extent of holding his job, Mr. Kesner made his departments known over the country for their vast business and he became known as one of the shrewdest buyers and managers in the business. In the course of time he was made assistant general manager, and in 1895 when only twenty-nine years old, he became general manager of the entire establishment.

Though his friends regard his career as extraordinary, Mr. Kesner does not look upon his success as in any way phenomenal. "There are just as good opportunities now," he says.

VALIDITY OF VERBAL ORDERS.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—In a recent issue I noticed an item referring to the liability of a merchant in the case of a signed order. Can a merchant be compelled to accept a consignment of goods if a verbal order is given to a traveler? RETAILER.

Ottawa, March 24, 1910.

ANSWER,—Business men who have made a study of this, claim that in Ontario a merchant must accept all verbal orders for goods up to $40 purchased from a traveler, providing the goods are according to sample or representation. In Quebec, British Columbia, Manitoba, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Northwest Territories the limit is $50, while in Prince Edward Island it is $30. If the merchant admits that he gave an order for goods under the above-mentioned limits he becomes liable, beyond dispute, they maintain; if he won't admit it, then it is a case for the courts to consider his word against the salesman who claimed to have taken the order.

If, however, a merchant gives a traveling salesman an order and the traveler states he will submit it to his house for acceptance, that merchant can cancel the order at any time before the house accepts it, providing notice of cancelation is in the hands of the house before acceptance is posted.

Another important point in this connection is that every agreement, no matter how small the sum involved, not to be carried out within a year must be in writing.

FOR DESTROYING RATS.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—What methods are to be recommended for destroying rats? A. K. L.

Edmonton, March 22, 1910.

ANSWER,—There are many different poisons recommended for destroying rats. Barium carbonate, strychnine and arsenic might be suggested. Phosphorus is not recommended by some chemists, in view of its inflammable character.

Barium carbonate is represented as being one of the cheapest and most effective poisons for rats and mice. This mineral has the advantage of being without taste or smell. It has a corrosive action on the mucous lining of the stomach and is dangerous to larger animals if taken in sufficient quantity. In the small doses fed to rats and mice it would be harmless to domestic animals. Its action upon rats is slow, and if exit is possible they usually leave the premises in search of water. For this reason the poison may frequently, though not always, be used in houses without disagreeable consequences.

Barium carbonate may be fed in the form of dough composed of four parts of meal or flour and one part of the mineral. A more convenient bait is ordinary oatmeal with about one-eighth of its bulk of the mineral, mixed with water into a stiff dough. A third plan is to spread the barium carbonate upon fish, toasted bread (moistened), or ordinary bread and butter. The prepared bait should be placed in rat runs, about a teaspoonful at a place. If a single application of the poison fails to kill or drive away all rats from the premises, it should be repeated with a change of bait.

Strychnine, say some chemists, is too rapid in action to make its use for rats desirable in houses, but elsewhere it may be employed effectively. Strychnine sulphate is the best form to use. The dry crystals may be inserted in small pieces of raw meat, Vienna sausage or toasted cheese, and these placed in rat runs or burrows; or oatmeal may be moistened with a strychnine syrup and small quantities laid in the same way.

Strychnine syrup is prepared as follows: Dissolve a half ounce of strychnia sulphate in a pint of boiling water; add a pint of thick sugar syrup and stir thoroughly. A smaller quantity may be prepared with a proportional quantity of water and syrup. In preparing the bait it is necessary to moisten all the oatmeal with the syrup. Wheat and corn are excellent alternative baits. The grain should be soaked overnight in the strychnine syrup.

The following is an old formula adopted from an English source: Take a pound of oatmeal, a pound of coarse brown sugar, and a spoonful of arsenic. Mix well together, and put the composition into an earthen jar. Put a tablespoonful at a place in runs frequented by rats.

Another method is to mix twelve parts by weight of cornmeal and one part of arsenic with whites of eggs into a stiff dough.

Don't growl about the cost of food.
When prices upward roll,
Though for a nickel you may get
Less doughnut, just remember yet
You always get more hole.—Anon.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

TIME FOR MAPLE SYRUP.

The wise grocer is now engaged in buying and marketing new crop of maple syrup and sugar. Consumers will buy more syrup when it is fresh from the boiling pans than at any other time of the year.

For one thing, sap season is rather looked forward to by the average consumer in Quebec and Ontario, and he expects to buy.

When consumers do buy it is a general rush for the man who has the best syrup, and consequently a wide-spread advertisement for him. With proper care the effects of syrup selling can be felt by the store throughout the year. The main things to remember are : get your stock early, get the best, whether pure or compound, and let it be known that you have the first and best.

There is only one time to sell maple syrup to the best advantage and that is now.

SEEDS TO THE FRONT.

April will soon be here and the grocer who is on the alert will make his plans to have ready seasonable goods for that month. The window and advertising space in the newspaper should work in harmony to bring the best results.

With the advent of spring every grocer should display his garden and flower seed samples prominently. During the next couple of months everybody who has any available space for gardening purposes will stock up with a supply of seeds and though the sales may be small they carry a good profit with little trouble.

The goods should be brought to the attention of the customers reminding them of the season in which they should obtain their supplies. A display of attractively colored envelopes in which the seeds are usually packed can easily be made and every grocer should make up his mind to increase his seed sales over last year.

B. C. COMPANIES ACT.

It was confidently expected that a change would have been made in the British Columbia act respecting the licensing of Extra-Provincial Corporations so as to make an exception in favor of business done through commercial travelers.

In fact it was circulated that the amendments to the act allowing this exception had been passed, but in the closing days of the Legislature the proposed new act was amended in committee by striking out the clause which exempted from the operation of the act all business done through travelers.

There was every prospect that the Bill would go through, but according to latest advices, the situation in respect to the licensing of Extra-Provincial Corporations remains unchanged.

BULK SALES ACT WITHDRAWN.

Nothing will be forthcoming during this session of the Ontario Legislature from the Bulk Sales Act which was introduced some days ago. After a few minutes adverse criticism when it came up for discussion it was withdrawn, but the member who introduced it declares that he will bring it forward again next session.

It was intended as a protective measure in the interests of purchasers of stocks or goods in bulk, and of the creditors of the vendors.

Had this act gone through and been properly enforced, it would have meant the elimination of fraudulent practices to which unscrupulous debtors have had recourse in order to shift their obligations by transferring their stocks to another party, who in turn has too often found it possible to evade all responsibility.

Creditors have frequently felt the need of some such measure, requiring parties interested in the sale to take precaution whereby liabilities may be properly provided for. The purchaser, at the same time, should be placed in a position where he can demand a verified statement as to liabilities outstanding against the stock he is purchasing in bulk. It would simplify the machinery, whereby he might assure himself that he is starting with a clear slate.

Provision was also made for such disposition of the purchase money as would make it available for the satisfaction of claims.

DEAR BACON IN ENGLAND.

That the present hog scarcity in the North American continent is making itself felt in the Old Country, may be observed from the existing high price of bacon in Leeds and Hull.

Canadian Trade Commissioner J. M. Mussen states that the scarcity of bacon there is a pronounced feature in the provision trade and that it is to be regretted that Canadian shippers are seemingly not in a position to profit by the opportunity in sending forward supplies

On an average, bacon is costing the English housewife three to four cents per pound more than the price usually charged for this commodity. According to one authority, prices ruled higher during last year than they have done for the past forty years.

The increase in price is not only caused by the decrease in the raising of hogs in the Old Country, but is also due to the shortage in the supplies forthcoming from the United States and Canada, largely owing to the increase in population, and also to the high price of feeding stuffs. In short, there are not enough hogs from which to make bacon, and, as far as can be seen at present, the scarcity and dearness is likely to continue.

The imports of bacon into the United Kingdom during January of this year were only 331,493 hundred weights, whereas they amounted to 424,968 and 176,594 hundred weights in the same month of 1909 and 1908, respectively.

GROWTH OF MACARONI BUSINESS

It is not so many years ago when macaroni and vermicelli were practically unknown in this country. When any did come in, it was regarded more in the light of a curiosity than in any other way. The only consumers were emigrants from Italy, who brought the taste for it with them. Gradually it has become a common table article in almost every household, combining, as it does, economy with considerable food value, being made from goose wheat.

Eventually the demand became sufficient to warrant the opening of factories in this country. During the past year our total production amounted to almost one-third of our consumption. The latter has reached the large total of 9,000,000 lbs. per year.

Moreover it is a line worth selling. Margins are good and sales, once well under way, perpetuate themselves.

Natural Trade Channel to Get to the Consumer

Seattle Visitor to Vancouver R. G. A. Banquet Gave Talk on Trade Ethics—Thinks Retailer, Jobber and Manufacturer Necessary—The Treatment of Travelers—Relation Between Wholesaler and Retailer—The Question of Fair Profits.

Vancouver, B.C., March 23.—Goodfellowship and solid trade ethics were the themes at the second annual banquet of the Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association, which was held on the 15th instant. There was a large attendance, and the speeches were along practical lines, with enough of the humorous to give a Worcestershire relish to the substantial portions. Wholesalers were invited, and among the guests outside the city was: Lovett M. Wood, editor of the Trade Register, of Seattle, who recently returned from the east. Mr. Wood passes out straight trade common sense, which applies directly. The management of the event was in the hands of R. D. Dinning, secretary, and the other officers of the association, and that it passed off so nicely showed the excellence of the arrangements.

The menu was interspersed with aphorisms, the study of which helped to while away the intervals, such as "jellies with whipped cream, soft as the wholesaler's heart when you can't pay up;" boiled ham, and thereby hung a tail that wags no more;" "Lobster salad, a fellow feeling makes us wondrous kind," and last nut not the least important, "P.S.—If you can't drink what you see ask for the teapot."

After the preliminary part of the programme had been attended to, the toastmaster, F. W. Welsh, proposed, "The King," which was duly honored.

"Our City," was responded to by Ald. James Ramsay, of Ramsay Bros. After congratulating the association on the splendid banquet, Mr. Ramsay declared there was no reason why all could not work in harmony, and take advantage of the good times that are, and the good times that are to come. He believed Vancouver was going to have half a million people in twenty years, and briefly outlined the resources of the city, mentioning the railways that were heading this way, the growth of the assessment, the civic expansion, etc. It served to show that there was something worth striving for.

Co-operation With Wholesalers.

W. J. McMillan, spoken of by the toastmaster as the 'dean of the wholesale trade'; W. H. Malkin, M. Oppenheimer, Charles Milne and F. R. Stewart, replied to "The Wholesalers' Associations," the men we work for. Mr. Malkin remarked on the amicable relations between the wholesale and retail branches of trade, as shown in affairs of this kind. He pointed out that interests of both were identical, and they were improved by co-operation, which was the great spirit of the age. While all were in business to make money, it should be made honestly, and the best way was to improve conditions by standing together. That would lessen troubles and would bring the trade closer together.

Mr. Oppenheimer referred to the objects of the association in the curtailment of undue credit, which tended to firmer business relationships, while Mr. Milne believed that every attention should not be paid to making money, but also to making friends in business.

F. R. Stewart was laughed at when he said that the great aim of the wholesaler was always to give as much as possible for a little money. He has an automobile himself, and said that while the members of the retail association might not have such joy-producers, at any rate the organization was in much better shape, and that prospects were encouraging. With the big population that was coming, as prophesied by Ald. Ramsay, he thought that the retailers would some day be riding in the buzzers.

A. Brenchley, in proposing the toast of the "Retail Grocers' Association," discussed the worthy objects of organization. He took the place assigned to H. T. Lockyer, who was not able to be present. Coupled with this toast were the names of Wm. Clark, president of the association; W. H. Walsh, vice-president; James Foran and Thomas Duke.

A hearty welcome was extended by Mr. Clark to the guests of the evening, and in commenting on the progress made, instanced the fact that every effort was being made to promote co-operation. Mr. Foran, who is an old-timer in the trade in Vancouver, emphasized the fact, that while there may be differences between the retailer and wholesaler, the way to overcome them was to get together and settle them. If conferences are held with the intention of giving a little and taking a little, much mutual good could be accomplished, as all were honest in spirit.

Fair Profits for Retailers.

Mr. Walsh did not believe a grocer was honest either to himself or to his creditors, if he did not put a fair profit on his goods, for without this he would go to the wall. One of the principal objects of the association was to see that a fair profit was obtained, not a combination of dealers to extract anything beyond this from consumers. The object was not to raise prices, simply to see fair play.

Mr. Duke is also an old-timer in the trade, but as he said he felt like a young one. He credited this to association with the ladies, which is a feature of the grocery business, and the tendency to keep a man pleasant, was a protection against the effects of growing years.

In re-introducing Lovett M. Wood to those present, Mr. Welch, said that he had addressed the members of the association several months ago.

Mr. Wood, who responded to the toast to "The Visitors," lost no time in propounding trade truths. He told a little story to point the moral that it must be definitely known what is being sought else either one's own efforts or the efforts of organizations would be lost, and even might have a bad effect. He particularly stated that unless there was integrity of purpose and square dealing, success would not follow. There were always two sides to a question, and both parties should be fair—get together and talk squarely, for without consideration of the other side, results would not follow. There should be no "must" when in conference, like the mandate of some of the trade unions. This would cause a wreck, sure.

He believed that there was a sentiment in business, and that confidence in the firm was the principal basis of success. He instanced the large stores in the big cities, which send out millions of dollars worth of goods to people they never know, simply because the customer knew he could rely on the house.

Natural Channel of Trade.

Mr. Wood discussed the problem of the field of the wholesaler, the retailer and the manufacturer. He said the retailer should insist upon the fact that he was the best distributor for the jobber, and he should also remember that the jobber was his best friend.

In good times, there was no difficulty in meeting payments, and then it was that the manufacturer got trade from the retailer, dispensing with the aid of the jobber, but the manufacturer did not carry the retailer in the times of trouble. In times of peace, we should prepare for war, was the axiom Mr. Wood exemplified. He said that the wholesaler also overstepped. He had to stop selling to hotels, restaurants and every one who was a direct consumer. If he did not, the same result would take place in Canada, as in the States—the retailers would combine to form exchanges to buy direct, and the manufacturer would arrange to sell direct to the retailer. In the United States, the manufacturer was allowed to fix the retail price of his goods, but he must not do it by collusion. In so doing, a reasonable profit should be allowed to the wholesaler and to the retailer, else it would result in the jobber becoming a semi-manufacturer, instances of which had already occurred in his country. One evil, he said, could not be created without another following.

He said that the man who was discourteous to the travelers was inconsistent, since he expected to be treated courteously himself, but how could he expect it, when he did not give what he expected to receive.

The Markets—A Puzzling Situation in Molasses

Importers Say Market is Going up and Dealers Say Down—Sugar Situation Cannot Yet be Fathomed—Decline in Peppers—Prunes in Good Demand.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—

Molasses—High in primary market.
Ginger—Firm.
Peppers—2c lower.
Tapioca—High in primary market.

Montreal, March 24, 1910.

Easter trade has so far been good, and wholesalers seem to be well satisfied with trade up to date. Several repeat orders have been booked, and numerous small "fill-up" orders show that trade among the retailers has been good.

Someone is going to be caught in molasses. The question is, who? Importers say they are surely going higher, while the jobbers are refusing to buy at present prices, saying they will surely lower somewhat. The importers base their opinion on advices from the West Indies, the jobbers on the happenings of other years.

Another feature of the week which is causing comment, is the sugar situation. At present it is high and the question is, can it stay there? So far no one in a position to know will hazard a statement. It seems as if the high point had been reached, however.

Sugar—Just at present there is somewhat of a lull in the sugar situation. It is hard to predict whether there will be any reduction in present high quotations. Buying is slacker of late and refiners are resting on their oars, so to speak. It seems quite certain, however, that present conditions warrant continued high prices.

Syrups and Molasses—In the hope of lower prices in the near future local dealers have so far refused to lay in their stocks of molasses. Reports from the West Indies, however, seem to show that prices are going higher instead of down. Syrups are somewhat slack just now, owing to the new run maple on the market.

Tea—Ceylons continue firm. Buyers seem to be awaiting developments. More inquiries for Japans are noted, but the market is rather bare of the grades mostly required. Stocks in hand are considered good value. It is reported that further quantities of Pingsueys, gunpowders and low-priced China Congos have been brought here.

Beans and Peas—Due probably to the high price of pork, combined with the present mild weather, the demand for beans has slackened a great deal. In fact, some dealers report that there is a decided falling-off in trade as compared with last year. Peas are quiet but firm.

ONTARIO MARKETS

Toronto, March 24, 1910.

Business shows some improvement on last week, orders are satisfactory, but collections might be better. The higher rents and other expenses begin to tell on the retailers. To meet this, they must learn to make better profits. They are entitled to fair pay for their risk and labor.

Sugar—There is no change in the sugar market since last week. The market is firm, but the demand is light, owing to the heavy transactions of a few weeks ago. There is nothing in sight that might have a tendency to weaken

MANITOBA MARKETS

Corrected by Wire.

Winnipeg, March 24, 1910.

The continued period of summer weather has done much to brighten up the trade in every branch. City ordering is however the heavier, as the country roads are not conducive to a good retail trade in these parts. Farmers also are all busy at home at present and the retailers are looking forward to increased population in their centres and they will not be disappointed. There has been a decided change in the ordering of late, due to the change in the seasons. Fresh fruits and vegetables are being largely replaced by canned and preserved products, and cereals are not moving quite so well. Syrup, dried fruits and nuts have an excellent market and prices are held firm.

Sugar—The price of sugar has been seriously broken into in the west and a various range of prices exist. B.C. sugars are 5 cents below Montreal's in Winnipeg and the Manitoba market is still 10c below that of Saskatchewan and Alberta. The market continues firm and further advances would not be surprising.

Foreign Dried Fruits—There is a splendid range of Smyrna raisins on the market here and we quote prices according to quality. In this variety the market is strong, while the Valencia market is weaker this week. Prunes are selling well and there is a shortage of the better grades—30-40's are off the market and 40-50's are up to 8½ just now. This year the sizes ran to the smaller prunes and although the quality is good the demand is always best for the larger sized prunes.

Hogs Cannot be Bought—Quoted in Some Places at $10 Live Weight—Butter Prices Higher on Account of Heavy Demand —New Maple Syrup on the Market.

Some of the packers have decided to look on, but do no buying. Prices, they claim, have gone beyond their reach and they have to wait to see what is going to happen. It is reported that as high as $10 is being paid to farmers for live hogs, and as high as $13 for dressed.

About a year ago a commission was appointed by the government to visit Europe in order to investigate the success of hog raising in Denmark, Ireland and other countries, but not a word has since been heard from it. What is the matter? What are the benefits derived from this commission? Has the commission been a failure? Surely the public has a right to know.

The English butter market is firm with noticeable advances, but the demand is principally supplied by Denmark and New Zealand.

Canadian cheese finds ready sale in England, as no country so far has been able to out-do us in cheese.

MONTREAL.

Provisions — Both live and dressed hogs are up. Other lines are firm and sales continue good. In comparison with last year, however, they are not quite up to the mark. No radical change in prices is looked for in the immediate future.

Butter—Higher prices are being asked for creamery and tub butters. The rise of 1c is caused by a short stored stock, and a pretty heavy demand. Provisions—Still higher and higher loom the prices of hogs and bacon. Another cent has again been added to a number of lines this week, but still there is no check to the consumption and the demand continues. Never before were cured meats so high. The principal reason, of course, is the scarcity of hogs, but a great deal is owing to the extra quality of the goods. Everything is sold at its best. No old stock reaches the consumer, and every bit is an advertisement for more. Quality creates the demand and governs the consumption.

Butter—The butter market is steady with a good healthy demand. The winter supply is working out satisfactorily and with the careful handling of the fresh stock the market will be in good condition to start on the new season. It is, however, not likely that it will remain at the present prices more than a few weeks, when natural conditions are expected to force prices somewhat lower.

Cheese—Without exception, cheese has made the least variation in value of all farm products. So far as the local market is concerned, it did not move over half a cent either way during the year. THE FIXING OF FLOUR PRICES.

Vancouver, B.C., Mar. 23.—The executive of the Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association and the representatives of the milling companies got together on the 15th instant and discussed price matters. A retail price is fixed for flour but there are cases of where it is offered at less than the stipulated figure. This operates against members of the association who adhere to the agreement. A satisfactory solution of the problem was not arrived at on that occasion, and other conferences will be held.

ASSOCIATION TALKING CASH ONLY.

Members Claim it to be the Best Method —The Collection of Accounts and General Delivery Questions.

Chilliwack, B.C., Mar. 23.—Several questions of general interest were discussed at a recent meeting of the Chilliwack Merchants' Association. The cash and credit system was talked over at some length. It was quite agreed by the members present, who were running their businesses on the credit basis, that theirs was a losing game, and that some change was necessary. There were losses through bad debts and accounts that could not be collected. Some had tried the strictly cash system and had expressed themselves as being in every way pleased with it. They had found they they had a better class of customers, and once they became used to it had no complaints of it being a hardship. It was working out well for both the merchant and the customer. In this district the cash system may be adopted more easily than in sections where the product is mostly grain and the farmer has to wait until autumn to get cash. In Chilliwack, it is largely dairying and general farming, and the creamery cheques are paid regularly. Moreover, the market for all kinds of produce is steady with good prices.

Some of the merchants complained that others who had signed the agreement to sell strictly for cash had violated their bargain, and were making thirty days count the same as cash, when that had not been intended. It was suggested that the only way to ensure uniformity was to have all who entered into the agreement put up bonds for a certain amount which would be forfeited if violation was made.

Collection of accounts was another matter that worried the merchants. Sending out accounts was expensive, and was not satisfactory besides. The appointment of a collector for the association was brought up, and it was thought feasible that one man could do all the collecting for the members of the association, thus making the cost to each light.

Another suggestion to curtail expenses by co-operation was for three or four members to engage one delivery, instead of each merchant having a delivery of his own. These matters are to be further discussed at the next meeting.

The Chilliwack Clerks' Association is also active, and at its meeting decided to do everything possible to work harmoniously with the merchants' organization. Among the matters to be taken up with the merchants is the summer half holiday. The clerks will hold their first social on April 6th.

PACKERS DELAYING CASE.

New York, March 24.—Application for the extradition of three of the most prominent Chicago packers indicted by the Hudson County grand jury will be made by Prosecutor Garven to Governor Fort, of New Jersey, at Trenton this week. The prosecutor said in Jersey City yesterday that the men wanted are J. Ogden Armour, one of the Swifts and one of the Morrises. He hasn't made his final selections, but intends to "pick out the biggest guns in the bunch."

The grand jury may not be able to complete its present line of investigation in consequence of the packers' action in moving for a writ of error for the review by the Supreme Court of Justice Swayne's order for the production in New Jersey of the minutes of directors' and stockholders' meetings of four of the indicted corporations. The rule to show cause acts as a stay pending a final decision, and further appeals may be taken if the decision is not satisfactory to the packers. The term of the grand jury will expire on April 4, and the prosecutor fears that the next grand jury may be obliged to go over again the work which the present panel has been engaged in since it returned its conspiracy indictments in order to carry the inquiry to a successful close.

TO DATE ALL FOOD.

This is Suggestion Made by Montreal Cold Storage Inspector.

Montreal, March 23.—In his report on cold storage conditions in Montreal to the Medical Health Officer, Dr. McCarrey suggests that all food placed in cold storage be dated in order to prevent it from being held too long. In all there were 1,800 tons of foodstuffs in storage.

Dr. McCarrey's report reads:

I beg to submit the following report upon the result of the inspections made by my department, of the cold storage establishments in the city, namely, those of P. Poulin & Co., Gunn, Langlois & Co., Gould Cold Storage, Canada Cold Storage, Mathews, Fortier & Monotte.

The quantity of foodstuffs found stored in those establisments was as follows:

	Lbs.
Poultry	265,000
Fish	300,000
Beef	500,000
Mutton	146,000
Lard	30,000
Butter	600,000
Maple sugar	75,000
Honey	40,000
Oranges	300 cases
Apples	10,000 bbls.

The stock of poultry in cold storage has been accumulating since the month of August, 1909. The proprietors claim that none of it remains for a longer period than one year.

The stock of beef and mutton has been accumulating since the month of October, and it is claimed that they do not remain in cold storage for a longer period than six or seven months.

Other goods, such as butter, cheese, maple sugar, honey, fruit, etc., do not remain in cold storage for a longer period than twelve months.

The following confiscations were made at the above mentioned establishments during the tour of inspection: Beef, 800 lbs.; mutton, 200 lbs.; pork, 300 lbs.; poultry, 150 lbs.

All of the establishments were found in a sanitary condition and cleanly kept.

As it was freely rumored, previous to this special inspection, that mutton and poultry were kept in cold storage for over two years, I would suggest that a provision should be made in the law requiring that the foodstuffs placed in cold storage should be marked so as to show the date of their receipt by those establishments.

Weaker Tone to the Flour and Cereal Markets

Lower Flour Prices May be S een Unless the Situation is Influenced by Adverse Reports of Growing Crops—Some Cereal Price Quotations Marked Down.

The trend of the flour and wheat market has taken a more decided turn for lower prices, and these are likely to come unless otherwise influenced by crop reports. However, nothing serious can take place in the near future. The stocks of wheat, together with the farmer's holdings are all and more than they were estimated, and therefore the chances favor lower prices.

Farmers in the Northwest are still hoping to receive the $1 for their wheat, and as the roads are in a bad condition, it is not likely that much wheat will come from them till after seeding. Russia has astonished the world with her wheat crop, and is still pouring its vast supply to meet the demands of the large markets. All this serves to give a weaker tone to the flour and wheat cereal situation, although the big demand will counteract this to a certain extent.

MONTREAL.

Flour—The flour market has not improved since last week. Buyers are slow in making purchases. They all feel that they should be able to buy cheaper, but the farmers on the other side are hanging on to their wheat for more money. ADVERTISERS WHO SLIGHT THE RETAILER.

By S. C. Lambert in Printers' Ink, March 9.

A certain man found himself several years ago possessed of the rights to a fountain pen of moderate price which incorporated one or two devices that made good "talking points." The promoter had been bred to think of advertising enthusiastically; he regarded it as something by itself, an isolated entity that merely needed to be recognized and success would follow. It had never occurred to him that advertising is the twin sister of salesmanship, and he embarked upon a very large magazine campaign without being advised by some kind friend that there was a vital relation between publicity and merchandising conditions.

The advertising ran for several months. The copy, though of the publicity kind, was well written. It had ginger, snap and force. The advertiser wondered why he was not engulfed with orders. He could not explain why the business showed so little increase.

One day he was telling his troubles to a friend, who asked him how well the pen was distributed. Had he taken steps to interest the dealer and to get his cooperation? The fountain pen man in some surprise said that he thought the magazine advertising would take care of such things as distribution and getting the dealers interested.

Then the friend gave the advertiser his first real lesson in modern advertising—how a great deal of work must be devoted to interesting the trade and securing distribution as well as interesting the general public. Advertising, it was explained, was only a factor, though a very important one, in a modern selling campaign.

A new and comprehensive selling plan was then and there outlined. The advertising was changed to develop trade territorially. A competent sales and advertising manager was put in charge.

A year's campaign developed an excellent business. At the proper stage the advertising in the magazines was again taken up and all the selling factors merged harmoniously into an effective promotion effort. Incidentally the timely advice saved advertising from being charged with another "failure."

MAYBE, Brother Grocer, you'll remember the little booklet we told you about some time ago.

About Jones and Mrs. Brown on a rainy day, you know.

Of course, you remember "GET FLOURWISE"—the name on the cover.

Or, maybe, you didn't read your "GROCER" that week and missed the gladsome tidings.

Well, it was a kind of four-color affair on the outside with three inside.

Filled with dinkey little illustrations like a Christmas Pudding is full of plums.

Explaining just what Jones is piping about.

About good flour, FIVE ROSES and things, you know.

Sure we thought it was pretty good ourselves, which was only "nacheral" under the circumstances.

But far be it from us to toot our own trumpet, Brother Grocer.

So we waited with our ear to the ground to see how the trade would "cotton" to the idea.

The way that little booklet circulated would make hot cakes on a hungry day look like an "also ran."

Why, no sensible woman with cooking aspirations can read that little confab between Jones and Mrs. B. without conceiving a taste for FIVE ROSES goodies.

We defy YOUR wife to break the charm.

Says a prominent advertising expert from Toronto Town, whom we do not know personally, and who spent all of a two-cent stamp and half an hour's time to say it:

> "My wife came home from the grocer's to-day with a copy of "GET FLOURWISE," "and, knowing you to be the guilty party, I take this earliest opportunity of taking off "my hat to one of the cleverest things in the booklet line it has been my good fortune "to come across."
> "I have read it all through, and my oldest boy has started on it, so that if we "don't soon become a "FIVE ROSES" family it will not be for want of advertising. "If it makes the bread plate circulate, the booklet ought certainly to make the flour "do likewise."

Nice man, that!

Now, Brother Grocer, the printers are working on the fourth edition of TWENTY THOUSAND.

So that if YOU missed the first opportunity to get a supply of "silent salesmen," don't miss THIS.

A postal does it.

FARRINGTON PHILOSOPHY.

A prosperous looking building produces an effect that you cannot afford to lose. If the store building is your own, keep it up in shape. If it is not, then make the landlord keep it up.

This is the time of the year when the front door is kept working overtime. See to it that it swings easily, so easily that it is no effort for a woman to get in or out of the store with an armful of bundles.

A store without a good outside sign is like the proverbial needle in the haystack, as far as the stranger is concerned.. It can be found, but only by inquiring of someone who knows where it is.

There is no money in blank wall space outside or inside. If you have available space somewhere in your building, see that there is a good sign made to fit it. Make that space work for you.

Don't have your store so full of goods that customers have to crowd in edgewise, and don't have it so nearly empty that the stock rattles around like a pill in a paper box.

It has been said that talk is cheap. It may well be added that there are times when talk is mighty expensive, and it is well to consider the matter carefully before talking too much. An ounce of caution is worth a pound of regret.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruits—Just at present the market for green fruits is quiet, though the usual increase for Easter is beginning to show. The next few days will, it is thought, show considerably increased activity.

Apples, while on the market in considerable quantity, are getting past the best stage, and sales are light. Oranges in nearly all lines are having a brisk sale at reasonable prices.

Vegetables—Imported lettuce is 50c per box higher, owing to a large Easter trade. Large quantities of California and Florida celery are on the market. Lower prices are looked for in most lines after Easter, particularly in celery. Strawberries are as yet unchanged, from 30 to 60c. Trade is reported very good.

Fish—The market is now somewhat quiet, on account of the mild weather. The frozen fish season is over, and the trade is looking out for fresh fish. So far only a few arrivals have been reported, principally dore, pike and perch, and these have been disposed of readily at high prices. A good deal of frozen fish is left yet, of which a good part will go into cold storage, and the remainder to the incinerator.

Green Fruits—There is no improvement in the apple situation. The market is glutted and sales are pushed in order to get rid of them. Consumers are apparently not using the usual quantity of applies. The cause is that consumption decreases or increases according to the quality. Apples were bought too high to start with in the fall, and in order to realize a profit they were held above a good selling point. This caused some to remain on the hands of dealers after the time they were at their best. When they were sold they were stale and consequently decreased the consumption. The better qualities were held back in order to get rid of the out of season goods, and in this way the demand for apples almost died out. Low prices seldom increase consumption, but quality always does.

This is a busy week in fruit. Oranges, strawberries, grape fruit, etc., are in great demand. While oranges go out in loads, apples are passed by.

Vegetables—Fresh vegetables this year are about two weeks earlier than usual. Whether this is owing to the season being earlier, or to the effort of getting them on the market earlier in order to secure higher prices is not clear, but it is certain that the southern countries, especially Florida, are making rapid progress in meeting the early demand for their vegetables. Thousands of acres, which have been useless swamp land, are now being reclaimed through a system of drainage and made into gardens of vegetable production.

There is scarcely a vegetable that cannot be purchased on our market, and the demand is increasing from year to year.

The Havana Potato Trust and its Trade Methods

Misleading Article Widely Circulated — Trust Does Not Discriminate Against New Brunswick Product, Says Trade Commissioner—A Poor Shipment Causes Lot of Trouble — Only Canadian Potatoes Purchased.

By E. S. Kirkpatrick, Havana, Cuba.

An article on the potato trust in Havana, and it's discrimination against New Brunswick produce, which appeared in a Canadian newspaper, has since been copied and republished very widely, not only in Canada and the United States, but has even been reproduced as a translation in Spanish in a Havana daily. This article should never have appeared in print. It is entirely misleading and has been productive of considerable harm. That there is a potato trust in Havana, composed of five men, is not to be questioned, but that they are 'five millionaires' was never suspected. Probably none were more surprised to read such a statement than the men composing the trust themselves.

The contention that these men have discriminated against New Brunswick produce is entirely wrong as the facts of the case will show. Previous to the present season there has never been any steamship connection between St. John and Havana and consequently no New Brunswick produce came to the Havana market. It is true that the steamer "Talisman" made several trips last year from St. John, but the stock arrived in such poor condition that it gave St. John shippers an unfavorable reputation in this market.

With the beginning of the present season and the establishment of a regular service, a St. John firm opened a produce warehouse in Havana in opposition to the trust and in their first shipment brought in 3,000 barrels of potatoes. These barrels were labelled in lithograph "Canada's Best Potatoes" and as the trust had honestly believed that New Brunswick stock was of poor quality they were curious to learn in what condition this stock arrived.

Thrown Into the Sea.

The result of that shipment is pretty well known by this time to all produce dealers. The stock arrived in such a rotten condition that the greater part of it was abandoned on the docks and remained there for two weeks until such a protest was made from residents of the neighbourhood that the sanitary department of the city had it carried out to sea and dumped. This was a very poor advertisement in the Havana market, for every dealer in the city had seen the stock and believed it to be typical of New Brunswick produce. The fault lay entirely in the fact that the stock was too green when shipped and was diseased as well. This experience made it doubly hard to convince the buyers that New Brunswick had a good article to sell.

In spite of a loss of $6,000 on this shipment, the firm who were disappointed, ordered a second cargo which arrived a month later in excellent condition. It was readily sold, although not to the trust, who were still skeptical. As time went on small buyers began asking for New Brunswick stock, and the trust became convinced that no better, if as good, produce was arriving from any point than that from New Brunswick. They then approached the Canadian firm who were doing business in Havana and offered to buy from them all the stock they cared to import on the condition that this firm should not sell to any one else. However, they could not arrive at any agreement. Then it became a battle of interests. Potatoes have not been sold in many years in Havana as low as during the present season. No matter what quotation was made to a buyer by the St. John firm, the trust would quote lower, but at the same time they, themselves, were paying about as much for potatoes as they had done at any time in the past.

It is stated on good authority that the trust lost $30,000 in the month of December alone. But the fight was not against New Brunswick stock, but against one particular firm mentioned. At that time and until the present, they have been buying New Brunswick potatoes in large quantities from other shippers. Probably 100,000 barrels have been shipped from St. John to Havana this season, of which the greater part has been purchased by the trust.

Canadian Potatoes Only.

It is not to be denied that the price of potatoes in Havana is low, but this condition is entirely due to the excessive Canadian and United States crops. Maine potatoes are being quoted here now at a lower price than any from Canada, and yet notwithstanding this fact, the trust are buying almost solely from St. John and Halifax.

Without the Havana market during the present season, the New Brunswick crop of potatoes would have remained in the farmers' cellars, for there was absolutely no other market for them at any price. The Havana potato trust, instead of discriminating against New Brunswick, has bought stock from the New Brunswick shippers when they could have purchased for a lower price elsewhere.

The trust, however, are a body of shrewd business men who have secured a good corner and mean to hold it if they can. It is urged that they are adopting no different course from that which any other body of men have adopted under similar conditions. The market might be considerably better if they were not in control, but it is too much of an undertaking for one firm to attempt to dislodge them from the position which they hold.

The thirteenth annual meeting of Bovril, Ltd., was held in London, with the Earl of Arran, K.P., chairman of the company, presiding. The secretary's report showed a satisfactory year. Net profit for the twelve months was £122,576, a gain over the previous year.

At their annual meeting, the C. H. Catelli Co., Montreal, decided to build a new plant, as their present premises at 25 William St., Montreal, are too restricted to accommodate a business the size to which theirs has grown. Last year their production of macaroni and vermicelli was 9,000 lbs per day. Officers were elected as follows:—A. P. Frigon, president; C. H. Catelli, vice-president, and J. Cadieux, secretary-manager.

R. Simpson & Co., importers and wholesale dealers in teas, coffees, spices, etc., Hamilton, Ont. are building a red brick warehouse and office accommodation at the corner of Gore and Hughson Sts., which they expect to get possession of early in May. The offices will be large and bright, and there will be sample and tea and coffee testing rooms. The firm will have from 4 to 6 travelers on the road continuously. Robt. Simpson has had about 30 years experience in the tea, coffee and spice business and is recognized as being an extra good judge of teas and other lines of goods, which the firm intends handling. He has been a successful salesman, and has had considerable road experience, having traveled from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The firm has secured the services of travelers who have a thorough knowledge of the tea trade. It is just three months ago since Mr. Simpson moved to Hamilton, where he opened up business about six weeks or two months ago. He has been more than pleased with the amount of business done and the prospects for the future. He is favorably impressed with Hamilton and likes the city very much for residential and business purposes. He has a large busines connection which has been established in some districts for over tyenty-five years. The firm has the best of arrangements with several large tea estates and their representatives, and purchasing is done extensively when the markets are most favorable. Teas are in transit almost continuously. Stocks of teas, coffees and other goods are frequently held at Toronto and Montreal, and often are shipped from these points and diverted in transit. The firm expects to do a large import business from standard samples, and to open an office in Toronto within the course of a few months, where there will be a man located permanently to look after its interest. Mr. Simpson will make weekly or semi-weekly visits to the Toronto office. The firm is going into the coffee business extensively and will put up its own blends and brands.

"Oh, You Orange Spoon"

This "Orange Scoop" of ours is a winner. 'Twill scoop some change your way if you line up at the INDEPENDENT ORANGE WICKET. Read this:

Independent California Orange Brokers of Toronto

32 Church Street, Toronto

THROW OFF THE MUZZLE

Dear Sir,—Fruit is not manufactured—it grows—and it is an easy deduction that all California Oranges of the same grade, from the same district, are the same, regardless of suggestive and appropriate labels. Hence, there is no earthly reason why you or your customers should pay any corporation or individual a premium when you can get the identical commodity without.

STOP AND THINK. Do you imagine that other California Oranges can have any climatic advantages over those of any INDEPENDENT grower or shipper in that state? Does a HALO of silver-plated Orange spoons make the Orange any better—especially when you pay for the HALO? Has any grower or particular group of growers a MONOPOLY of the beneficent sun's rays of California?

IF YOUR CUSTOMERS wish the privilege of purchasing an Orange spoon at manufacturer's price, no middleman's profits—along with each dozen of Oranges, the Independent Orange shippers will supply you. We, the undersigned, or any jobber handling Independent packs of Oranges, are authorized to furnish you with elegant silver-plated Orange spoons or fruit knives, LOUIS and ROSE PATTERN, at manufacturer's prices. When ordering Independent packs of Oranges you can get these decidedly superior spoons or fruit knives of the most up-to-date and popular STERLING SILVER PATTERNS at $1.10 per dozen. Give them to your customers at 10c. with each purchase of a dozen of Oranges. This leaves a little for "THE BOY," that's you.

Did you ever hear of a COAL KING, a WHEAT KING, a STEEL KING or any other commercial KING providing for the BOY? We guess not. Nor will a FRUIT KING, which you will create and are creating to-day, if you are one of the majority of retailers who are at present wearing the muzzle of a monopoly.

Stop and think, before you get in too deep—before all the Independent shippers of California are absorbed. Get in a line of INDEPENDENT ORANGES and INDEPENDENT SPOONS and KNIVES and be INDEPENDENT.

Yours very truly,

CAMERON HUSBAND, EUGENE MOORE, J. J. McCABE.

APPLE CIDER INTOXICATING?

Prosecution Against Moncton Grocer—British Demand for Apples.

St. John, N.B., March 23.—Prosecutions against retail grocerymen for unknowingly violating the Scott Act may result if conviction is found against a Moncton grocery dealer, who was charged in the Moncton police court last week with selling intoxicating liquor, the beverage being apple cider. One witness was examined and said he felt pretty good after indulging in a couple of drinks of cider. The case was adjourned for a week.

G. E. Barbour & Co., Ltd., of St. John, have bought the wholesale grocery business of A. I. Teed, St. Stephen. The business will be continued there, and E. R. Teed will remain with the firm and continue in charge of their Woodstock branch.

J. E. Furness, of the Furness line of steamers, Halifax, was in the city last week. Speaking of the apple trade with Great Britain, he said it was surprising that notwithstanding the poor quality of apples sent out from Canada this year, there was a greater demand for them in the English market than ever. Nova Scotia alone sent more than 100,000 barrels of apples to the old country.

The project to organise a co-operative store here does not seem to be meeting with the enthusiastic success that the promoters of the scheme expected. At a meeting held last week the committee appointed to prepare a report on the project, stated that it would be necessary to have at least 200 members to start with, and that the minimum amount each would have to contribute had been fixed at $10. After a canvass of the meeting only twenty subscribers were secured. The project is still in abeyance.

Is High Cost of Living Due to Cost of High Living?

Retail Grocers Tell of Luxuries Indulged in by People Who Cannot Afford Them—Effects of the Bargain Hunting Craze—The Cost of Amusements—Groceries Handled at Smaller Profits Than Usual.

The "high cost of living" question treated from the standpoint of the "cost of living high," brings out some assertions worth more than a passing consideration. A number of Canadian grocers interviewed indicate that the public has no reason to complain about the high prices of standard foods that are paid to the retail trade, but that the high cost is due to injudicious and extravagant buying.

Bargain hunting, they claim, is fashionable, but careful, economical buying seems undignified and looks small. Householders buy as regular daily food in the midst of winter such articles as green vegetables, strawberries, oranges, etc., which, a few years ago, were only used by those who could afford luxuries.

Groceries, they say, with the exception of bacon, lard and poultry, are not appreciably higher than they have often been before, and many are lower. That the average cost of necessary groceries has never been much lower, that retailers have never been working on smaller profits, and that therefore the blow aimed at the grocers has entirely missed the mark, are the contentions of the trade in general. All the arguments stimulated by false representations of an organized retail movement and about the unfairness of the retail trade are, if this be true, left without a leg on which to stand.

Is Bargain Hunting the Cause?

One grocer maintained that the high prices of goods have nothing to do with the present trouble.

"It is caused in a great degree by spending money for things people don't need, but buy them because they are bargains. This bargain hunting has become as fascinating as gambling. People buy things because they think they are bargains and when they bring them home, they find that they have no use for them and wonder why they bought them.

"It is a daily occurrence that people spend 10c car fare to buy a thing 5c under value, just because they can no more resist the temptation than a toper can resist the temptation of a glass of whiskey.

"Call it a disease if you like, but I think it is a craze. Hundreds of women are spending their time under the influence of this craze who should be at home looking after their families."

Another said: "I find, as a rule, the people who get behind in paying their grocery bills are working people who spend everything they earn, and if sickness overtakes them, or they get out of work, they have nothing on which to live. They have no idea of economy, they will have the most expensive goods and never think of saving anything for a rainy day.

"To give you an example, I sell rice at 5, 7, 8 and 10c a lb. The 5 cent rice is just as good food as any, but I sell very little of it, for nearly all want the 10c rice. It is, of course, in my interests to sell the high priced rice, but I merely show you that people are not buying according to their means."

To Divert Attention.

"Bacon is very high," said a third, "but let me tell you that six years ago I paid 19c for the best bacon, which is very little less than what we pay now.

"I believe that all this talk in the newspapers about the high cost of living is aimed at the small retailers in trying to lead people to think that they are paying too much for their goods and that they can save money by buying from the large stores. Goods were never handled at a smaller profit than they are now.

"People who cannot afford it are buying too many luxuries," declared one grocer. "They do not get down and live on plain, pure, wholesome food. They seem to forget how far they have to make their money reach. They buy what they see and what they think they would like.

"Of course, we like to sell goods we have in stock, but I would rather not keep them at all, because they are too expensive for a great many people."

"I find that the working people in this country," said an English grocer, "are not economical in their cooking. They are far more wasteful and buy more luxuries than people in the same standing do in the old country.

"The working people. with the professional dead beats, are the people, as a rule, who get behind with their accounts, but it is not because the necessaries of life are dear. They are making more money than they used to do, and imagine they are no longer poor and, therefore, must have the best of everything that is going. It will not do for them to admit that they cannot afford to buy luxuries.

"You will be surprised to see how much green vegetables are sold in the winter now, and you know they cannot be bought here and sold at a low price. Strawberries are bought at 75c a box, and all want the best creamery butter."

Money for Trifling Things.

"One of the main reasons why so many people find it hard to pay their accounts is the fact that they are spending so much of their money for trifling things. Look at those 5c shows all over the country. It is only 5c, but they take in more than any ordinary store, and those who attend have that much less to pay for things they need. Hundreds of little catchy things are bought when all their money is needed to support their families.

"There is certainly no combination in the grocery business that affects the prices of groceries. Groceries are not unreasonably high compared with wages and salaries, and the people have certainly no reason to kick about the cost of the groceries they buy. They can live within their incomes if they want to.

"Why should the papers kick up all this fuss about the high cost of living and put the blame on those who handle the different foods for the people, as if food were the only thing for which people were paying out their money? Why do they not say something about the high rents, high doctors' fees, high lawyers' fees, high cost of ladies' hats, etc. These are all infinitely higher from a standpoint of profit and real value than anything the people eat, even including bacon at 25c and turkey at 30c a pound.

"Why should the grocer and butcher always be singled out as the men who are the cause of the high cost of living, and yet there is not a class of people with equal intelligence, who do as much work and give as good value for as little profit as these men do? Retailers have been standing behind their counters as targets for everybody to shoot at, and it is up to us to demand equal rights with others and stand on a level with the best of them."

The question of profits was discussed by another grocer. He said, "What is the sense in suspecting the retailers of charging too much for their goods when many of them are not making as much as an ordinary laborer, and can scarcely make a living. You would never think that people were hard up for money when you watch the theatres, nickel shows, skating rinks, etc. A dollar a seat is a trifle compared with two cents advance on a pound of bacon."

The above interviews shed considerable light on the "high cost of living" complaints and demonstrate that the retail trade should not carry the entire blame. The idea that people have nowadays that, no matter how low their wages or salaries may be, they should indulge in luxuries, has done much to increase the cost of living. The staple articles of food have not advanced over prices prevailing during recent years to any extent with one or two exceptions—meat products being the chief of these. In many cases prices are lower, but generally speaking the average cost of standard groceries in season is the same as it has been during the last few years.

A Good Repeater

A prominent grocer, when recently asked what kind of goods he liked to sell best, replied:—

"Give me a good repeater like Royal Baking Powder; an established article of undisputed merit which housekeepers repeatedly buy and are always satisfied with."

NEW baking powders and new foods, like new fads, come and go but Royal goes on forever. Grocers are always sure of a steady sale of Royal Baking Powder, which never fails to please their customers, and in the end yields to them a larger profit than cheaper and inferior brands.

FRIENDS—NOT GROWLERS

RISING SUN Stove Polish in Cakes never comes back to you with growls from the housekeeper. It is always up to the same high standard maintained for forty years, and it is always just right. That's why we have the thousands upon thousands of grocers pushing it everywhere. Grocers don't wish to run the risk of losing a good c is-tomer by passing out an inferior stove polish, which is wrong more often than it is right. RISING SUN makes friends for you and for us in every household where you put it.

SALT:

PRESERVING POTATOES.—There is an old but excellent process for preserving potatoes which we might do well to adopt. A large boiler is filled with a saturated solution of Salt. This is made to boil, and the potatoes, placed in an open wicker basket, are plunged completely into this boiling saline bath for exactly ten seconds. The basket is then withdrawn, the potatoes dry quickly in a warm place, and when thoroughly dry are stowed. A very large quantity can be treated quickly in this way. They will keep sound, without sprouting, through the severest winter.

What "McCray" Means on a Refrigerator

IT means it will reduce your ice bill because of superior construction (built to last), superior insulation (keeps the warm air out), and superior circulation of air (keeps inside dry.) When you get a McCray Refrigerator you've got the B-E-S-T refrigerator you can get. Instead of an "ice-eater" that permits perishable goods to spoil on your hands you'll have a perfect refrigerator that preserves such goods with the smallest possible consumption of ice and also increases their sale by displaying them attractively.

To learn why this is so and how a McCray Refrigerator works send us a postal card with your name and address and ask for "Catalog No. 66." It describes McCray Grocers' Refrigerators especially, and you will find it full of valuable hints.

Berkel's Improved Slicing Machine

BERKEL'S Latest Improvement Patent Knife Guard to protect operators from accidents by thoughtlessly getting their hands against the circular knife. The only slicing machine in the world that has this protection.

BERKEL'S is the machine with the Patent Automatic Sharpener, by means of which the keen cutting edge on the knife is constantly maintained. The only machine with an automatic sharpening device. Simply press the Carborundum wheel shown in the cut above the knife downward and it strikes the knife edge at just the proper angle, a few turns of the wheel and your knife has an edge like a razor.

Will Slice Boiled Ham and Bacon Down to the Last Ounce

We call attention to the photographic production of two plates of boiled ham, there is just one pound of ham on each plate, it was all cut from the same piece, the eight slices on the right hand plate were cut with an ordinary knife, while the twenty uniform slices on the left hand plate were sliced on a slicing machine. This is an average result. The difference can be more or less marked according to the skill and time given the hand cutting, however the machine never can vary, the customer is always protected by dealing where there is a BERKEL'S Improved Slicing Machine. Dried Beef can be sliced thinner, quicker and better on BERKEL'S than any other made. The BERKEL'S Improved Slicing Machine is now used by Grocers, Butchers, Department stores, Delicatessens, Hotels, Restaurants, Hospitals, Educational Institutions, Steamship and Railway Companies, Charitable Institutions, Penal Institutions, the Army and Navy, Soldiers' Homes, etc. BERKEL'S Improved Slicing Machine can be set to cut automatically (14) different thicknesses, from 1-40 of an inch up to ¾ of an inch, "it cuts bread or meat equally well," requires no skill to operate and will slice perfectly more meat or bread in twelve miuutes than the most expert cutter can slice by hand in an hour. While it is a hand machine, for several years many packers, as well as grocers and marketmen who do a large sliced meat business, have been running their BERKEL'S Improved Slicing Machines by mechanical power. Enough pieces of bacon can be put on this machine to cut 300 slices a minute. This should be of interest to those who put up bacon in boxes, glass or tin cans.

THE HIGH PRICES OF EATABLES

Have caused the consuming public more closely than ever to observe the scales used by the grocer and butcher. People lack confidence in Spring Scales, Beam and Even-Balance Scales. But they like to buy over Toledo Scales, because they can see the beautiful Toledo Springless Mechanism which automatically does the weighing; the scales show them the exact weight of their purchase; they see on the scales the signs, "No Springs," "Honest Weight," and have full confidence that their purchases are weighed correctly.

NO WAITING—NO ERRORS

There is no waiting for a salesman to find a balance or to figure what to charge. The Toledo itself does the weighing and calculates the exact value mechanically, instantly and accurately. Thus time is saved, errors avoided, profits assured, customers pleased. Any customer prefers to trade where his purchases are weighed by the most modern, automatic, reliable weighing machine than to buy supplies over old-style scales.

YOU CAN GET THESE ADVANTAGES

Write us and learn how profitable it would be to you to get a profit-increasing and trade-bringing Toledo Scale. We make allowances for some scales in part payment for Toledos. Tell us what you have. We guarantee a better computing scale for less money than you can get from any other source. Write for our Book 3, showing scales and prices.

Self-Measuring Systems

For Handling

Kerosene or Gasolene

Emphasize one feature that is important above all others in the general store—

CLEANLINESS

From the slopping and dripping of faucets and funnels, the porous boards of the floor near the oil supply becom soaked through and through, making the appearance unsightly and unclean. In any store, un der the old method of handling oil, this condition exists — it cannot be avoided. The merchandise stored near such a place is easily contaminated. After drawing oil the least odor from hands or clothes is absorbed by the paper used to wrap up merchandise, which quickly becomes infected with the disagreeable and nauseous taste of oil.

The only system that will remove these objections is one that will hold the oil in a tank absolutely leak and evaporation proof, measure the oil accuratctly into the customer's can with neither spilling nor slopping, dispose of unclean measures and funnels, androne in which the flow of the oil is instantly cut off the moment the desired amount is drawn. All of these features and more are found in the Bowser Adjustable Measure Oil Equipments. They will meet any conditions and requirements, being made in more than fifty different styles.

If you are interested, you need only drop a card, asking for Bulletin 5, and you will then receive full information.

The Peddler Is Taking Your Trade

Let us tell you how. During the past few months our representative has been distributing samples of "SALADA" Tea. He collected accurate information as to the kind of tea used by each householder at every house in twelve towns. His figures are interesting and reveal conditions that should arouse the fighting spirit in every retail grocer in Canada. We find the peddler is doing an enormous business in tea. Look at these figures—study them. The peddler's share of the trade was as follows:

Beaverton	26.96%	Port Perry	16.17%	Bowmanville	13.15%
Tweed	22.08%	Sunderland	15.51%	Newcastle	12.92%
Cannington	19.11%	Whitby	15.49%	Colborne	10.93%
Woodville	17.04%	Havelock	14.11%	Norwood	10.56%

Thus you are losing 16.16 per cent. of the total trade. It is being taken away from under your very nose—and remember that these figures apply only to the town trade. Conditions are worse in the country. You can never hope to win back the peddler's trade by selling Bulk Tea. You can only do it by educating your customers to buy goods the peddler cannot buy. We can help you. You can help us. Then let us get together and the peddler can be made to disappear, because "SALADA" has a distinctive flavor and freshness that the public like and desire. Our share is to give high quality and value in "SALADA" packages—yours to keep a good stock of "SALADA" on hand, to keep it well to the front and recommend it to your customers. It will mean increasing business for you and will turn many a dollar of profit into your pocket that you are now losing to the peddler.

Food Standards for Spices Expected About June

Instances of Adulterated Goods Being Sold as Pure to Wholesale and Retail Trade—The Protection Which These Standards Will Give—Where Wholesale Confectioner and Retail Grocer Had to be Shown—Olive Stones for Adulterating Ginger.

It is stated that the Food Standards covering spices will be ready some time in June or probably a little later, and, from information received by the Canadian Grocer regarding fraudulent practices, their advent into Canada cannot come any too soon.

Since Food Standards mean greater protection to the retail trade, which is now held responsible for selling adulterated for pure goods, retailers should welcome the change which will place the grocery trade on a better basis, insuring fairness in competition to all its sections.

Instances, as above intimated, have come to hand demonstrating the necessity for spice standards. It is known that travelers of spice houses have been unable to sell guranteed pure spices to wholesalers at cost prices and even less simply because they claimed to be getting better prices from other manufacturers for the same goods represented to be pure. In some cases the price was lower by 3, 4 and 5 cents per pound.

A traveler called on a wholesale distributor not long ago to sell him pure ground cloves. He quoted his price but was surprised to learn that it was away away too high, for he was offering it practically at cost.

"But," said the traveler, "you cannot obtain pure ground cloves below the price I quote—what I'm offering you is the pure unadulerated article, isn't that what you require?"

He was told that he was buying pure ground cloves. The spice salesman then requested him to call up the firm from whom he got the price and ask them at what they would sell whole cloves, and if he could secure them below the price quoted for ground cloves or even at the same price, he would be quite satisfied.

Accepted by Retail Trade.

He was informed that his trade (the retail) accepted what he was offering them, that retailers were quite satisfied and that since the price was much lower he would continue to buy from the same house.

The same traveler called on a large wholesale confectioner who used spices extensively, where he expected an order. He quoted him a price on a guaranteed pure spice, but was laughed at. The confectioner could get it 6 cents per pound cheaper and it was guaranteed pure into the bargain.

He also requested the confectioner to inquire what price he would be quoted for the raw material, stating that if it were not higher than that of the unground spice—and it should have been at least 1¼ cents lower if the ground spice were pure—he wouldn't ask him for another order and he would make him a nice bonus into the bargain.

The confectioner agreed. The traveler took a walk around the block, returned, and obtained the order at the first price quoted—6 cents above that of the other spice house. The confectioner had actually been quoted 3 cents per lb. more than for the ground material and was satisfied that the "pure" goods he formerly was getting could not possibly have been as represented. It was plain to him that a manufacturer could not buy raw material at say 19 cents, grind it, sell it pure at 16 cents and at the same time make a profit.

That confectioner was particular in getting the pure stuff else the house selling honest goods couldn't have made a sale.

Had to Convince the Grocer.

Here is another instance: A traveler out on the road called on a retail grocer who had practically promised, on the occasion of his last visit, a spice order. When he quoted prices, however, he couldn't sell. The grocer could buy the same pure spices 10 or 15 cents per dozen packages cheaper.

The traveler secured from the grocer's shelf a package of the goods marked pure which he had bought ten cents cheaper, paid the grocer for it, dumped it out on the counter and got one of his own samples from his grip. The grocer objected that samples were not reliable. The traveler then bought a package of his own spice which the grocer happened to have on the shelf and compared the two on the counter. The contrast was so great that he got the order at once and was told that the shipment the grocer had secured from the other house would be immediately returned.

That was a case where a house was permitted to show that its prices were fair if it could only get the opportunity to demonstrate the quality of its goods. But in many cases a fair demonstration is not allowed. The salesman doesn't even get that far. He is merely told that he is getting pure goods at greatly reduced prices and he doesn't want to buy.

The word "pure" is marked on labels of packages containing adulterated goods and quite naturally a merchant will purchase the cheaper goods. This is competition which is unfair and the Food Standards are intended to remove this difficulty.

Olive Stones for Ginger.

Not long ago in one district in Canada an agent claimed to have sold 3 carloads of ground olive stones for adulterating ginger. There are many things that might be used for adulteration purposes which are not injurious to the health, but few grocers would care to buy a mixture of ginger and ground olive stone and still recommend it to their customers.

It is only proper that if a manufacturer sells a mixture it should be marked "compound" and not "pure." Both the jobber and retailer would then know what they were getting.

Food Standards are intended to make this possible so that before the end of 1910 we may expect to see manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers all on the same basis so far as selling pure and compound spices is concerned.

D. RATTRAY & SONS' FAILURE.

Members of Firm Out on Bail and Warrants Issued for Arrest of Others.

Montreal, March 31.—One of the biggest failures which has occurred in Quebec Province in some time, and one that is proving far-reaching in its effects, is that of D. Rattray & Sons, Quebec and Montreal. Total liabilities are placed at $250,000, and the number of firms who are suffering as a result of the failure includes many prominent houses, as well as five banks. D. Rattray, of the Quebec house, has been arrested, and several warrants are out for the arrest of John Rattray, who managed the Montreal office.

Where John Rattray is to-day no one seems to know. It is rumored that he is in Mexico.

It is several years since Rattrays opened a Montreal office. The firm was highly thought of in Quebec and Montreal for years, and the opening of the Montreal branch was looked on as a sign of progress. For several months past there have been rumors regarding the firm's standing.

Their chief business was in sugars, molasses, nuts and pork. In sugars they did a large business, importing, and under-selling Canadian manufacturers. The market went against them, however, and they lost heavily. They broke the market in molasses, too.

A later despatch says that a warrant has been issued for the arrest of D. J. Rattray, Montreal manager of the firm, by J. A. McLean, of the Canadian Cocoanut Co., and also one against W. J. Lefebvre, formerly chief clerk in Montreal. The warrant charges the defendants with having received a certain valuable security—an accepted draft for $174.46—on conditions requiring them to account for or pay the proceeds to a certain bank, and that they have omitted to account for the same and have fraudulently converted the same to their own use.'

Lefebvre appeared before the magistrate and was allowed freedom on nominal bail, when he pleaded not guilty. On petition, E. J. Waterson is meeting the creditors at the Court House here today.

D. Rattray, Quebec, who was arrested last Thursday, is out on $4,000 bail. Preliminary investigation will be held in Quebec City to-morrow.

Retailers to be Heard at Wholesalers' Convention

First Time in History of the Grocery Trade in Canada That Manufacturers, Wholesalers and Retailers Will Unite to Talk Conditions—Date of Meeting Decided Upon and Programme Partly Arranged—A New Era Opening for the Trade.

Toronto, March 31. — As intimated some time ago in the Canadian Grocer, the Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Exchange will meet this year in Toronto, and a feature will be the presence of retailers and manufacturers to discuss trade questions of the day.

At a recent meeting of the Exchange held here, the date of the convention was decided upon, and preliminary arrangements made.

It will open on Monday, April 25th, and will continue over Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, and a room to accommodate at least 150 will be secured.

It was decided that at the convention there would be no discussion of individual grievances, but that the discussions and papers would all be on the general policy of the principle of conducting business on good, fair, honest lines, admitting there are evils to overcome, but not specifically stating any individual grievance that a particular house might have.

After the preliminaries incidental to the opening of such a meeting, which will include the address of President W. G. Craig, Kingston, an important question will be discussed, namely: "Conditions of the trade among manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers, and the educational value of trade meetings," the subject to be introduced by F. T. Smye, Hamilton.

At 2.30, H. C. Beckett will introduce the subject: "Are our relations with manufacturers satisfactory What the judgment teaches."

At 3.30, Hugh Blain will read a paper on "Declarations—their uses and importance."

"How to preserve the interests of the retail trade," will be introduced by Jno. Dillon, London.

"The cost of doing business," will be another subject for the first day, as well as "transportation difficulties."

Tuesday will be known as Manufacturers' Day, and all manufacturers with whom the wholesale grocers do business are to be invited.

Several important questions are on the slate for this day, including the Contract Selling Plan; discrimination in favor of certain retailers; quantity price and wholesaler's cost of doing business. It is anticipated that this conference will take the entire day.

Address on Secret Commissions Act.

Wednesday will be devoted principally to retail grocers and will be known as Manufacturers' and Retailers' Day.

At 10 a.m. E. M. Trowern, secretary of the Dominion Retail Merchants' Association, will give an address on "the relation between manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers," to be followed by a discussion. This is an important matter, and it is likely that the entire morning will be used in talking over grievances in the trade.

By special arrangement E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., will address the meeting at 2.30 on Tuesday on "The Secret Commissions Act, and the rights of manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers as defined in the judgment of Guild suit." The entire afternoon will be devoted to this question.

The fourth day will include adoption of by-laws, election of officers and committees, resolution re travelers' holidays, resolution re Christmas presents, etc.

FRUIT TREES AND FROST.

Upon the weather of the next month will depend to a great extent the fruit crops of the coming season.

The warm spell of weather which we have been experiencing during the past two weeks is unreasonable and fruit growers will await with interest conditions in April and during the early part of May. To have a warm March followed by severe cold will certainly be detrimental to the buds of fruit trees and to small plants whose roots are now beginning to awaken after the winter months.

The longer the warm spell lasts the more advanced will be the buds. Therefore if warm weather should last another week it would cause the buds to be still further advanced, and then it would take but a moderate amount of cold to cause considerable damage—in short, the damage, providing frosts do come, will be directly proportionate to the length of time the mild weather lasts and how severe the frosts are.

Statements of Western Ontario fruit growers substantiate this view of the situation; but the question is, has spring come to stay or will we see severe cold weather during April?

The "weather man" in the government observatory at Toronto tells The Canadian Grocer that there are no indications of any serious cold or stormy weather. He says it does not follow that because March is warm that we will have a backward April and May.

In 1878 we had one of the warmest springs on record and it was introduced by a mild March—just such a one as has been experienced this year.

There will, of course, be periods of cooler weather, he says. We are not yet out of the frost danger zone and some short dips of the mercury are to be expected, but it is not likely they will last.

TO MAKE CIVIL SERVANTS PAY.

Merchants throughout the country will be glad to learn of the introduction of a bill in the Dominion House of Commons to amend the civil service act by making all money due on salaries to civil servants liable to attachment for debts in every province according to the laws in each province.

Merchants should see that the members representing their constituencies support this bill when it comes up for argument. There is no reason why civil servants should be exempt from paying their just debts, when others are compelled to do so by law.

As the law stands at present, it is taken for granted that all in the civil service are honest—a rather broad supposition. But if the amendment to the act goes through it places them on the same basis as the majority of the remainder of mortals.

THE MAPLE SEASON.

Warm weather this week is proving unwelcome to owners of maple groves, who are desirous of having the true sap weather. The run of sap this year is not proving of as long duration as was anticipated, and unless weather conditions change there will be a shortage of maple syrup and maple sugar.

The quality is first-class, better than it has been for some seasons, such of the syrup as has so far been received. Prices are firm.

CANNED GOODS SITUATION.

There is much speculation as to the outcome of the canned goods prices before the new stock arrives.

The most puzzling situation, however, is in canned tomatoes. While all jobbers claim that they are good holdings yet many thought prices would have been raised somewhat higher before this. Canners expected it too, but some are disappointed.

Information secured from a member of the latter indicate that canners as a rule did not put up as many tomatoes as a year ago. Some are 10,000 and more cases short.

Yet jobbers state that tomatoes are easier than they were last autumn, although their stocks are not so large as usual at this season of the year. They claim too that tomatoes are valuable and that the probabilities are they will go up, but that consumption has not been extra large.

Instances are known where retailers are selling portions of their canned goods stock back to wholesalers at a profit and are even selling to their competitors. This applies more particularly to peas and corn.

The salmon market is also firm, almost every jobber being short of his usual requirements — especially the better grades—and the best season for salmon has not yet arrived.

It is expected that by the time the summer salmon trade is over stocks will be extremely light, and, with the short run this year, coming on a bare market, the salmon market will be strong for some time to come.

With regard to canned fruits, business is comparatively quiet owing to the large amount of fruit preserved by housewives last autumn and also to the large supplies of apples that are yet being held throughout the country.

CANADA-U. S. TARIFF AGREEMENT

Canada and the United States have reached a tariff agreement whereby Canada will be placed on the U. S. minimum tariff basis. Canada has agreed to grant reductions on a limited list of 13 items in the general tariff.

The changes affecting grocery articles are as follows:

WHAT TO DO IN APRIL.

During April, grocers as a rule, if their trade is slack put the blame on the fact that their customers are busy doing housecleaning. This, in itself, is a reminder that housecleaning in a grocery store is also necessary during this month and more particularly that it is a time to display brooms, brushes, soaps, lyes, dust-layers, cleansing powders, wall-papers, mops, etc., which are all needed for housecleaning in the homes.

In a grocery store housecleaning means more than merely a cleaning up with soap and water; it means that the whole store should be put in shape for the summer's business.

The soap and water part of it, however, should not be overlooked, for it should reach every part of the entire store, from top to bottom. The stock should have a careful going over, and all goods which are not salable during the summer and especially if they are perishable, should be quickly disposed of.

The refrigerator should have careful attention and a thorough cleaning. Neglect of this may result in much trouble and loss during the summer. Butter, which is the chief article kept in the refrigerator, in fact, which should have either the entire refrigerator or a separate department, is delicate and easily tainted. A perfectly clean refrigerator, free from any possible odor, is absolutely necessary for best results. The water pan, pipes, etc., should be carefully examined, to insure against leakages. The doors should fit tightly to save waste of ice.

The awnings also require attention during the month. A fresh coat of paint and varnish on the store exterior will have a good advertising effect and will be money well spent.

A change in the arrangement of the goods in some cases to give the store a different appearance will also be appreciated by customers. All open bags, boxes, barrels, etc., should be removed as much as possible to give the store a more airy and spring-like character to correspond with warm weather methods.

Improvements for handling fresh vegetables and fruit should be considered, in order to serve them in better condition and also to avoid waste. The delivery wagons also require attention as these are moving round all the time, they are one of the strongest advertising mediums the retailer has in his possession. A dirty, delapidated wagon, a poorly fed, badly groomed horse, and a slovenly looking driver will not invite many new customers, but an up-to-date, clean looking vehicle, with an attractive horse and a clean, cheerful driver will attract attention and bring trade to the store.

The advertising of hams, shoulders and bacon, and naming prices, will be favorably received by the public, especially in view of the great amount of talk about the high price of meats. If you have a ham and shoulder counter, make a big display. On a table near the hams and shoulders a display of the different sized pails of lard and shortening preparations, might be made, having each kind opened and a neat sign accompanying each. The signs should mention, incidentally, the price, for often people will buy when they see the price who will not otherwise do so. Use the local paper to advertise the sale.

Special attention should also be directed to the sale of seeds in April. Frequently a display of garden seeds in the window will attract farmers to a store who will purchase other goods as well. It is worth while trying.

SPICE STANDARDS IN JUNE.

Work on the food standards for Canada is going merrily on at Ottawa in the Inland Revenue department and the end of 1910 will see considerable progress.

It is reported on good authority that the standards for spices will be finished some time in June. This will be welcome news to retail dealers who are anxious to know what they are getting and who want to be honest in selling to the general public what the general public asks for.

WHY ONE MERCHANT FAILED.

A Toronto grocer gave up business this month. That is not unusual, but the reason why he sold out is: He had a well-built store on a fine corner, to which the trade of several hundred families should easily have been drawn. His store was the first in the district, being built four years ago before the section was built up. The stock was good, no credit was given, the window displays were the most attractive of any store in the neighborhood, and a neat wagon and fine horse were kept in a brick stable on the premises. Everything seemed favorable to success.

But there was one thing wrong—the store service — and it killed all the chances of building up a successful business. The grocer and those assisting him put no heart into their work. Customers were waited upon as a matter of duty rather than pleasure. There was no apparent effort to please, and one by one customers were driven to other stores where the clerks did not appear to be bored when asked to sell goods and where they would not hear the grocer and his wife passing unfavorable comments upon customers who had just left the store.

The success of a store depends upon many things, but a chain is no stronger than its weakest link and the weak link in this case was store service. Are there any weak links in your chain?

TACT AMONG SALESMAN.

The use of diplomacy in salesmanship cannot be exercised too highly. The salesman who is tactful in handling customers has a great asset in his favor even if he is careless in other things about the store.

Tact is needed in selling groceries probably more particularly than in anything else because foodstuffs are everyday requirements and buying is done so frequently.

It may be an easy matter for a retail grocery salesman to persuade a woman to accept a certain article in preference to another, but if he is tactful he must be sure that that article will satisfy her better. A diplomatic clerk can sell a high quality article where a poorer one is called for and still be sure that it will give better satisfaction. He must be careful, though, not to allow a customer to think that he is trying to make such a sale because there is more profit on it. That would be disastrous.

In many cases it would be a mistake for a retail salesman to sell an article to a customer which could not be recommended when the store was out of what was asked for—especially if he knew that such a customer desired only the best of goods.

The tactful salesman would decline to sell, but would, of course, secure the article desired from some source or promise to have it in stock in a short time—and he would also advise his employer to see that the proper assortment of goods was in stock.

The clerk who watches the clock will never make a success.

Clerks should not loaf in front of the store. It obstructs the show window and is a poor advertisement for the business.

A clerk who isn't capable of selling any article in the store is not a full-fledged clerk, merely an assistant.

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

Easter Window Displays in St. John—Western Merchants Keep Close Tab on Markets—Cold Storage in Cellar for Fruits—New Fixtures in a Brantford Store —Another Early Closing Experiment—Watching Dead Beats in Atlantic City.

Rival Easter Windows.

St. John, N.B., March 31.—That "competition is the life of trade" was evidenced in the Easter window displays of two retail grocers, whose stores are not many blocks apart. One, showing Easter eggs, had a hencoop in the window with the egg producer (a big white Wyandotte) in sight and the legend on a card, "Fresh Laid Eggs." Not to be outdone, the rival followed this lead by a display of eggs surmounted by this card, "Let others have the hen, we have the fresh laid eggs." Both displays were effective.

Watching Markets Closely.

Winnipeg, March 31.—A traveler recently stated that all grocers on whom he calls are wide-awake men, and are making money because they carefully manipulate their businesses. The cash system is becoming more and more popular, and the mail order octopus is receiving its reward. Merchants are watching the markets and buying at the most advantageous prices. The trade is really in an excellent condition in this section of the country.

Cold Storage in Cellar.

Port Arthur, March 31.—Campbell & Gibbon, grocers, have moved into a new building 90 feet long by 21 feet wide. They have the whole of the cellar under the building, about 4,200 square feet, for storage room which includes a large cold storage warehouse for fruits, etc., in the hot season.

In the evening and whenever neecessary during the day the store can be brilliantly illuminated, four large clusters down the centre of the store carrying most of the lighting burden. The store is well fitted up with modern shelves. New fixtures have been ordered for this store and will be here when navigation opens from the east. An electric coffee grinder has already been installed, while among other novelties that will soon be placed in this store is a modern slicing machine, which will be used in the serviing of ham, bacon, etc.

Fixtures in a New Store.

Brantford, Mach 31.—With premises more than twice as large as their former store, the J. Forde Co., grocers, are now comfortably settled down in a new business establishment.

The store has exceptional advantages from a lighting standpoint, two large plate glass windows, with two smaller ones, providing an abundance of light. The store is longer in the portion fronting the street, than in depth. The shelving is of the latest design, the bulk goods being placed in airtight and dustproof bins, to prevent contaminating influences. To the left upon entering is the main counter, with another to the rear. On the right, two show cases of fancy biscuits and fancy confectionery are given a good position. The office is to the rear on the right. A card index system of bookkeeping is employed.

The J. Forde Co. cater to the high class trade of the city, their specialties being the supply of goods for "at-homes" and other such festive occasions.

The store front is of mission style, and presents an excellent appearance, which is contributed to by the well dressed windows which in the past have been a feature of the store.

Early Closing Experiment.

Perth, Ont., March 31.—Perth stores have been closing at 6 p.m. every night in the week except Saturday evenings since January 1st. Beginning last week though they were back to the old plan closing only Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 6 p.m. The every night closing was tried as an experiment during the winter months. It worked out all right, daily sales keeping up as well as usual during those months.

N. E. Dodds, Gore St., turns his spare time during the winter season into money. He has been quite successful this winter in making a number of varieties of "Home Made Candy." This candy finds ready sale at a good profit.

"Red Book" for Atlantic City.

Atlantic City, N.J., March 31.—"Dead beats" who refuse to settle accounts with local merchants are to be listed in a special "Red Book" to be issued by the Credit Bureau Association of merchants connected with the business league.

Members of the league are under contract not to extend credit to any persons whose names are on the list and officials of the bureau report that scores of delinquent debtors have paid old debts rather than chance the list.

J. A. McLean, of the Canadian Cocoanut Co., Montreal, who has been laid up from an injury to his foot, has recovered and is again at work.

ASSOCIATION ARRANGES WINDOW COMPETITION.

Vancouver, B.C., March 30.—An interesting display competition is being carried on by the Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association, which gives an incentive to clerks to exercise the faculties they have along the line of making a window attractive.

In the first place, the names of wholesale firms that handle particular classes of goods were put into a hat. A wholesale provision firm was pulled first, and the first display was of its goods. Next week it will be someone else, and so on. Only four members of the association entered into the competition, but it is expected that with a local firm's goods to be displayed on the next occasion that many more will enter. Not only that, but more interest will have been aroused in the contest.

Judges of the windows were W. J. Haddock, of the produce firm of Parsons & Haddock; H. Leslie Maclean, tea buyer and blender for W. J. McMillan & Co., being representatives respectively of the general wholesale produce men and the grocers, with R. B. Bennett, of The Canadian Grocer, as third man.

The A. & C. Grocery took an easy first; the London Grocery's Fairview branch, second, and the London Grocery on Granville street, third, the prizes being $15, $10 and $5. Frank Wright, the other entry, had the best color scheme, but fell short on other points.

To give opportunity to all alike, the merits of the windows were judged on three conditions: First, effectiveness as regards sales; second, ideas shown, and third, general attractiveness — 50 points for the first and 25 each for the others. The judges agreed that in all one vital point was lacking, namely, a price card. The winner of the competition had the best opportunity, for in the centre was a whole hog, and the effectiveness of contrast, since the price of the animal has gone up, was lost. These displays should create a considerable local interest, not only in the goods, but also in the association.

Merchants' Troubles in Collecting Small Debts

With Present Laws, Accounts of $5 or under Cannot be Collected Without Greater Expense Than they are Worth, Says Winnipeg Merchant—What the 'Small Debt Court' was Intended to do and How Legislation to Secure it was Blocked —Troubles in Garnisheeing Wages.

Winnipeg, March 31.—The collection of small accounts was one of the subjects treated at the business banquet of the Western Retail Merchants' Association mentioned in last week's issue. The address was given by A. G. Lowman, provision merchant, Winnipeg.

"Look back over your small accounts that no law will allow you to collect and you will be assured that the subject is worthy of consideration," he said.

"The law as it stands now is too clumsy to bring it into operation for the enforced payment of small accounts, or any account under or about five dollars. To sue or garnishee is of no avail.

"An instance came to my notice recently of a merchant who sued for a small account. Summons was issued four times and all were ignored. The fifth time the magistrate ordered a gaol term, and within one hour the wife of the accused produced the amount due and the cost of the court. The amount was not worth the trouble to get it.

Cannot Sell for Cash.

"Some might say, why not sell for cash and no bad debts will arise? A family provision trade cannot be run on a cash basis. We must have monthly credit accounts. The cash customer is not loyal, but will run everywhere for goods.

"Now a furniture man has a lien on goods he sells for credit, and the furniture is his until it is paid for. But it would be a useless endeavor for the provision merchant to have a lien on the goods he sells. We are after a feasible policy. We should be protected against the delinquents who rob us, and whose debts we often forget in order to help them out. We want a legal law rather than a moral law to protect us. How to get redress has been admitted by the attorney-general and the premier of this province to be a large question —in fact, too large to permit of any immediate remedy.

"The exemption act works seriously against the retail merchant in this matter. The act was made years ago to apply to the settler in the province, who had to have food irrespective of his ability to pay for it. It was all right for a time and for a certain class, but it is absurd that it should be effective in a city. A few merchants about six years ago asked for a repeal of the exemption act, but it was ignored. We lacked the prestige to urge it through.

The Small Debt Court.

"About the same time the merchants of Winnipeg, through a local member of parliament, were to introduce the small debt court idea before the legislature, but the Trades and Labor Council blocked the bill by misrepresenting it before the influential members of the house.

"Our idea of such a court was simply to have the debt case presented before a magistrate in the presence of defendant and plaintiff, and where lawyers would not be allowed to plead. In case the demands of the plaintiff were considered unjust by the magistrate, arrangements could be made to have a certain percentage, say 10 per cent. of the amount settled, and the remainder paid by instalment. In case the defendant failed to comply he would be guilty of contempt of court, for which he could be gaoled.

"It was on this point that the labor council misrepresented the idea, claiming that the principle of the small debt court was to imprison the defendant.

Make Householder Liable.

"Another point which should be speedily remedied is that all orders which the merchant receives for goods by telephone should be charged to the householder. Recently a landlord declined to pay a bill of $98 for groceries which he said were ordered by the maid in the house. The case was brought to the court and the judge eliminated the defendant from the responsibility of settlement. The Retail Merchants' Association should take this matter up.

"The garnishee act as it works out is a source of annoyance. In order to recover the amount due, a garnishee has to be issued several times since it only covers a period up to the time the issue is received by the debtor. In every case the garnishee in its original form should stand until the debt is cleared off."

NEW OFFICERS ELECTED.

Toronto, March 31.—The 14th annual meeting of the Toronto Branch of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, was held in the board room of the association, on Tuesday evening, March 29th.

There was a large and representative attendance of members. R. W. Dockeray presided. The secretary, E. M. Trowern, presented his report for the year, and stated that the branch had now twenty seven active sections in operation. He referred to the various local matters that have received his attention during the year, and thought the time had arrived when he should give his whole time and attention to Provincial and Dominion matters, which were growing more important daily. In order to do that, he advised the members to elect a local secretary, and he tendered his resignation.

The treasurer's and auditor's report were presented, and showed a deficiency, owing to the great expense that legislative matters put the branch to and which seemed unavoidable, as the Toronto branch seemed always to go to the rescue when evils threatened the trade.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, R. W. Dockeray (re-elected); 1st Vice-president, W. Mann, (re-elected); 2nd Vice-president, S. Crealock; Treasurer, F. C. Higgins; Secretary, Geo. E. Gibbard.

THEY DON'T ASK CREDIT.

Chatham, March 31.—Alex Hall, a member of the collection department of the local Retail Merchants' Association, at a recent meeting called attention to a noteworthy fact in connection with the work of the department.

"Since it has been instituted," he remarked, "I have noticed that fewer people have asked for credit than formerly. This particularly applies to that class of people whose credit was likely to prove a poor asset. Even many who were likely to be reasonably good pay, no longer ask credit however, apparently disliking to take the risk of having the collector on their heels in case they should allow their accounts to get ahead of them."

Other merchants have noticed this unexpected but gratifying result of the institution of the department. In fact, it seemed to have emphasized, in the mind of the average customer, the circumstance, often overlooked at the moment of purchasing, that an account contracted was a liability which must some day be met, and that to buy on credit did not render ultimate payment any the easier. As a result, a great many people seem to have reached the conclusion that to pay cash would be less trouble all round. One merchant who never went in largely for credit business reports that during the past year his retail credit has been reduced from $200 per month to about $24 a month and that it is of a much better class.

A LEADER OF MEN.

By Elbert Hubbard.

The man who is worthy of being a leader of men will never complain of the stupidity of his helpers, of the ingratitude of mankind, nor the inappreciation of the public. These things are all a part of the great game of life and to meet them and not go down before them in discouragement and defeat is the final proof of power.

Montreal, March 31, 1910.

Although general market conditions are dull, they show at least an improvement over last year at this time. Collections particularly have been very good.

The molasses situation is the same as reported last week, except that jobbers are beginning to believe importers were not far wrong in thinking prices would stay at their present high level.

Sugar—Considerable improvement is noted this week in the sales of granulated. Prices of raw continue high and firm, with refined prices steady at former quotations.

TORONTO.—Canned vegetables are in fairly good demand with an upward tendency. This is also the case in salmon, which are diminishing at a rate that looks like cleaning them out before the season is over. They are good stock to hold, as are most all canned goods.

ONTARIO MARKETS

Toronto, March 31, 1910.

For some reason the wholesale grocery business is not any too brisk. While wholesalers are somewhat disappointed they, however, expect things will pick up soon. Some claim considerable improvement towards the end of the week and a few say that trade is very good.

Sugar—The condition of the sugar market is in such a state that an advance at any moment would not be a surprise. The changes in raw sugar which are upward, are considered indications of another advance. European beet sugar is firm.

MANITOBA MARKETS

Winnipeg, March 31, 1910.

The wholesale trade is much revived since last week and a wider range of spring and summer goods are moving. The lines that were being delivered heavily during the winter months have diminished considerably, and the trade has become more active in new lines. These chiefly are canned goods, syrup, maple syrup and eggs. Sugar and dried fruits are still greatly in demand, as are also nuts, and this widens the range of goods going into the retailers' hands.

Everywhere in the west the farmers are busy seeding or preparing to do so, and only frequent visits are made to the adjoining store centres, but the orders for goods are consequently larger. The consumption of goods is increasing with the influx of settlers and farm laborers, and the coming summer is going to be a good season for aggressive grocers in Western Canada.

A characteristic of the western merchant is that he means business, and he will defend his rights to the last dollar. As a result the competition which he confronts is going to be met vigorously and legitimately.

Sugar—The price is very firm everywhere, as has been the case for some time. The future is absolutely uncertain since the control is in the hands of a few N. Y. men. Manitoba markets may be advanced, however, independent of other centres, as the price here is said to be comparatively low.

Canned Goods—Wholesalers are sorting up just now and preparing to instal large stocks when navigation opens. The trade is heavy in all lines and will continue so for some time. Peaches are still low, but are expected to go up soon.

Evaporated Apples — The market is still weaker and little is moving. Everything is going at about 7½ cents. As supplies will be cold storage in the future there is chance of an advance.

Eggs—Manitoba stocks are plentiful and jobbing at 27 to 29 cents for the fresh laid. The Easter trade was not up to expectations and prices may be forced down, due to overstocking.

Butter—These prices are maintained, and the trade is good in the creamery product. There is too much of the poor dairy on the market, and prices will likely be lower.

Vancouver, B.C., March 31, 1910.

Apples are rather scrace just now, and some days it is next to impossible to get first-class stock. They are quoted at $2.75 and $3 a box, which is pretty high.

California vegetables are now on the market, such as cauliflower, rhubarb, etc., rhubarb selling at $3.50 for a 45-pound box.

Bacon is back to 29 cents again. Little change is noticeable in other lines this week.

Corrections by wire.—All standard brands of condensed cream have advanced 40 cents per case; best grade of eastern butter is up 2 cents to 32—next grade advanced to 30; potatoes are cheaper and stocks are being cleared; canned early June peas are up 20 cents per case; one brand of ham has advanced to 22 cents, making an increase of about 3 cents, and bacon has gone up from 21 to 24 cents.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, March 31, 1910.

The price of eggs fluctuated widely last week, and early it looked as if the consumer would have to pay high prices for Easter eggs. During the close of the week, however, good fresh-laid stock could be bought for 22 cents per dozen. The demand was good, and the stocks on hand were soon bought up. When the week opened it looked as if there would be a scarcity and the wholesalers jumped the price to 24 cents. The receipts, however, increased, and the price came down again, 22 cents being quoted. Large quantities have been shipped to Montreal this season, and the receipts from Prince Edward Island have not been as heavy as usual.

Jobbers report a good demand for canned goods of all kinds, and the Easter trade was good in all lines. Collections are good for the season of the year.

Butter Sales Brisk at Somewhat Higher Prices

Receipts Not Large Enough to Supply the Demand — No Change in High Hog Market—Eggs Yet Too Expensive for Packing Purposes—Warm Weather Tends to Shorten Maple Syrup Season.

The provision situation throughout the world is active and prices are high. Even at the high price of hogs, England at present could take our hog products and give us a profit. The scarcity of hogs prevails the world over, and prices must rule high for some time.

The English butter market is strong. Prices have advanced, and sales are easily effected. The bulk of our butter is pretty well cleaned out, and the market is in good condition to meet the new season's make when it opens up.

Cheese also has taken a more favorable turn, and will let the dealers out better than they feared some time ago. They, however, are not satisfied with last year's business. They claim that merely to get out without a loss, is not sufficent inducement to keep on grinding. Very likely cheese will have to start this season at a lower figure, before the dealer will take hold of it.

MONTREAL.

Provisions—Live and dressed hogs are both still on the upward grade, being 50c higher than last week, in spite of the fact that this week has been comparatively dull. Dealers expected a certain amount of slackening, however, and it is sure to be only a temporary lull. Other lines of provisions are steady at former prices.

Butter—Butter is exceptionally high just at present, higher than last year at this time, by some cents. New milk creamery is now on the market, quoted at from 32 to 33 cents. Fresh dairy rolls are slightly higher. Local stocks are low and receipts, though fair, cannot make up the deficit.

Eggs—The usual drop in the price of eggs immediately after Easter did not take place this year. Twenty cents is the lowest that any have been sold so far ,and while this may be too high to store them for next winter, there is, however, not much chance for them to get much cheaper. There is evidently something wrong somewhere, when a country like Canada cannot produce enough eggs for its own use. This year eggs have been imported from Europe, and nearly two million dollars' worth were allowed to spoil through careless handling. Instead of blaming merchants for marking too much profit in handling the goods, it might be better to learn how to produce more and how to save the immense waste. Merchants should insist on farmers bringing their eggs out at least once a week, and then they should be shipped without any delay by the store keeper.

CEYLON'S TEA CROP.

The report of the committee of the Planters' Association of Ceylon, recently issued, gives interesting statements of crops for 1909 and estimates for 1910.

The tea production, it states, was more than 190,000,000 pounds, about 12,000,000 more than the last previous year's and about 3,000,000 pounds less than is expected this year. Three thousand acres were opened and planted with tea in 1909. Tea sold in 1909 for two cents a pound more than in 1908.

Gives Discount of 2½ p.c. on all Cash Purchases

Plan a Montreal Grocer Has to Encourage Cash Payments—Uses Cash Register and Announces His Method on the Check or Receipt Which Goes With the Goods—How Circular Reads Which he Sends Out.

Montreal, March 30. — As a means of inducing cash buying, J. D. Martineau, a local grocer, has a plan of allowing a cash discount of 2½ per cent. to be given when the customer has purchased $10, $20 or $30 worth of goods.

Mr. Martineau came to the conclusion that the cash buyer was of more benefit to him than those who purchased on time and for that reason he concluded that they should be given a preference.

With every cash purchase the customer received a check showing the amount paid and also announcing the fact that the check was worth 2½ per cent. of its face value redeemable in merchandise at any time.

In a circular which Mr. Martineau has sent out to customers and prospective customers, he deals with the advantages, so far as he has studied the question, in cash-purchasing and announces his intention to allow the 2½ per cent. discount.

The circular is headed "Martineau's Cash Grocery," is printed in two colors, red and black, and reads as follows:

The Right Way—The Modern Way—The Martineau's Way

READ HOW AND WHY

Our experience in this business has convinced us that merchants have been overlooking the rights and interests of the CASH BUYERS who are so largely responsible for making their business what it is to-day—a success.

Time and again we have been impressed with the fact that a large percentage of the groceries sold over the counter is for cash, and just as often we have thought we should make some special concession to these CASH BUYERS for making this store their buying centre. It is THEIR cash that enables us to pay cash for our goods and secure the usual CASH discounts allowed by all wholesalers and manufacturers.

We have at last devised a plan whereby we can show our appreciation in a practical and substantial way for the assistance these cash buyers will give this store; in other words treat them rigbtly and fairly by allowing them a discount for their cash.

We have placed in the store a mecbanical cashier, constructed to our express order by————————This cashier will give you a plainly printed receipt for each purchase you make for cash, showing the correct amount of your purcbase. Keep these receipts until they amount to $10, $20, or $30, then bring them to the store and give them to the first clerk you meet and he is instructed to give you 2½ p.c. of their face value in merchandise.

Cut out and save tbis 50-cent receipt. It is a start toward the $10.

This is what is meant by The Martineau's Way; it is

and you will be surprised to find what an EASY WAY it is to save money, and how much the saving will amount to in the course of a year.

Very truly yours.
J. D. MARTINEAU.

A merchant is never so near success as when he is right.

Keep your future unmortgaged by debt. Save money as well as earn it.

By this means the Martineau store is able to present to the buying public an argument which will appeal to many and which will not offend anyone. Good results have followed the establishment of this method.

STABS AT PUBLICITY.

By Charlotte Mangold in Signs of the Times.

Advertising at random, or "making a stab" at publicity, is an infallible way to increase the costs of any business. Public attention is the subject of many indefinite stabs, but its coat of armor cannot be penetrated by vague and ill-directed thrusts.

The movement of commodities at times is similar to the circulation of money. Sometimes the latter is in constant and voluminous flow, at other times held in check here and there for commercial reasons. A manufacturer whose customers were brewers, in reply to an inquiry on advertising stated that he had the name of every man who had anything to do with buying supplies for breweries, but that the brewers had absolutely stopped buying during a certain period. Asked if he continued to advertise, he said ' "We never stop our advertising even when we know without doubt that our prospective customers have stopped their buying. They will be forced to buy again some time and somebody will have to sell them again and it may as well be us, as "Florodora" would say. We can not afford to let them forget that we have the goods to sell, and the depletion of their stock will take care of reminding them, sooner or later, that they must go to market. If we ceased to advertise just because we knew they were not buying at any particular time, our competitor would have an advantage that we could not overcome without some extraordinary expense, if we could at all."

This point covers quite well the point of continued space in the trade journal. When the purchasing agent, or the person who authorizes him to procure further supplies, is ready to solicit quotations and details, he orders an office attendant to bring him the trade journal. Having seen the advertisement of Jones and Jones in the last issue inspected, he naturally concludes it is in the current issue. He is not going to look through a stack of back numbers at first. One of the most prevailing ideas in the mind of the business man is that an advertisement that he once saw in a copy of a publication will be in any copy that he picks up, particularly the latest edition. Now, if Jones and Jones, for some reason that may have seemed economical, have discontinued the use of the space or are advertising alternately in every other issue, their advertisement may just happen to be out of the copy of the trade journal in consultation. The result is apt to prove disastrous.

Systematic, painstaking and continuous advertising is nothing short of a business asset. There should be the assertion of originality in the plan and purpose and such that will make it replete with refreshing assurance, so that it may at once elicit the interest and invite the confidence of the people who are in the market or will be in the market for the goods referred to. In other words, the advertiser must inject his own confidence in the goodness of the goods advertised and do it in his own way, which is sure to be like that of no other and will therefore have a better liklihood of commanding attention and trade.

TO DICUSS UNION PICNIC.

London, Ont., March 31.—The annual meeting of the London Retail Grocers' Association will be held on Tuesday evening, April 12th, when the election of officers and other important business will come up. The union picnic, Wednesday half holidays for the summer months, the organization of a baseball team to enter the Merchants' League and other matters will be discussed.

It is impossible to say who will be the next president of the association. There are several good men available, if they can be persuaded to stand.

Vice-president N. McLeod has given up business in the east end, and will devote all his time to his market store.

REGARDING COLD STORAGE.

A Montrealer's Opinion on Its Relation With High Cost of Living.

Editor Canadian Grocer,—Recent publicity given by Montreal dailies to small confiscations of cold storage goods gave many readers the idea that, first, cold storage stock was usually unfit for consumption, and secondly, that, in a great measure, it was the cold storage men who were responsible for the present high prices of farm and dairy produce.

As to the first conclusion, the figures themselves show plainly how much is due to the imagination. One set of figures show that out of 265,000 lbs. of poultry examined, the confiscations amounted to but 150 lbs., or only a fraction of one per cent. Other lines were in similar proportion.

An example of what perfect cold storage can do was shown when, a few years ago, some mammoths were found in the ice in Siberia. Although they had been there for thousands of years, they were in such a perfect state of preservation that the dogs ate their flesh with avidity. Even the food in their stomachs was preserved in its half digested state.

As to the second conclusion drawn, that present high prices are due to cold storage, there is a measure of truth in it. Such large quantities of butter, eggs, cheese, etc., are bought and held in cold storage, that the farmer finds he can raise his prices and accordingly does so. The jobber insists upon his profit and, as a result, the consumer must pay higher prices than were asked during the producing season.

The other side of this is readily seen when we remember that, not so many years ago there were times when little or none of the food stuffs now on sale the year round were to be had. To obtain them at all was beyond any ordinary income. If a general average of present prices for farm and dairy products were to be taken, it would be found that they are not so much above the old-time prices.

Also it must be taken into account that economic conditions are entirely changed in present day life. Take lines which have absolutely nothing to do with cold storage—pork and wool for instance. They are higher, and others more so in proportion than those with which this letter deals. Money is in free and constant circulation. Wages and salaries are higher, so naturally the tide of spending increases. Supplies of dairy and farm produce used to exceed demand. Now there is often a shortage but seldom any surplus. Remember that in former years the production only had to meet demand during a season. Now, while the season is changed to the entire year, all the products mentioned must be produced in practically the same time as before.

It is all right to correct an evil when it comes, but let us be sure first that it is an unmitigated evil. There is no sense in making a mountain out of a molehill, and we must not forget that cold storage is here to stay. With careful supervision it is something that brings us comforts, even actual necessities, which otherwise we would have to go without.

SOAP CONCERNS AMALGAMATED.

St. John, N.B., March 30.—An important merger of three soap-making companies in St. John is being arranged, and soon it is anticipated that application will be made for incorporation of a company with $150,000 capital to carry on the business now done by all three. The companies to amalgamate are the Asepto Soap Co., Colls' Soap Ltd., and the Welcome Soap Co., Ltd. The new concern will be known as Asepto Soaps, Ltd., and the business will be carried on in the Welcome Soap Co.'s premises in Union Street. Under the new conditions, all the brands made by the three companies will be continued.

A despatch from Perth, Ont., states that maple syrup makers in that section are meeting a new situation this season. Last November's ice storm damaged trees almost without exception. The place where the limbs were broken has become the outlet for sap. Farmers figure that this continual drop, drop from these places cannot help but cut down the usual amount in their sap cans.

High Wheat Prices Keep Up the Flour Market

Cause Seems to be Due to Manipulation Rather Than to Supply and Demand—No Changes in Flour Markets in Three Months — Demand for Cereals Lighter.

The wheat situation is certainly a puzzler, and it must be manipulated entirely independent from supply and demand. It is quite true that the new crop of last year began with a low stock of old wheat on hand, but with an unprecedented world's crop the natural conclusion at which one should arrive was that wheat and flour would be cheaper. This was the general opinion, and flour dealers were slow in making purchases. When the market however did not give way, a feeling of more confidence was created and trade became active, but it always lacked that spirit of certainty which is based on supply and demand.

At present the flour market in England is dull, and in order to effect sales, lower prices have to be accepted.

Millers declare that there is no margin of profit in shipping flour to England, and it will remain to be seen whether the wheat will get cheaper here, or the flour dearer in Europe. Judging from the condition of the flour market in England and also from the fact that the farmers are still holding larger quantities than were estimated, the chances are that prices will be lower.

Flour—The local flour market has been without the slightest change for about three months, and although the tendency is downward, there is nothing in view that will change it from the old mark. The market has been dragging for some time. Wheat is claimed to be too high for the price of flour, and yet keen competition will not allow an advance.

TROUBLE OVER FLOUR PRICES.

Millers Fix Their B.C. Prices to Consumer and These are Alleged to Have Been Cut.

Vancouver, B.C., March 30. — The executive of the Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association and the flour mill men are conferring these days over the cuting of prices. Some of the $1.90 brands are being offered at $1.75 as an attraction at one grocery, and having no organization among themselves the mills are doing what they can to stop the display of these goods at cost price. Representatives of the four brands on the market conferred with the executive on two or three occasions but they find the matter a difficult one to handle unless some drastic action is taken.

At that time one brand was not cut, but it was the day after, and the representative of the firm that produces that flour immediately took steps to see if prosecution would be effective, since that flour was sold with a fixed retail price.

At the time a retail grocery firm of Victoria, violated the agreement with a milk condensing company, successful action was entered against that retail firm, but the manufacturers did not press for damages, which it was allowed they were entitled to. Encouraged by this, it may be that similar action may be taken in this instance through the courts.

A milling company of Lethbridge, Alta., who wants to place his goods here, is also looking into the matter. The trouble is that if the price goes to cost, it is believed the grocers will push the second grades in which there is some profit, and in a short time this will have a good part of the trade. A selling price of $1.90 allows only 15 cents on a sack, which is considered a very small percentage of profit, and there had been no objection raised.

The matter is still under consideration.

MAYBE, Brother Grocer, you'll remember the little booklet we told you about some time ago.

About Jones and Mrs. Brown on a rainy day, you know.

Of course, you remember "GET FLOURWISE"—the name on the cover.

Or, maybe, you didn't read your "GROCER" that week and missed the gladsome tidings.

Well, it was a kind of four-color affair on the outside with three inside.

Filled with dinkey little illustrations like a Christmas Pudding is full of plums.

Explaining just what Jones is piping about.

About good flour, FIVE ROSES and things, you know.

Sure we thought it was pretty good ourselves, which was only "nacheral" under the circumstances.

But far be it from us to toot our own trumpet, Brother Grocer.

So we waited with our ear to the ground to see how the trade would "cotton" to the idea.

The way that little booklet circulated would make hot cakes on a hungry day look like an "also ran."

Why, no sensible woman with cooking aspirations can read that little confab between Jones and Mrs. B. without conceiving a taste for FIVE ROSES goodies.

We defy YOUR wife to break the charm.

Says a prominent advertising expert from Toronto Town, whom we do not know personally, and who spent all of a two-cent stamp and half an hour's time to say it:

> "My wife came home from the grocer's to-day with a copy of "GET FLOURWISE," "and, knowing you to be the guilty party, I take this earliest opportunity of taking off "my hat to one of the cleverest things in the booklet line it has been my good fortune "to come across."
> "I have read it all through, and my oldest boy has started on it, so that if we "don't soon become a "FIVE ROSES" family it will not be for want of advertising. "If it makes the bread plate circulate, the booklet ought certainly to make the flour "do likewise."

Nice man, that!

Now, Brother Grocer, the printers are working on the fourth edition of TWENTY THOUSAND.

So that if YOU missed the first opportunity to get a supply of "silent salesmen," don't miss THIS.

A postal does it.

MAKERS OF FIVE ROSES

THE RETAILER'S PROFIT.

Merchant Suggests Closer Understanding and Co-operation Among Manufacturers, Jobbers and Retailers.

Editor Canadian Grocer.—Can the honest retailer continue in the grocery business and pay one hundred cents on the dollar with trade conditions as they are to-day? That's the question which I think every independent retailer should figure out. Do it carefully, and note whether he who has been in business for a number of years and has hoarded up a little of his hard earned profits, would not be better off to sell his business before the money which he made under better conditions, has been filched away from him by the standards of to-day. Slowly but surely the net is closing in around him. Uncontrollable expenditure is such that his expense account is easily from five to ten per cent more than ten years ago. Telephones, rapid delivery, higher wages to poorer help, increased rents and taxes, and smaller profits all tend to make the man with the live business dread stock-taking time.

The practical wiping out of discounts, the raising of prices to such a point that the profit does not pay expenses, the competition of those wholesalers who sell to the consumer, and the utter indifference of some manufacturers to the retail end of distribution of their goods, have all tended to make it hard for the retailer to eke out a living.

A grocer tells me that a soap company's traveler came into his store with the glad hand and said: "We have reduced the price of our renowned soap from $4 to $3.85 a box, and now if you want to, you can sell six bars for 25c." There are 100 bars to the box. What a nice profit that soap company figures out for the retailer! Another large company puts out a special line of canned goods, advertised at 5c a tin, which are bought from the jobber at 50c a dozen—positively no discount for cash. These goods are all heavily advertised and the manufacturers practically tell the retailer, what our late friend Mr. Vanderbilt remarked in regard to the public—that if the terms didn't suit, he could go to some place unmentionable here. Such manufacturers, however, may be fooled themselves in the long run.

But why doesn't the retail grocer take hold of this question and figure a way out? As long as things go on as they are, individual kicking will be of no avail. Really I do not think the manufacturers and the jobbers are such terrible fellows. They are just pushing the thing along to a point where the wisest course to pursue would be to have a triangular meeting and let the retailer explain where his troubles are the most pressing. If the retail grocers could get together and make some showing of their actual strength, something to show the manufacturer that at least a portion of the profit should go to them, there might be some very strong arguments put up. That would lead the manfacturer to believe that the co-operation of the dealer would have a much greater selling power than the expensive consumer advertising he often indulges in.

Why not have a convention of manufacturers, or their selling agents, wholesalers and retail men, at some central point and thrash the matter out. I am confident that good would come of it, even if no better arrangements were made in the immediate future. The gathering of retailers would be an inspiration to the trade, and no doubt would lead either to a national association or to some mode of arbitration regarding grievances, by which a committee elected from the three sections could meet at regular intervals and discuss and adjust matters to the general satisfaction of all.

It seems foolish for the matter to be continued under present conditions. The success of the retailer should be the first consideration of both manufacturer and wholesaler. I should like to see at least from fifty to a hundred letters in your next issue from prominent retailers all over the country, giving us their opinions. You have very kindly asked wour readers for opinions on matters affecting this line of business, why not every man who reads the above, write at once to you with a candid expression on the subject—Is it not worth while?

Fish—Fish trade is now to some extent giving way to the meat and egg trade. Demand will be comparatively slow for some time to come. Arrivals of fresh fish are numerous. At least one car of fresh halibut will arrive for a local wholesaler the first of the season. Green Fruits—The apple situation is still a burden on the hands of the fruit men. The demand is altogether too light, compared with other fruit. This has been brought about through the poor quality of the apples put on our markets, the best stock having been exported. The Canadian people want the best and will not be satisfied with the culls, after the good ones have been picked out for export.

Oranges are in good demand, and the quality is improving. Frosted stock is all off the market. Strawberries are still arriving in ice boxes, and as long as this is necessary, they will have to be sold at high prices.

Vegetables—From week to week the varieties and quantities of vegetables are increasing. This week a nice variety of tempting squash has made its appearance. Tomatoes are getting more plentiful and are of better quality. Celery is in abundance, and is selling well, but potatoes are a drug on the market. One of the dealers on being asked about the price he was selling potatoes at, said that from 50c a bag up was realized, "or any old thing we can get." Potatoes are as plentiful in the vegetable line as apples are in the fruit line, but much safer to handle.

Fish—The fish market, following Lent, is as usual, quiet, and is likely to remain so for a few weeks. Little fish will be used now till the fresh caught stock comes in. Several small consignments of fresh-caught sunfish, perch, carp and suckers arrived this week from Port Rowan. While the demand is slack, the prices, however, remain unchanged. This being between seasons, it means the cleaning up of the frozen stock and arranging for the summer's business.

DUTIES ON IMPORTED VEGETABLES.

That the consumption of canned vegetables is being retarded by the importation of fresh vegetables from the south is the contention of some of our packers. It is a well known fact that fresh vegetables are now being extensively used in the winter months more so than in years gone by. That is of common knowledge among the trade, but are they reducing the consumption of the canned products? This is the problem which is under consideration by canners.

Fresh vegetables of course will never take the place of the canned product in lumber, mining and construction camps, but in the cities where they can be easily obtained they are being used extensively.

The tariff on imported vegetables from the U. S. such as cabbage, tomatoes, celery, rhubarb, beets, string beans, and egg plant is 30 per cent. and on sweet potatoes, 10 cents per bushel. On strawberries, which are now being used largely, the duty is 2 cents per lb. and on cranberries it is 25 p.c. When these goods come from British Colonies the duty is a third less in each case.

Bananas, Tomatoes and Pineapples

THE season for these lines is at hand and every dealer should now begin to handle them. We represent the largest and best shippers. Our supply is steady and of best quality. Our big turnover enables us to ship fresh goods at all times, and that is a big factor.

Our prices are low, consistent with the quality of the goods we ship.

Merchants Unite in Business Men's Associations

Fredericton Retailers Unite to Discuss and Remedy Grievances — Collection of Bad Debts a Prominent Question in New Brunswick.

Fredericton, N.B., March 30.—The merchants of Fredericton are in favor of a Business Men's Association. This was shown by addresses given at a meeting held last week to discuss this question.

M. Tennant occupied the chair and read a communication from Mr. Crocket, M.P., in answer to a request of the merchants that he oppose the Harris Co-operative bill before parliament in Ottawa. Mr. Crocket stated that the Harris bill has been withdrawn in committee and a similar bill known as the Monk bill would probably not become law.

Mr. Jennings stated the object of the meeting and told of the ideas regarding the formation of a Business Men's Association, which had been brought out at the previous meeting. He outlined the advantages of such an association. He referred to the benefits of an association in dealing with the transportation question and other protective methods. He also asked for suggestions regarding merchants' week.

Collection of Bad Debts.

Mr. Neill gave an account of the way bad debts were collected in New York and the Upper Provinces. Information relating to the collection of bad debts in Chatham and Guelph in Ontario was given.

The plan adopted was that a "dead beat" list was adopted and merchants were warned not to trust such people. Then a regular collector was appointed to get after the collection of debts. Other matters such as the regulation of market conditions were considered.

Mr. Neill suggested the formation of a Business Men's Association and on motion it was agreed upon.

Mr. Jennings read the duties of the "bad debt" collector as the plan has been adopted in other places.

The collection plan is run separately from the other benefits of the association and if a merchant wishes to take this benefit he pays an extra fee of $10.

Mr. Lemont referred to the outside collection firms who have handled bad debts for Fredericton merchants and expressed the opinion that they had not all been satisfactory. He thought a local collection system would produce better results. He thought a Business Men's Association would be a great advantage to merchants and that an annual dinner of the merchants would be a good thing to band the business men together.

Ald. Walker was in favor of the scheme and was pleased that all classes of merchants were to be admitted to membership. He thought a committee should be appointed to get this information. The merchants could unite together and derive good results both socially and in a business way.

Mayor Thomas was also a supporter of the new idea and Mr. Jennings urged that the business men attend the meetings and take an interest in the matter once it was formed.

FORECAST OF FISH SUPPLY.

Peculiar Situation in Newfoundland Where Exporters are Holding up the Market.

Halifax, N.S., March 31.—The export trade on dry fish is not exceptionally brisk. The situation is peculiar, particularly in St. John's, Nfld., where buyers for the Northern Brazils are trying to break the market, and exporters are asking higher figures every time they quote, with every probability of the latter winning out, for the simple reason that there are not nearly enough fish to last until new cure is obtainable in any quantity.

The world's consuming markets are absorbing at this time the average quantity of fishstuffs, consumption last week in Oporto alone being 4,500 qtls. of British fish and 4,000 vogs Norwegian. Stocks there have been reduced to 23,000 qtls., against 42,000 qtls. this time last year. Only one cargo said to be on the way from Newfoundland. The Spanish markets are pretty well cleaned up of soft cure Labrador. Italy and Porto Rico are the two markets that seem to have an over supply at the moment. In Southern Brazils, particularly Rio and Stantos, the stock is the smallest for years at this season, and Norway case fish evidently is exhausted in the supplying markets, as a portion of Newfoundland cure is now taking the place of this article, where otherwise there would not be a sale or demand for it.

The most of the nearby West India Islands are in pretty good shape, and judging by the fact that it took ten different shippers to fill a small one thousand-barrel bulk vessel for Barbados in St. John's last week, it is evident that low grade fish is about cleaned up there.

The Norwegian catch has opened in pretty good shape, last reports showing about 13,000,000 landed to date, against 12,000,000 last year.

There is nothing particularly new in pickled fish. Herrings caught last fall sold ex vessel this week at $2, and quite a few are reported yet on the shore. If the Bay St. George fishery is a large one this year, low prices will rule. The market is almost bare of salmon and mackerel; alewives are in fair supply.

The store that is run with one set of rules for the employes and another and different set for the employer is not likely to run far without collision.

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

Supplied to the Trade by Sellers.

The original Beauce Brand Maple Syrup, new season's pack, is arriving and all orders will be filled promptly, only by the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Ltd.

Laporte, Martin & Co., Montreal, announce bargain figures on 500 cases of sardines, Roman brand, and 50 cases of European asparagus. Their travelers are now on the road taking orders for canned vegetables, soups and fruits, Soleil brand, crop of 1910.

The pop-corn factory of Clyde Fuller & Bro., Windsor, Ont., manufacturers of Kandy Kid, was completely destroyed by fire. They have already made arrangements to establish a larger and better plant than before, and they expect to be in a position to fill orders in about 30 days. The trade will do well to place future orders with this firm now, as they were sold up to their capacity for about 6 weeks when their plant was destroyed. This will no doubt prove one of the best summer lines which has ever been place on the market.

George Mason & Co., Ltd., London, Engalnd, manufacturers of "O.K." Sauce, write apropos of the Canadian Pure Food Laws and point out that theirs is the only sauce that carries with it a purity guarantee of 1,000 guineas and that this challenge still stands uncontested after a period of 25 years. The exact guarantee, as printed on every label, is as follows:—"We guarantee every ingredient of the "O. K." Sauce to be absolutely pure, and of the finest quality only, and the above sum (1,000 guineas) will be paid to anyone who can prove to the contrary, whether by analysis or otherwise."

Another instance of the manner in which trade in some particular line of goods can be greatly stimulated by a simple suggestion amongst customers, comes to our notice. Amongst the biscuit specialities manufactured by George Kemp, Ltd., of London, England, is a round, light, flaky biscuit caller "Butter Puff," and a grocer who recommended their use in the form of a jam sandwich found his sales increase most satisfactorily. He showed his customers that by splitting these "Puffs," placing an even spread of jam between the two halves and afterwards putting in a hot oven for five minutes or more, most delicious pastry sandwiches were made. In this way, a most tasty sweet can be produced and it will be found a welcome addition to the luncheon or tea table, as wholesome as it is delicate.

James Dobbin, who for the past twenty-six years has conducted a grocery business on Dundas street east, London, Ont., is dead. He was 87 years of age.

SUNKIST ORANGES

To the Trade:

The co-operative growing and marketing of California oranges and lemons has made it possible for the jobber and retailer to continue selling Citrus fruit. The consumer also has been greatly benefited by these methods of disposing of the orchard products of California.

A few years ago many speculators whipsawed the grower—creating an unstable market, keeping the fruit situation panicky, making it impossible to tell just what the market conditions were and just what the prospects might be.

Rapid fluctuations in the market frequently caused by speculative methods, that were subject to question, kept the jobber and retailer guessing all the time as to what a day would bring forth.

Fruit growers were at the mercy of unfair trade conditions and the legitimate business man suffered because of them.

The California Fruit Growers' Exchange is composed of 5,000 fruit farmers. Anyone growing oranges and lemons can become a member and have a vote in the management of the Exchange. These fruit farmers appoint their own salesmen to sell the product of their orchards.

No profits whatever beyond salary are derived by officers or workers of the Exchange. Every benefit, after actual selling expenses are taken out, goes to the grower of the fruit.

The big advantage of the Exchange is their greater facilities in buying material, such as boxes, etc.—their large shipments, which enable them to secure better transportation facilities, and their splendid organization for the growing, picking and packing of their fruit.

All this means that the consumer of oranges and lemons can now get better fruit at less cost than ever before.

The object of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange is entirely to improve fruit culture in California, and, by handling the product of their orchards in a scientific manner give the consumer all the benefits of highly cultivated fruit at the lowest possible cost. This can be done only by helping the grower,. helping the jobber and helping the retail trade.

The present advertising campaign, being conducted by the 5,000 fruit farmers, comprising the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, is intended to acquaint the public with the nourishing, health-giving qualities of California Oranges and Lemons. The members of the Exchange believe public appreciation will stimulate the growers to greater activity in the production of more and better fruit.

Platform of N.S. Retail Merchants' Association

Organization in the East Broadening its Membership to Make Work Effective—To Encourage Harmony Among Merchants and to Correct Evils in Credit System—Wholesalers Selling to Consumer Direct.

Halifax, N.S., March 30.—The Retail Merchants' Association of Nova Scotia is now well organized, and is working to obtain as large a membership as possible to assist in attaining its objects and aims. It was organized last September.

Its objects in general are:—

The encouragement of harmony and joint action between retail merchants and the improvement of business methods in general.

To correct evils attending the credit system.

To abolish trade abuses and injurious and unbusiness-like practices.

To disseminate trade information, encourage improvement in business methods, and generally to advance the interests of retail merchants.

Among the by-laws as laid down in the constitution are: The regular meetings of the association shall be held in Halifax on the third Tuesday in January in each year and special meetings at the call of the president.

Membership can be secured on application to the secretary, and on the approval of the executive committee.

The dues shall be $2 per annum, payable in advance at the beginning of each fiscal year, or on application for membership.

All membership privileges shall be suspended after twelve months delinquency, but may be restored on payment of arrears.

The officers shall be, president, vice-president, secretary-treasurer, who shall be elected at the regular annual meeting and shall hold office for the term of one year and until their successors are elected and qualified.

The executive committee shall consist of the president, vice-president and secretary-treasurer, and one member from each county. Five members of the executive shall constitute a quorum.

The president shall be the presiding and executive officer of the association. He shall take the chair at all meetings both of the association and executive committee. In his absence or inability the vice-president shall preside.

The secretary-treasurer shall keep a record of all the proceedings of the association and of the executive committee, attend to all correspondence and such other duties as the association or the executive may direct. He shall have charge of all the funds and deposit the same in a bank in the name of the association, and pay all bills upon vouchers signed by the president, and render a full report at each meeting of the association of duties performed, moneys received and paid out by him, and keep a full and accurate account of all transactions of his office.

The constitution and by-laws of this association may be amended at annual meeting, provided such amendment or provision be proposed in writing and submitted to the executive committee for consideration and report to the meeting with such recommendations as they may deem proper.

Platform of the Association.

Among the specific questions to be given attention are the weights and measures of goods, as merchants in this province are led to believe that great injustice is done both to retailers and consumers in this respect. All members are requested to report to the secretary any cases of shortage with the names of the parties responsible therefor.

The telephone rates, which are claimed to be exorbitant in some districts, will be considered as well as the matter of the parcel post business, as it affects retail trade.

The association will ask the Government to hold the manufacturer responsible for the adulteration of goods instead of the retailer.

Still another object is to prevent the retailing of goods by wholesale houses—al such cases to be reported to the secretary.

The secretary of the association is Isaac MacDonald, Box 439, Halifax.

Why One Merchant Eliminated Delivering Goods

Customers Imposed on Him Too Much and He Couldn't Stand It—Claimed That They Made His Business Unprofitable—How His Customers Got Their Goods Home.

There are few merchants in these days of competition who do not deliver goods and the experience of one who does not, should be of interest to readers.

The multitude of difficulties that would naturally arise were a grocer to eliminate deliveries causes him to consider carefully before he leaps.

A grocer who has broken over the traces and who still claims to be doing a good business was asked the question recently. What he would do if a customer wanted a hundred pounds of flour, a bushel of potatoes or five gallons of coal-oil.

"As we do not deliver any groceries," he replied, "we do not have to bother about that part of it; we let the customer get the goods home in any way he sees fit. But I will tell you how scores of them do get the goods home.

"Many people have rigs of some kind, either buggies or automobiles, and those who have none ask those who have to call at the store and bring the goods out to them. Some families have boys come with a push cart or a wheel barrow and some put the stuff on their shoulders and carry it home themselves. Ladies often use their baby carriages to take home the heavier articles.

Never Saw So Many Rigs.

"I did not know that so many people had rigs until I quit delivering goods; nor how many ways there are to get things home in order to get them a little cheaper. When I quit delivering I thought my flour business would fall off, but instead of that it has increased. But of course I am selling it cheaper than my neighbor. We have a large country trade and the cheaper price just suits them. Their goods are never delivered anyway and when they buy from me they say they are not paying for delivery here in the city which they do when they buy from one who delivers.

"When we used to deliver, a lady drove by and said, 'send me out 25 cents worth of bacon.' She was driving directly home. We drove along behind her all the way to her home when she could have saved us the trip just as well as not. Delivering would not be so bad if the people did not impose upon the merchant so.

"That was one reason why I quit delivering groceries. We were running a wagon and could not refuse her, but it made me boil a little. I resolved then that same day I would quit delivering goods.

Sells For Cash.

"Four years ago I decided to try it and put an advertisement in the paper to the effect that I was going to give my horses a vacation for a month and that my customers should buy enough to last them awhile. Most of them considered it a joke as they had never heard of a horse getting a vacation. When the end of the month came I had my horses all sold and the money spent. I have never delivered goods since.

"We have eight or ten grocers here, but I am the only one who does not deliver. I sell for cash and as I do not employ any help I can sell cheaper than my competitors."

E. W. La Chance, representing Wm. H. Dunn, Montreal, was in Toronto on Monday.

The grocery and general store that has been carried on by T. W. Robinson, at Juniper Island, Stony Lake, Ont., for many years, will this season be run by H. Stock, of Peterboro.

One Aim In Life

The Packers of the "Thistle" Brand of Fish aim only to produce the best there is in Canned Fish.

Canned Where Caught

The "Thistle" Brand of Canned Haddies, Kippered Herring, and Herring and Tomato Sauce, are canned right where they are caught, at the water side. How better could you preserve the natural richness and delicate flavor of the fish? IMPOSSIBLE.

But that is not all, because Captain Austin has the unequalled skill of a life-time of experience. THERE IS NO DIRT OR SLIME—NO UNCLEANLINESS TO BE FOUND IN THE "THISTLE" BRAND. The reputation of the foremost fish-curer in the country is at stake under the label of the "Thistle" Brand.

Ask your bookkeeper
how many cases of

Campbell's SOUPS

you sell

There are four reasons why you should sell lots of CAMPBELL'S SOUPS—

Because they pay you 33⅓% profit and you can reap that profit often.—
Because they please your customers and bring them back again and again.—
Because they are selling just that way for every grocer who handles them, and Because our heavy advertising makes it easy.

"Enterprise" Economy

An Enterprising grocer, who does things right, uses an "Enterprise" Electrically-Driven Coffee Mill.

The right way is also the cheapest way in the end. It always pays. Take the experience of the Philadelphia grocer who grinds 15,000 pounds of coffee a month with an "Enterprise" Mill electrically-driven at a cost for current of $3.00.

He bought the Mill as a great convenience—a time and labor saver, and an up-to-date attraction for his store. Its economy astonished him.

Look through our catalogue and you will find Mills of any capacity, any power required, for direct or alternating current. Your local power supply company will co-operate with advice and assistance.

The Mill illustrated here is No. 08712, fitted with ½ horse power motor for alternating current. Capacity of each iron hopper, 6 pounds of coffee. One Mill is fitted with grinders for granulating, the other for pulverizing. Granulates 2 pounds of coffee per minute, and can be regulated for fine or coarse grinding while mill is running. If you haven't the catalogue showing all our Mills, write for a copy to-day.

The Trade's Opinions on Recent Tariff Agreement

What Canadian Wholesale Grocers and Importers Think of the New Regulations—How These Will Affect Importations of Dried Fruits and Nuts According to the Ideas of Men in the Trade.

The tariff changes mentioned in last week's issue came into effect on March 31. The grocery trade is probably more interested than any other in view of the number of reductions in the tariff on articles connected with it. Following are opinions given by wholesale grocers in different sections of Canada on the changes:—

What Winnipeg Trade Say.

H. B. GORDON, Codville wholesale grocery, Winnipeg—"The chief reductions are in dried fruits and nuts, and personally I am glad that the consumer in this country can be offered a lower price. It would seem that the tariff on some Canadian goods should have been reduced in retaliation, but the lines that come into this country do not conflict with our goods. The refusal to enter a tariff war at any cost is to be commended, and I have no fear that trade is going to suffer. It is only reasonable and just to ourselves and the United States, that the latter country should be put on equal footing with France. Our exports will certainly be increased, and one of the chief items no doubt will be pulp-wood.

ALEXANDER TRUESDALE, Watson & Truesdale, wholesale importers, Winnipeg, thought that the two Governments acted in great wisdom in reducing rates on such lines as cannot possibly injure Canada.

"The attempt has been to equalize as much as possible and although there is no report stated as to changes in our export list, yet a benefit to both countries will be assured. It is a good thing that when the law was not elastic enough that they found another way out, and a war was averted, which would bring disastrous results. In Western Canada where we depend so much upon American goods, a curtailment of trade would be serious, and the poorer classes will greatly benefit from the new list."

FRANK W. WILEY, was pleased that many reductions have been made in United States importations.

"It is a step in the right direction," he said.

JOHN PERSSE, Tees, Persse Co., Winnipeg—"There has not been enough positive information published to enable us to know exactly how we shall be affected, there is no doubt that many radical changes will be made in rates on both sides, but we have received no information from any of our principals on the other side as to the future prospects of the trade. At any rate from general appearances the interchange of trade will be greatly increased, much to the benefit of both countries. The aversion of a tariff war is highly commendable, since it would be particularly disastrous to Western Canada."

DANIEL BAIN, Nicholson & Bain, wholesale commission brokers, Winnipeg —"The rate on raisins and prunes was formerly 1 cent; it is now 2-3 of a cent, and this will mean an increased trade in such lines as Canada stood much in need of. Peanuts being reduced from 3 to 2 cents, places the United States on the same basis as Japan. Nuts which had previously been shipped from France and Spain, via United States houses are 1 cent above the rate when shipped direct from those countries to Canada. Now the rate is the same, and it is evident that the whole reconstruction of the tariff was to put United States on the same basis as other countries. The lines of imports which have been reported on have no Canadian competition and will help greatly to relieve the condition in Canada."

Quebec Wholesalers' Opinions.

A. P. TIPPET, Montreal—"It will be cheaper to import all currants via New York, have them repacked there and then forwarded to Montreal. The duty via New York for bonded goods is 1 cent per lb. The new duty is 1-3 less i.e., 2-3 cents per lb.

JOSEPH ETHIER, of Laporte, Martin & Co., Montreal—"The effect of the new regulations will be very slight, as the reduction on prunes, dried plums, currants and raisins is too slight to affect prices here. It will make the situation somewhat easier for importers, however."

ALBERT HEBERT, of Hudon, Hebert & Co., Montreal commented on the reduction of 1 cent per lb. on shelled peanuts. This reduction would make considerable difference to a large importer from the United States.

Several soap men in commenting on the new regulations agreed that there would be no increased competition from the States, as 32½ per cent. was still pretty high for any except highly advertised goods.

W. C. CHRISTMAS, said that Brazil nuts, pecans and peanuts would be affected, the latter to a considerable extent. The benefit would be solely to the importer here, however, as Canada was not a producer of these lines.

Chinaware men agree with soap makers, that the change will affect them little or none. The present duty of 27½ per cent. is too high to admit of any material increase of United States competition on this side of the line.

J. B. RENAUD & CIE, Quebec—"We think the tariff has been altered in a fair proportion which should give satisfaction to both countries."

VICTOR ARCHAMBAULT, wholesale grocer, Quebec—"I am under the impression that Canada's attitude in this case was a success.

"We have stood firm protecting our own industries, and giving a reduced tariff on goods which are mostly luxuries, such as dates, figs, plums and nuts, the consumer benefiting in the reduction. These goods not being produced in most cases under the British flag, we have to import them anyway."

Ontario Men on the Changes.

W. H. GILLARD & CO., Hamilton—"The changes in the tariff under the arrangements made with the United States are so few as applied to articles in the grocery trade that they will hardly be noticed, the only result being a loss of revenue to the Customs Department and a corresponding reduction in price to the consumer on a few items that do not really come in competition with anything produced in this country, unless, of course, the cheapened cost of prunes may have an indirect bearing in influencing the prices of Canadian dried fruits, in which case the farmer suffers and the consumer gets the benefit."

GEO. E. BRISTOL & CO., Hamilton —"We do not think that the new tariff agreement will make any difference as far as the wholesale grocery business is concerned, as the duties are reduced from every other point. We are very glad, indeed, though, to see the settlement, because we think it bad policy to quarrel with our neighbors, if it can be avoided."

JOHN GARVEY, Jno. Garvery & Sons, London—"It seems to me that the Canadian consumer will get his dried fruits, etc., at 1-3 of a cent per pound cheaper than he formerly paid. If by making this reduction, which does not amount to very much, Mr. Fielding has averted a tariff war with the United States, I think he has done a good stroke of business for his country. I say this notwithstanding that I have not been a supporter of Mr. Fielding's Government."

THOS. KINNEAR, Toronto — "I have not made a close study of the agreement as I want to find out its results first from actual experience. I do not see, however, that it will make much difference to the grocery trade. There may be a tendency to decrease the prices of dried fruit to the consumer, but if any changes do occur they will be so gradual and so small that I don't think they will make much difference."

H. P. ECKARDT, of H. P. Eckardt & Co., Toronto—"I think the tariff agreement was a wise move on the part of our Government. While we might have secured the U. S. minimum tariff without the concessions, we showed the right spirit. Possibly some time in the future the U. S. may have an opportunity to knock us, but this little bit of history will be remembered.

"It is going to place the two countries on a more friendly commercial basis. This feeling has been growing now for some years, and it would have been too bad for the Canadian Government to have terminated it by holding out for the lower tariff without giving any concessions.

"It will not have any appreciable effect on the grocery trade. The people will secure any benefits that are going and the Government will collect less duties."

WARREN BROS., Toronto—"Canada in my opinion," said Mr. Warren, "did the right thing in granting the concessions she did. It will serve to bring the two countries closer together. The concessions are so small that they produce no noticeable effect and since they prevented tariff warfare they are not to be considered.

"So far as the trade is concerned it will benefit us in the buying of prunes, as most of our prunes come from California."

HUGH BLAIN, of Eby, Blain, Ltd.—"While the concessions are not going to have much of an effect on the grocery trade, they will, I think, tend to make easier prices on peanuts, peanut-butter, and dried fruits to the trade and probably have some effect on prices to the consumer. The new arrangement will likely provide a somewhat better margin of profit to the wholesale and retail trade.

"There is not much dried fruit in the bonded warehouses; if there had been wholesalers would have benefited to some extent."

MR LUMBERS, JR., Jas Lumbers, Toronto—"The concessions are not enough to make any noticeable difference to the trade. One-third of a cent on dried fruit is practically nothing. The arrangement may tend, however, to give a preference to Virginia peanuts."

F. W. HUDSON, Canada Brokerage Co., Toronto—"Personally I belive in a little give and take in any matter, and I don't think Canada has given away very many concessions. There will not be much of an effect on the trade, as the reduction is so little."

F. W. HUMPHREY, Toronto—"I cannot see that the grocery trade will be much affected, the concessions are so small. There may be a slight disadvantage to the Canadian manufacturers of toilet soaps, but the duty is still high. It puts the United States on a par with France and Spain, so far as nuts and dried fruits are concerned, and will be a benefit to the trade in general.

"There will be more pecans and Brazil nuts used here, I think, as a result."

MR. DUFF, Perkins, Ince & Co., Toronto—"We'll scarcely see any effect of any account from the new arrangements. Canada didn't give away very much, but I do not see that she had to give away anything at all. I think we would have been granted the minimum tariff without any concession, as the United States cannot do without our pulpwood.

"If the wholesale trade had had much dried fruits in their bonded warehouses they might have saved something in the reduction, but I do not think there was much in bond."

W. G. CRAIG, of W. G. Craig & Co., Kingston, Ont.—"Regarding the recent United States tariff agreement, I beg to say that the value of figs, dates, prunes, plums, nuts, etc., imported from the U.S. annually, amount to about $767,935 and soaps $204,640, together making $972,575. But the total of these items from all countries brought into Canada, amounts in value to about $1,237,948 per annum. Two and one-half per cent. on this sum equals $30,948, which represents this saving to Canadian consumers for twelve months, or about one-twentieth of one per cent. of the whole duty collected.

"These are the grocery lines affected, and the reduction though scarcely noticeable, is just so much in favor of the consumer. None of the articles, excepting soap (and 2½ per cent. reduction is not likely to have much bearing on this article), are produced in Canada, so that we may conclude the goods were wisely chosen for the purpose of compromise; indeed this may be said of the whole list, and the wonder is that a satisfactory catalogue could so easily have been found that would disturb trade so slightly. The general public will benefit by the changes. None of the items come in serious conflict with any Canadian industries.

"That the anxiety regarding an expected tariff war has been in this amicable way satisfactorily averted and with such slight concessions speaks volumes for the excellent judgment and diplomacy of those who conducted the negotiations. A friendly agreement and so readily reached is no doubt best for all concerned, particularly for the future welfare and prosperity of Canada. Instead of this friendly settlement resulting in peace and good feeling and the prospect of still better relations with our nearest commercial neighbor, there might haxe been a demoralizing tariff war.

"Our growing Dominion being socially and commercially interwoven along its southern border with the great Republic, and in important close connection with it in many ways, it is of the greatest importance that we should at all times, if possible, maintain friendly relations with that country.

"Peace and good feeling is secured and maintained, and we join in the saying of of Sir Wilfrid Laurier that 'this

Things That Shouldn't Be

Grocers Should Not Allow Their Children to Become Nuisances Around the Store. It Does Not Frequently Happen That Babies are Allowed to Sit on the Cheese But Such a Case is Known to Have Actually Happened in a Canadian Country Store.

is worth more than all the nuts and prunes in creation.'"

J. L. WATT & SCOTT, grocery brokers, Toronto—"It will have the effect of placing California raisins on the same basis as Spanish Valencia and Malaga raisins. Prior to Feb. 1, Spanish raisins came in under a duty of 1 cent—the same as California. Since Feb. 1, Spanish raisins have enjoyed the two-thirds of a cent duty while California remained at 1 cent. Since March 31, however, California raisins have been reduced to the level of Spanish.

"With regard to prunes, the French fruit has been coming in at 2-3 of a cent for several years, while the duty on California prunes was 1c. With the new arrangement California prunes come in under the same basis as French. It is now a question of the better market."

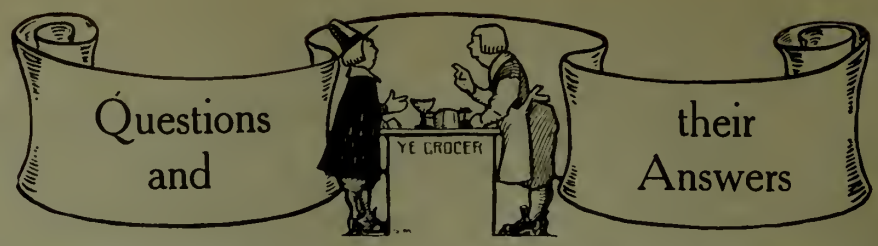
LIND BROKERAGE CO., Toronto—"The change will have a tendency to bring in more Virginia peanuts providing the prices are right. The new 2 cent rate brings the duty down to what French and Spanish peanuts have been. On the whole the changes will have little effect."

W. G. A. LAMBE, of W. G. A. Lambe & Co., Toronto—"I favor the new tariff agreement. You see the United States are not getting any concession from Canada, which other countries do not receive. I do not see that it will affect Canadion manufacturers, and is certainly much better than tariff warfare. So far as dried fruits are concerned it will tend to make them cheaper to the consumer, and it will not interfere with profits to the various sections of the trade. It will in fact tend to strengthen them as dried fruits should sell better. The same is true of peanuts and pecans."

Benefit to Dried Fruits.

St. John N.B., April 6.—St. John wholesale grocers as a whole seem to be pretty well pleased over the tariff settlement effected between the United States and Canada. While they all confess that they have not gone into the matter very thoroughly, they express the opinion that the reduction on dried fruits will be a benefit. There are few lines on which a reduction has been made that will affect business to any extent. So far as nuts are concerned the local dealers all import direct from the country of origin, and the change in duty will not affect the situation. On prunes, apricots and peaches, the new tariff will make a reduction of about a quarter cent per pound . Taken in all, the dealers seem to think that the changes made will have little effect on their business, but what little there is will be for the better.

Booth & Colquhoun, grocers, Maryland St., Winnipeg, have dissolved partnership. On and after April 1, the business will be in the name of Charles B. Booth.



COLLECTION FROM CIVIL SERVANTS.

Editor Canadian Grocer.—Could you give me any information through your valuable paper what grocery merchants do with government employes in the other provinces that refuse to pay their grocery bill knowing they are protected and that their wages can not be garnished. Any information would be gladly received by grocers in this city. Hoping you will find space in your paper for an answer and greatly oblige

M. & A. McLEOD,
55 Prince St.

Charlottetown, P.E.I., Apr. 1, 1910.

Legislation on The Way—In reply to the above letter from Charlottetown we may say that at the present time there are no methods used in any province by merchants to collect debts of civil servants. According to law their salaries cannot be garnisheed and even if judgment were secured in a court of law nothing could be collected. At the present time, therefore, merchants have to depend entirely on the honesty of the civil servants who are kept in the service of the government.

At the present time, however, a bill is being introduced into the House of Commons making the salary of a civil servant attachable for a debt and if this goes through the trouble will end. From present indications such is likely to be the case.

FOR PRESERVING EGGS.

Editor Canadian Grocer.—Do you know of any method used for the preservation of eggs outside of cold storage? If so we would like to get the information through your Questions and Answers column.

GENERAL MERCHANT.

Victoria, B.C., Apr. 1, 1910.

Answer—There are of course several recipes given for the preservation of eggs but the following have been used to advantage by different egg preservers:

When eggs are only required to be preserved for two or three months they keep very well packed in dry salt or bran. The meat of the egg may shrink and rattle within the shell when shaken, but its edibility is not impaired. Coating the egg with vaseline or butter will also keep it for a short time, or any application which effectively seals the pores of the shell and excludes air will prolong the freshness of eggs. If it is even momentarily submerged in boiling water, the albumen thereby becomes sufficiently coagulated to prevent the entrance of air. In some of the rural parts of England eggs for home consumption are smutted over with a mixture of sulphur and lampblack, claimed to be a cheap and effective preservative.

A firm in the North of England claims to have a new way of preserving eggs It is based on the theory that an egg decomposes because of bacteria entering through the pores of the shell. Under the new process, the egg is first disinfected, and then immersed in a vessel of hot paraffin wax in a vacuum. The air in the shell is extracted by the vacuum, and atmospheric pressure is then allowed to enter the vessel and press the hot wax into the pores of the shell, sealing it hermetically.

Still another method used by some is as follows:

Mix together in an earthenware jar 9 parts of boiled water, which has been thoroughly cooled, and 1 part of glass water. Glass water is obtained by fusing 2 parts of quartz sand with 1 of sodium carbonate, adding one-tenth part of small coal. Place the cool cleaned eggs into a jar and cover well with the liquid continually adding sufficient liquid to keep the eggs entirely covered as others are added. Water glass can be purchased in this country from chemists, and generally bears on the labels the exact proportion to be used, varying from 3 to 10 per cent. Eggs preserved in this way are less brittle in the shell than those preserved in lime water, and will sometimes boil without cracking if a small pin-point aperture is made in them.

The proportions used for the lime preservative in some places are 20 gallons of water, 4 of lime, and 1 of salt. Allow to stand for a few hours, then pour it over the eggs in the same way as the water glass. A little lime should be added from time to time, during the period of preservation; otherwise, the solution will lose its strength. The eggs preserved in this way become rough and brittle and must be handled carefully when taken out for use. Limed eggs are used extensively by bakers.

MOLASSES AS A FEEDSTUFF.

It is interesting to note how molasses is coming into its own in these latter days of scientific research. Way out in New South Wales in Southern Australia, there has been recently organized in the City of Sydney the Molasses Fodder Co. and in an issue of the Agricultural Gazette of New South Wales, it gives a flaming advertisement to farmers, dairymen and others, offering them "liquid molasses, rich in sugar," and suitable for live stock of all kinds, including poultry, and suitable for mixing with hay, straw, chaff, husks, bran, wheat, oats, corn, or damaged foods and they state incidentally that it will make all these foods "fresh and palatable." And apart from its value as an economic feed, it prevents the ordinary diseases of animals and clears horses' stomachs of the "bots."

Leaks in Retail Businesses which Cause Failures

Mistakes Merchants Make in Starting in The Grocery Business—Overstocking one of the Principal Reasons—Selling to a Customer What is of no Use to Her —Disadvantages of Salesmen who Take Little Interest in Their Work.

By L. C. Harkness.

Why do retail grocers fail ? That is a pertinent question. Of all failures of this kind during the past year perhaps no two can be attributed to exactly the same reasons. Because that is so, it enables the observant person to get at a few of the outstanding weaknesses which belong to the business as a whole.

It must be remembered of the grocer who does not fail, that he is not wholly exempt from all the frailties which are manifested in failures. Every grocer has his weak points else he would be perfect. The difference between him and the more unfortunate one, is that in the case of the latter the weakness was carried to the breaking point, and that meant his failure. If the existing merchant continues without remedying some of the characteristics of his business, he may have a similar experience. It is for that reason that we refer to some causes of failure.

The man who premeditates entering into the grocery business is often carried away with the prospects of a rapidly remunerative business, and without slowly counting the cost overstep the limit of his ambition. He rents or purchases a high-priced location, and before he sees one dollar's worth of goods he is up against a debt that would almost worry a millionaire.

Large things are not accomplished in that way. The law of life is contrary to that method of procedure. He must begin, not too ambitiously, and work up gradually.

A Mistake Frequently Made.

Overstocking is a common ailment in the life of a business. This is supplementary to a large, expensive establishment, and quite as unnecessary. Not only in the beginning should stocks be controlled, but all along there is the danger of creating a maximum liability, over against a minimum asset, due to heavy stocks that eat out profits before they are turned-over.

To open a place of business on a moderate scale does not necessarily mean that there should be a lack of congenial environment. The modest premises can be made inviting and clean. Lots of sunlight and fresh air in the store will go far to counteract the absence of elaborate interiors.

The display and arrangement of goods in stock is one of the leading assets to any business and must not be overlooked by one who wishes to realize his ambition.

Many grocers pay too little attention to the individual customer. Human nature is much the same. Everyone likes to be recognized and remembered on the occasion of a second visit. The tastes, habits, likes and dislikes of a customer should be catered to, if they are to be secured as permanent customers. As a man among his fellows, the grocer behind the counter must be prepared for the emergency of meeting a character he never met before else he might repel rather than solicit successfully.

"Things that shouldn't be," that The Grocer is illustrating weekly, brings out with no uncertainty a bold deficiency, but there are discrepancies everywhere that cannot be illustrated by a cartoon. They lie too deeply in the demeanor of the merchant, who is day by day approaching inevitable failure.

What Customer Doesn't Want.

Salesmanship is surely a science, but it is certainly the science of service. To be a good salesman in the business is to be a good servant of the public. To sell goods to a customer which he does not want, is not good salesmanship, and it is an extremely bad policy.

Many failures can be laid at the door of the evil of hypnotizing a customer to buy what is not wanted.

The weakness in salesmanship and store management is manifest everywhere in the grocery business. It is often said that a certain grocer has a "poor bunch of clerks—they don't seem to be interested in the business." Whether this is the salesmen's faults or the proprietor's, for it is either one or the other or both, it is serious, and the successful grocer must guard against such criticism.

Inside the business or where facts are not apparent to the customer there may be many weak links in the business chain. There is that of waste. Twine is broken up and thrown away. Soap and egg cases are destroyed when they could be sold. In weighing out goods such as sugar, some is spilt each time, which in a year amounts to some pounds. This is a dead loss. A grocer often allows an incompetent business man to run up an account which he knows he cannot meet. This is looseness. It is a puncture in the business, and is followed by larger leakages.

Not Watching Legislation.

The merchant is too often the victim of his environment. He is often subjected to severe legislation. But should there be legislation which the merchant believes to be wrong, who has a greater right to say so than the one whom the law operates against. In many cases existing evils could be righted should the merchant only take steps to do so. He must not allow himself to be brow-beaten by any legislators or competitors who work for their own special benefits and who have no concern for the merchant who may fail or not so far as they care.

WANT BETTER ATTENTION.

Retail Merchants' Ascsociation Think That Ontario Government is Slighting Commercial Legislation.

Toronto, April 6.—Among the resolutions adopted by the Retail Merchants' Association at their annual meeting held last week, were the following:—

That it is the opinion of the members of this branch that the present by-law regulating the height of awnings should be amended, so that the irons will be 7 feet 3 inches from the sidewalk, allowing 9 inches for the curtain, and that the clause demanding a permit should be rescinded, as we consider it a useless and unnecessary provision.

That it is the opinion of the branch that the space allotted in the Canadian National Exhibition should be as far as possible, distributed to as many competing firms as possible, so as to give a greater variety of exhibits, and not to have the name of one firm overshadow others, who are equally deserving.

That it is the opinion of this branch that the Ontario Government does not give sufficient care, time and attention to the Commercial Legislation that comes before them, as they should, and we strongly recommend that the attention of the Ontario Provincial Board be called to this matter, and that we ask them to interview the Government and endeavor to impress upon the Government the necessity of appointing a Committee on Commerce, so as to deal more intelligently with commercial subjects.

That the bread manufacturers of Ontario were unjustly deat with in the recent enactment of the Provincial Parliament, in that it is apparent that those who have their capital invested in the manufacture of bread and whose experience would give them the better knowledge of the demands of the bread-purchasing public, were not consulted in the framing of the law. Further from our view-point we feel that time will work the remedy and that eventually the broad business principle of commercial liberty will be granted to this important industry of the manufacture of of bread. Again it is felt by the bread manufacturers that the legislators do not realize the magnitude and importance of the modern bread industry, nor do they seem to appreciate the disturbance created by the constant change of law to this industry. Moreover we are at a loss to understand why the bread industry is selected for periodical law-making attacks, or why the same law that governs a yard measure or a foot rule, or a pound avoirdupois or its multiple, should not govern the weight and sale of bread, so long as that weight is properly shown upon the article sold.

That it is the opinion of this branch that all persons who are subscribers to the Telephone Co. be allowed the use of the same on the Exhibition Grounds.

Blending of Display and Good Copy in Ad. Writing

Need of Retailers Themselves Knowing When an Ad. is Well Displayed—Samples of Good and Poor Appearances — The Writing of Copy to Get Results.

By J. W. McKay.

Retailers should have some acquaintance with the displaying of advertisements in the newspapers, and should see that their copy is made attractive by the printer. Different advertisers have different ideas about display and some have none at all. Everyone should cultivate an eye for attractiveness, because that is one of the important features towards getting an advertisement read.

The writing of copy is, of course, a very important attribute to successful advertising, and if both these things are given careful attention, newspaper publicity is bound to bring results. These will be, generally speaking, proportionate to the attractiveness and to the drawing power of the copy. There are, of course, exceptions to this rule, but in the majority of cases it holds good.

An Example of a Neatly Displayed and Well Written Advertisement.

Two of the advertisements shown here are attractively displayed—those of W. J. McIntyre, Sarnia, Ont., and Dillon Brothers, Halifax, N.S. The symmetry of the latter is outstanding, three heavy rows of type being used the proper distances apart. "French Sardines During Lent"—"10c per tin" and "Dillon Brothers," tell the story in brief. It attracts the eye and tends to make the reader study the advertisement more closely.

The copy connecting these large links is convincing and no doubt it increased the sales of those sardines at the time it appeared in the Halifax paper. In a word, the ad. is nicely displayed and well written and could scarcely be improved on.

Prices Should Be Used.

The W. J. McIntyre ad. is also well displayed. There is not too much display type used and what is, is used judiciously.

At first glance the ad. appears to be an excellent one, but a closer study reveals what might be considered a few weaknesses. A little more might have been said about the desirability of using grape fruit for marmalade, since the heading referred to that. Grape fruit prices should also have been used immediately after the talk on that article.

In introducing the talk on the other fruits a line such as: "See the following prices on these fruits also," would have made the ad. stronger. The sort of copy that brings results is that used in reference to celery—"the celery is home grown; it is crisp, sweet and 'nutty' better than any you have had for a year."

Copy Too Jerky.

The least attractive of the three ads. is that of C. E. Compton, Wetaskiwin, Alta. It is reduced from a space 4½ inches wide by 6 inches in length.

The trouble seems to be in the lack of symmetry in display. For instance: "The Cash Grocery," "Sure," Compton's," and "C. E. Compton," do not sound well, and the display of these words does not appeal to the vision. The copy is written in a somewhat jerky style, which makes it difficult to be read and comprehended at the same time. Neither does there appear to be any necessity for the heavy underlines used.

Tea Markets not Likely to Decline this Season

So Intimates Calcutta Visitor Who Talks of Market Prospects of Coming Season — Conditions Existing Last Year Were Peculiar—Should Tea be Purchased for Appearance or for the Cup?

R. K. Stevens, tea buyer for the Calcutta firm of Shaw, Wallace Co., who has lately been staying in Toronto, has given The Canadian Grocer a few facts concerning the past Indian tea season and his views of the near future of the market which will interest readers.

Mr. Stevens points out that the man who prophecies in tea, "stands always to be shot." There have been times, he added, when such a procedure would have seemed justifiable. He says that people, however, who do not live in tropical climates are apt to imagine that one year in the far east is much like another, and failure of the monsoon, or early cold weather, are terms which as often as not convey little or no meaning to the tea dealer who is not in touch with the market at its source. And yet climatic conditions in India vary every year, and have as much effect on the quality as on the quantity of tea produced.

"Take for instance the season in India just closed," he said. "Quality throughout was above the average and especially so was this the case in teas from the Cachar, Dooars, Sylhet and Darjeeling districts. Now in the previous season the quality of the teas from Dooars was often so indifferent as to put the teas on a plane with what is known as common leaf. Then too, Cachar and Sylhet both made a great quantity of this very inferior tea, whereas in this last season little tea from any district was produced that could not be described as clean, sweet and sound. This was due partly to a dry period in India from October, 1908, to well into the early months of 1909. So marked was the effect of this drought on the tea bushes that the Calcutta season opened fully a fortnight late, and so slow was the growth that by the end of August or early in September the crop was 5,000,000 pounds short of the previous year's figures at a similar period. This slow growth, however, seemed to give the teas much more body and so what was lost in quantity was made up in quality.

"About mid-September, it is generally reckoned in India that a fairly reliable estimate of the yield for the season can be made, and with so large a deficiency to make good, and half the season gone, it seemed almost certain that the total crop would not exceed the previous year's output. About the third week in September, however, the weather, ever fickle, suddenly changed, and throughout all the tea growing districts warm sunny weather with frequent showers, ideal growing conditions, set in. It is ancient history now, that the next month or two produced record yields.

"The 5,000,000 was no longer a minus quantity but a plus, and the season ended up with a total crop of some 10 or 12 million pounds above the previous one. Everything was favorable for production. Even the cold weather appeared a little late, as if to accentuate the error that had been made in forecasting the crop; and the 'wiseacre' of Mincing Lane, who always believes that these estimates are made solely to 'bull' the market, was able to say, 'I told you so.' One cannot help wondering what the price of common and medium teas would be now had there been a shortage as anticipated; for in spite of two record yields from Ceylon and India in one season, totaling well over 20 million pounds more tea than in the previous year, we have a higher market to-day than was the case twelve months ago.

Will the Tea Market Advance?

"By the law of average, the probability is against two such yields in successive years. Ceylon exports already show a falling off for the first quarter of this year compared to last, and the coming months will have to compare with the very heavy figures of last year. What then is going to bring down the price of the clean, common and medium teas that form so large a proportion of the world's consumption? It is a question very difficult to answer.

"There are some facts connected with last season's market that are worth keeping in mind, as they may have a bearing on the future market for low price tea. When it became certain that the Indian crop would be considerably larger than that of 1908-09, it was expected that the changed aspect of affairs would cause a big drop in what was said to be an inflated market, but such was not the case.

Quality Remained in the Tea.

"This can be ascribed to various causes, but I think it may in a large measure be accounted for by the fact that the quality of the teas kept up wonderfully well all through the last half of the season. This enabled the support of the Russian buyers to be given to the market and to such an extent that over 5 million pounds more tea was taken from Calcutta sales alone for Moscow. The same market bought largely from London and it is estimated that the growth in the world's consumption of tea for the past year was 16 million pounds.

"There is an old saying that "lookers on, see most of the game" and thus it was that some of us in Calcutta were able, so long as November last, to foresee that there would be a strong and rising market for common tea in the spring. As the reason for this may not seem obvious, I must explain that in the previous season when the quality of tea was generally inferior, London had bought very largely, low-priced teas from Calcutta, and by this means was able to keep the British market for this grade from rising to an awkward price. This season, however, it became evident even in September that Russia was buying extensively common leaf and broken grades in the Calcutta sales, and outbidding buyers for London. This support continued until the end of the year, by which time it began to be realized in London that there was nothing to be had from the Calcutta sales, hence the rise in the market for common leaf in Mincing Lane, which we in Calcutta had been in a position to forecast some time before.

"One hears a good deal about the London stocks being larger than 12 months ago, but it is, I think, more than doubtful if there is much common or low medium tea being held. There seems no prospect therefore of a lower range of prices for the present, and with the world's consumption going ahead every year, the position of the tea industry is anyway rosy from the producers' point of view.

Should Buy for the Cup.

"You may notice," he said, "that countries that buy teas for cup are those which show the greatest consumption of tea. I never can understand people buying tea for appearance; it is always deceptive, and seems about on a par with choosing wine by the shape of the bottle or the color of the label. It should not be lost sight of that the thousands of settlers coming to this country from the United Kingdom are practically all tea drinkers and what is more, they are used to good teas, such as can be had in England to-day at a wonderfully reasonable price. It is equally certain, I think, that if they find they cannot get similar quality tea in Canada, they will become coffee drinkers.

"One should never lose sight of the fact that the public as a whole know good tea. It has been proved over and over again in England that the teas with the largest sales are those which show the best qualities in cup."

COLLECTING BAD DEBTS.

New Westminster, B.C., Apr. 5.—At the last meeting of the Board of Trade of New Westminster, B.C., a scheme was proposed to foster the organization of a retail protective association to be looked after by the secretary. It was pointed out that many new people were coming to the city, and with new customers available it was necessary for the merchants to know who they were so as to prevent losses. The suggestion did not meet with favor as a board enterprise, and it was concluded that it was a matter for the merchants themselves, rather than for the board. The advantage of a graded customer list has been shown in other places, and it is probable that the New Westminster grocers and other dealers will co-operate in such a necessary institution.

SHORT MAPLE CROP.

Prolonged warm weather at a season when the days should be warm and the nights cool has resulted in a short crop of maple goods. The season is nearly over now, and the crop, according to authorities, will be not more than 50 to 60 per cent. of what it should be.

In many ways owners of maple groves worked under difficulties this year, and they have done well to secure such a yield as they have. The lack of rain or snow during the past two weeks made the trees warm, which is not a desirable state of affairs.

However, the quality of the goods offering is, on the whole, satisfactory. The first sap harvested yielded maple syrup and maple sugar of the very highest grade, and the situation was saved by that circumstance.

Maple produce men are satisfied that prices this year are none too high, in view of the figures paid farmers. Grocers who have not yet ordered should do so at once to ensure deliveries as some makers are refusing to book further.

SHOULD ACCEPT INVITATION.

Believing that a better understanding existing among retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers will improve grocery trade conditions, the Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Exchange have invited the other two branches to attend their coming convention which opens on April 25th.

This will be held in the banquet room of the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, and as pointed out in last week's issue will be a departure from other years in view of the invitation to retailers and manufacturers.

To show that they believe in the widest publicity of the meetings the Exchange are opening them to anybody who cares to listen to the discussions.

Retailers should take advantage of this and particularly should as large a representation as possible be present on Wednesday, April 27—Manufacturers' and Retailers' Day. On the day previous there will be a conference among retailers alone when resolutions will be prepared to present to the joint meeting on Wednesday. This is done to insure united action.

In view of the new departure a way has been found which if followed carefully is going to be a potent factor in placing the different trade interests on a more friendly basis towards one another. More harmony is wanted to dispel wrong impressions and good is bound to result from the coming convention. But the idea must be followed up if it is to be permanent.

It is the duty, therefore, of every retailer who can and who wishes to see the grocery trade on a higher and better plane, to attend the meetings of the Exchange at which questions affecting the retail trade are discussed.

ADVANCE IN MATCHES.

Travelers calling on the retail trade for wholesale houses are announcing an advance on matches—on one brand at least.

The advances mean from 10 to 15 cents per case to the retail grocer and are due, according to match manufacturers, to the higher prices paid for the raw material.

The change came into effect the first of April.

GRAIN ROUTE IN DANGER.

Lest Canada's export transportation mediums for carrying grain from Lake Superior ports to the Old Country be carefully watched she is likely to lose the present advantages over those of the United States.

We have the shortest grain route to Britain, but if grain can be shipped via Buffalo and New York, at cheaper rates than by the St. Lawrence route we cannot expect to hold the trade. It will go through the channel of least resistance.

There is at present a combination of influences which tend to divert our grain from Fort William through the Buffalo-New York medium due to the publication of the record of export shipments by Montreal, which were found to be greater than by New York. Complaints arose from the United States shipping interests and no doubt many influences were at once set to work to counteract the natural effect of Canada's superior position.

These influences are likely to succeed unless a thorough inquiry is made. Big freighters on the upper lakes now carry grain from Fort William to Buffalo and to Georgian Bay ports for a cent and a half a bushel. As there is a difference of 300 miles in favor of the Canadian route this seems like a discrimination.

The Canadian route has also the advantage of time. The rail route from Georgian Bay ports to Montreal is 4 cents and from Buffalo to New York 4.9 cents, thus giving the Canadian medium an advantage of nine-tenths of a cent. When the grain is brought all the way by water to Montreal the advantage is a cent and a half.

But there is apparently another discrimination in the ocean rates which tend to give the balance of advantage in favor of New York. Here is where changes should be made if Canada is to retain her prestige in export grain transportation. The difference in the total charge is from one and a half cents to nearly two and a half cents. This in the face of the natural advantages of the purely Canadian route suggests that that there is something wrong.

A careful investigation is due Canadian transportation companies as well as the grain growers of the Canadian west.

GROWTH OF FRUIT TRADE.

During the last few years it is astonishing to note the growth of the United States deciduous fruit imortations into Montreal. It is not many years ago when a car of oranges was regarded almost as a curiosity. Last year one firm imported 247 cars of oranges for this market, and they expect to add at least 40 p.c. to these figures during the present year.

There are at present some firms in Montreal to whom the southern fruit trade means the major part of their business.

INSURANCE NECESSARY.

That fire insurance is an aid to business interests is manifest.

Credit is based on a mercantile reputation entitling a dealer to receive goods on promise of an after-payment and this carries with it the understanding that every possible precaution will be taken to protect both himself and the firm trusting him against loss.

Fire insurance is the police power of the mercantile world against the fire enemy which seeks to destroy its wealth. Insurance is closely watched by credit men not only to make sure that their values are properly protected, but because the proportion of protection the merchant carries often furnishes a valuable guide as to his business ability and foresight.

The insurance manager of Marshall Field & Co., Chicago, claims that the time will come when insurance companies and the State or Federal governments will be in partnership and owners of property will be compelled to insure it to at least 80 per cent. of its value.

Insurance is certainly an absolute essential to a modern business.

CLERKS AND THE STORE'S ADVERTISING.

The advertising of a store cannot be termed successful until some means is devised whereby the proprietor is certain that every person in his employ has read the store's advertisements before the business day has begun.

In order to do this all sorts of methods have been suggested, but perhaps the most plausible one is now being used by a certain large retail establishment. The proprietor of the store offers $1 to the first employe who calls his attention to a mistake in the spelling, composition, or grammatical construction of his daily advertisement.

The plan has been found to work wonderfully well, but whether it is imitated by you or not, the importance of getting up some idea that will bring your advertisements and your clerks together is obvious.—Shoe Retailer.

THINGS THAT SHOULDN'T BE.

The Grocer feels gratified to know that a great deal of attention is being given the weekly cartoon on "Things That Shouldn't Be."

Every week suggestions come in from readers and as many of these are being used in the cartoons as are possible. A few days ago some energetic clerk sent an entire drawing showing a cat smelling sausage on the counter and a boy picking a cheese with his hands and eating what he could get off.

These are certainly things that shouldn't be allowed in the modern grocery store.

Another correspondent calls our attention to a dirty practice too often experienced. Figs were asked for and these had to be dug out of a box. The grocer used his hands and every little while wiped them on a dirty apron.

The probability is that prior to the entrance of that customer he had done the same after selling bacon, onions or coal oil. A person who asks for figs wants the fig flavor and not coal oil or bacon.

This shows the importance of doing business on a scientific basis. Water and soap are cheap and no customer will object to wait for figs if she knows that the grocer's hands are being washed before he serves her.

Something besides the hands should be used too for digging figs from a box. Most housewives are particular at the table where the members of the family are taught not to handle any foodstuffs they do not wish to eat. Why should a grocer, therefore, handle them?

FAILURES IN CANADA.

Three-fourths of the 1,588 failures in Canada in 1909 were due to the faults of those failing, while four-fourths of the liabilities belonged to the same division, according to figures supplied by Bradstreet's. As regard the number of failures, the proportion is not materially different from 1908; but respecting the liabilities, it is to be noted that the proportion was 79.9 per cent. in 1909, against 86.8 per cent. in 1908. Incompetence and lack of capital represent a smaller portion of the total number of the failures embraced in the data for 1909 than fell to them in 1908, while fraud, neglect and competition were larger in their effects. Lack of capital remains the leading source of trouble, with specific conditions second and incompetence third. The first mentioned cause produced 42 per cent. of the failures, and 43.3 per cent. of the liabilities; the second accounted for 22.4 per cent. of the failures and 18.4 per cent. of the liabilities, while to the third goes 15.7 per cent. of the number and 17.5 per cent. of the libilities. Fraud, the fourth most detrimental cause, originated 7.8 per cent. of the failures and 5.9 per cent. of the liabilities in 1909.

STUDYING THE TRADE PAPER.

One of the most difficult problems that confronts enterprising grocers in their efforts to improve trade conditions is the conversion of the man who stands behind his counter from day to day without taking any part in the consideration of trade questions, and who cannot even be reached through his own trade paper.

Such men, as a rule, are grumblers and fault-finders. They think they know how all the evils can be removed, but their ideas are so ancient to one who is familiar with the real conditions that they are not worth consideration.

They expose their utter ignorance of the facts which are puzzling their more active fellow tradesmen, and which they are trying to work out in the interests of all concerned. These are the men who bring distrust and discredit upon those engaged in the grocery trade. Long ago, the most up-to-date men learned the lesson that the only way to succeed in the retail business was through honesty and integrity, and by having a reputation above reproach.

There are many who are still living in ancient times with the idea that business is a thing to misrepresent.

In a recent article in The Ladies' Home Journal a writer undertakes to show how grocers cheat the public by placing putty under the scale pan, lead in the paper bags, and a dozen other ways never heard of before. While there are few guilty of such charges there is nevertheless a tendency among some to be dishonest and these are detrimental to the trade in general.

There is no class of people engaged in any occupation where absolute straightforwardness is so essential to success as in the retail trade. This point is so forcibly brought out in all trade papers, that no one who reads can be so void of common sense as to imagine for a moment that he can gain by resorting to short weight and other dishonest tactics.

With all the edifying examples tending to raise the standard of merchandising above reproach, which are weekly brought within reach through trade papers, there are still merchants who have no use for them. $

If the trade paper did not look after the interests of the retail trade who would? Does the average newspaper or do politicians in general safeguard fairly their interests, or do they cater to the general public at the expense of the merchants in lieu of votes?

These are questions the grocer should ask himself to see whether he has a right or not to study his trade paper in preference to any other.

Wasted time to-day means extra work to-morrow.

Constant nagging soon hardens the softest heart.

No matter how well you treat the world, you will never get out of it alive.

Never look backward—unless you can profit by the mistakes you have made.

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

St. John Grocers Decide on Summer Early Closing—Half Holiday Question in the West—Montreal Grocers Make Profit in Fish—Demonstration Brings New Business—Toronto Grocers Dress Windows to Suit the Seasons.

Summer Early Closing.

St. John, N.B., April 6.—The retail grocers in the north end of the city have agreed with the merchants in other lines of trade, to close their stores at 6 o'clock during the summer evenings. Last summer the stores in that part of the city kept open until 9 or 9.30 o'clock, and during the winter months closed at 7. In the city proper, all the grocers close at 7 o'clock the year round.

Half Holiday In Vernon.

Vernon, B.C., April 6.—Merchants in Vernon, B.C., will close their stores at noon on Wednesday of each week, beginning with the first Wednesday in April and continuing until the end of September, so that the clerks may have a weekly half holiday. This custom has obtained for several years in Vernon, and the half holiday is also observed in other towns in the Okanagan district.

Making Profit Out of Fish.

Montreal, April 6.—The handling of fish by grocers is a line which has rapidly developed during the past few years and which is still in the development stage. In many places the fish trade has been carried on by exclusive fish dealers, but in a great many cases grocers and general merchants are holding a fair share of the business.

That dealing in fish, fresh and salt, has been a profitable investment is shown by the testimony of many dealers. Some attention, of course, is necessary to this department to make it successful, and the more attention paid the better will be the investment.

Held Guessing Contest.

Carleton Place, Ont., April 6.—The City Grocery held a guessing contest recently, which attracted a good deal of attention. A large bar of soap was placed in the window and the person who came the nearest to its weight secured a gold watch. The bar weighed 118 lbs.

Squirrels in Maple Syrup Window.

Toronto, April 8.—MacAuley & Pond, 744 Queen Street West, had several window displays lately, which attracted much attention, and which were suitable for the season.

At Easter they had a flock of selected hens in a lively condition, occupying their large window, as the real producers of hen fruit. This window attracted so much attention that one of the city school teachers brought her class down to see them.

Just now to remind the public that this is maple syrup time, they have several trees in the window, tapped for sap, with a kettle to show the old-fashioned way of boiling syrup. But what amuses the passerby most of all are the red squirrels, which sport briskly from limg to limb, as they always do around the sugar camps.

Brought New Business.

Woodstock, Ont., April 7.—An invitation was extended by Poole & Co., to every woman in the city to visit the store and witness a demonstration during the week, and it was surprising the numbers who turned out each day, non-patrons as well as patrons of the store. Peter Poole, president of the company and manager of the store, stated that a great deal of extra business was done through this demonstration, both in the sale of the products demonsted and other lines of groceries.

A Maple Syrup Ad.

London. Ont., April 6.—The T. A. Rowat & Co., make a specialty out of pure maple syrup every spring and persistently advertise it in the daily newspaper. One of their catchy advertisements used recently was as follows:

If you want some PURE MAPLE SYRUP

To put away for future use WE CAN SUPPLY YOU.

We get our syrup from reliable makers in Quebec, paying the highest price to insure getting it pure.

You take no chances when you buy Maple Syrup at our stores, because you have the privilege of returning it if it is not exactly as represented to you.

Renting Sidewalk Space.

London, Ont., April 8.—A case of more than local interest was heard before Magistrate Love in Police court this week, involving the right of a merchant to rent sidewalk space to another person. The advertising man for the Opera House, was defendant in the charge of obstructing a sidewalk. He first came before Mayor Beattie on March 30th, the information being laid by the chief of police, under the by-law regulating the erection of structures on the public streets.

It appeared that the defendant had written permission from Mr. Fulton, C. P. R. agent, to use the space, so the charge was amended, the information being laid under section 42 of London by-law 3042, which permits a merchant to use six inches of the sidewalk to display or advertise his goods.

"A man has a right to allow anybody to advertise something on his building," said the chief, when the adjourned case came up, "but he has no right to allow him any space on the sidewalk to advertise any man's business in front of his own."

"I would be inclined," said his worship, "to allow this particular sign to be placed within the six inches, if it were secured to the building. That would avoid its blowing across the sidewalk on a windy day."

The defendant agreed to have his signs hooked to the wall in future.

Nothing Succeeds Like Success.

Montreal,, April 6.—"Perhaps," observed a local business man the other day, "you see a man in your line of business who seems to have everything his own way. You watch him grow and meditate on the woes of life generally and the luck of a certain person in particular.

"Of course, you never had the chances he has had, even if, half guiltily you admit to yourself that early in your business career there was little difference in your capital.

"Why is it that everything goes right for him? Why? Because he makes it go right. Every success he has had is so much added capital and you know the old comparison of a snowball rolling down hill. Every little gained means a larger gain later. Don't simply take it out by saying, 'I have no luck.' Every man is his own luck and must make his own success."

The Markets—Tea Market Not Likely to Decline

An Advance Not Expected Soon But Market is Firm—Tapioca Prices Soar, Stated to be Due to Attention Given Rubber—An Advancing Market in Cream of Tartar—Dried Fruits Comparatively Quiet.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—

Tapioca—1¼-1½ cents higher.
Table Raisins—Some Malagas quoted.
Brazil Nuts—Up ½ cent.

Montreal, April 7, 1910.

The feature of the week is the rocket like advance of tapioca. It went from 4¼ to 6 cents in one jump, with prospects of a still further rise. If it duplicates a similar performance which took place a few years ago, it will go to over 6 cents in the primary markets. The cause of this former advance is said to be the same as in the present case. Of course, it is impossible to tell at present whether the result will be as big an advance as before, but it looks decidedly like it.

Sugar is quiet this week. Molasses is showing more activity. Jobbers are beginning to realize that the proper time to have laid in their stock of fancy molasses has passed. Demand is increasing and they now have to buy at the importer's price.

Brazil nuts are up ½ cent.

The new tariff changes have excited little comment among local men. All agree that it will help considerably and no local industry is menaced by the reductions.

Trade in general has showed considerably increased activity and the week has been better than the corresponding one last year.

Sugar—Sugar matters are somewhat dull at present. This is only a natural outcome of the almost feverish activity shown recently. Orders are beginning to be more frequent, however, and the outlook is good.

Syrup and Molasses—For future delivery there is a good demand for fancy molasses. Jobbers are beginning to realize the mistake they made in holding off, as primary prices are if anything slightly higher this week. For immediate delivery the demand is improving. Syrup sales are good even though Lenten sales are a thing of the past.

Rice and Tapioca—Tapioca has gone up from 1¼ to 1½ cents, making it now 5½-6 cents. The cause, it is stated on good authority, is indirectly due to the boom in rubber. It appears that the production of tapioca is being seriously threatened by the absorption of the land for the rubber plantations. This is almost a repetition of the thing which happened some years ago, when the price of tapioca in the primary markets was up to over 6 cents. Rice is steady at former quotations.

MONTREAL—The feature of the week is the increasing demand for fruits. Until lately, vegetables have been the best by far in popular demand. Now, however, fruits are fully on a par with them, and show new vigor daily. Vegetables continue in strong demand.

Lobsters and sardines are best in canned fish, the former being in particularly good demand. There is a good demand for meats and prices of several

Building Up and Making Permanent

Advertising has helped, able travellers deserving of the confidence of the trade have helped; but I have always believed that in building up the Red Rose Tea business and making it permanent, quality is more than advertising and more than salesmanship. Quality accounts for the magnificent progress Red Rose Tea has made in Ontario since its introduction ten years ago. It is this quality that has created the faith the trade have in Red Rose. It is this quality that enables you to have the same confidence in Red Rose I have. Because of this quality it will pay you to recommend

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—

Sugar—Market easier.

Cream of Tartar—Advancing market.

Tapioca—Advanced.

Toronto, April 7, 1910.

The wholesale grocers are busy getting ready with their shipments for the opening of navigation. This is earlier than usual, owing to the early spring weather. This, in addition to the ordinary business, gives the wholesale trade an active appearance.

Business on the whole is satisfactory and up to all reasonable expectations. Wholesalers are expecting a great many retail grocers to respond to their invitations to meet with them at their annual conference. The trade, both wholesale and retail, realize the fact that their intents are in common, and that proper adjustments are necessary. As this is the first meeting of the kind ever held in Canada it should be well attended.

Sugar—The sugar market is steady, but very firm. Raw sugars are fluctuating, but generally end up at the highest point. Another advance does not look quite as likely this week as last.

MANITOBA MARKETS

Winnipeg, April 7, 1910.

Wholesalers report a general briskness everywhere in the west. A feature of the trade is that retailers are carrying an ever widening range of goods. The increased population and the development of rural work have stimulated the trade and retailers are stocking to keep pace with the rapidly growing demand. It is believed that the efforts to compete with the heavy mail-order trade is thus proving successful and more trade is going to the local retailers than during last year. Not only are prices being adjusted but good business tactics are being used to induce local customers to shop at home.

The market on the whole is firm, some few reductions however are recorded. The dried fruit and nut markets are firm but reductions may be made, due to the new tariff schedule.

Sugar.—There is no change in the prices of sugar but the raws have been reduced. This may mean a general weakening of the market but nothing is certain yet.

Foreign Dried Fruits.—Cables from Greece say that the bill providing for the uprooting of 25 per cent. of the currant vines has now becomc law, therefore higher prices are likely to prevail in the near future. The following prices of currants are quite low under any circumstances. Prunes are scarce now and only the smaller sizes are on the market. In these a firm pricc prevails and construction camps will probably suffer this season. Quotations may be reconstructed shortly due to the new tariff rates which affect these lines most particularly.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B.C., Apr. 7, 1910.

Hams and bacon are naturally on the increase, consequent on the high prices of the raw material. One brand of hams has gone up from 19½c to 22c, and bacon has jumped from 21c to 24c.

Considerable of an advance is also noted in all the standard brands of condensed cream, from $5.10 to $5.50 a case.

Although spring weather has been a feature for a week or two, it has not been sufficient to make any difference in the price of butter, and it is generally thought that a higher price will obtain this year than formerly. Eastern choice, which is brought in here by dealers and bricked under their own labels has gone up from 30c to 32c, while the next grade has been advanced a couple of cents, and takes the former price of the best. Australian butter is selling at 32c, but the quality is only fair.

Local eggs are down to 35c, which is about as low as they will get. The article from California is only two or three cents cheaper. Quality on the whole is good.

There is a tendency to clear out potato stocks now that the time is coming on when new potatoes will soon be on the market. Good California Burbanks are jobbed at $25 a ton, and locals at $20, though the latter are not bought at this time of year if anything else offers.

Early June peas have advanced from $1.30 to $1.40 a dozen, which is 20c a case.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, April 7, 1910.

The wholesale grocery jobbers report a good volume of business in practically all lines. The orders that are coming in from the outside districts are good all round, and trade is expected to show further expansion as the condition of the roads improve. The sales of some lines are not quite as heavy as they otherwise would be on account of the prevailing high prices asked. These lines are principally pork products, barrelled beef, and poultry.

The provision dealers say that business is excellent, and that a large quantity of goods are being turned over. Prices this week have an easier tendency. While the demand for potatoes is good, the supply is also good, and a large quantity of New Brunswick potatoes are being marketed here. The stock is first-class and they find a ready sale. The arrival of these potatoes has caused a drop of ten cents per bushel in the price of Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island potatoes.

TARIFF CHANGES NOW IN EFFECT

The Department of Customs at Ottawa has sent out notice of the change in Canadian tariff resulting from the recent negotiations with the United States. These changes were given in last week's issue of The Grocer, being a reduction from the General tariff to the Intermediate tariff on 13 articles, and are given to all countries. The new schedule came into effect on March 31st.

The duty on dates and figs has been reduced 7½ cents per 100 lbs.; on prunes, dried plums (unpitted), raisins and dried currants the reduction is 1-3 of a cent per lb. Nuts have been reduced 1 cent per lb., the duty now standing at 2 cents. The reduction on soap powders, powdered soap and soap n.o.p., is 2½ per cent.

WHAT IS A SANITARY STORE?

Here is one grocer's definition of a sanitary grocery store :

No fruits or vegetables exposed for sale on the outside to catch the microbes in the floating dust.

No stale or dried up fruit and vegetables on the inside.

No slovenly clerks with dirty hands to wait on customers.

No low grade, trashy goods to offer you—not how cheap, but how good.

A sanitary grocery store is equipped with glass cases and sanitary bins which keep out dust and insects, with a sanitary refrigerator, and has a proprietor who insists that the place be kept as near absolute cleanliness as possible.

These figures, of course, do not include shipments of sugar landed here and forwarded to other places by rail. Will Cream Exports to U.S. Affect Butter Market?

Butter Dealers Expect This to be a Feature in Coming Season —May Keep Prices High During the Summer—Egg Prices Not Likely to Get much Lower—Maple Syrup Season Short— No Change in Hog Situation.

The provision market the world over is at a high level, and there is nothing in sight, that shows any reason or even possibility of lower prices in the hog product for some time. In spite of the uncommonly high figure for hogs, the supply does not seem to increase materially.

The butter market is rather unsettled. Prices are forced up above butter value, and in view of the expected lower prices, buyers carry smaller stocks. On the whole, so far, as Canada is concerned, we are approaching our spring make with little on our hands. There is a feature in connection with our dairy prospects which requires to be reckoned with this season and that is the export of cream to the United States under the present tariff. That provisions are made to use a lot of our cream is certain, but to what extent it will affect our market will remain to be seen. It is, however, safe to say that whatever it will amount to, it will have a tendency to keep the price of butter at a high point. From all appearances the Canadian dairy industry, from a farmer's standpoint has a bright outlook.

Cheese also opens up with light stocks on hand and therefore the new make will be in demand as soon as available.

RR—Grocer

MONTREAL.

Provisions—The market is slightly easier, owing to a slackening in demand, Trade is good, however. Live hogs are down 25c and dressed down 50c. Considering the time of year, packers are well satisfied with present conditions and prospects.

Butter—There are a few odd shipments of creamery arriving, but not in sufficient quantity to make any difference in quotations for at least three or four weeks. It is to be noted that the recent tariff changes between the U. S. and Canada have left the duty of 5c per gal. on cream unchanged. This will be sure to affect our butter product in the coming season. Receipts for the week are 800 packages, as against 708 packages same week last year. For the season they are 405,901 packages, as against 423,264 same season, 1909.

Cheese—In English markets cheese is high, quoted at from 63 to 65 shillings. The local demand is sufficient to keep prices firm. New Zealand has become a potent factor in cheese of late. During the past season their exports to England increased over 50 per cent., and the grade is steadily improving. Fodders will undoubtedly open high, this year, which will indirectly have an influence on prices. Receipts for the week are 302 boxes, as against 80 last year, same week. For the season they are 1,972,297 boxes, as against 1,959,676 boxes same season, 1909.

Eggs—Arrivals are now coming in fairly freely. There has been little or no packing done as yet, though some will undoubtedly be done in the near future. The hens seem to be laying well and receipts for the week, 7,413 cases, show a decided increase over last year's figures of 6,236 cases. For the season they are 225,044 cases, as against 229,725 cases same season, 1909.

Maple Products—Sales, particularly of syrup, have been good of late. The make this year has not been as large as was expected, and dealers are having no trouble in disposing of present stocks. Sugar also is in good demand, but most of the sap was only brought to the syrup stage, thus leaving somewhat of a shortage of sugar.

Provisions—The prices of cured meats are firm, with no chance of lower prices in view. The prices of dressed hogs run from $12.75 to $13, and are sold to butchers in small lots at $14 a hundred. This brings the meat, after the head and legs are off, to about 17c a lb. on an average for the whole hog. The demand, in spite of the high prices, continues, because the stuff is good and the people will have it. Our contention that quality regulates consumption is holding out.

Butter—Butter is scarce and unusually high. The supply is scarcely sufficient to meet the demand. These prices are, however, not likely to last long, and lower prices may be looked for in a few weeks. The condition of the market proves that the stored butter is pretty well cleared out, and that the fresh-made is not sufficient to meet the requirements.

Cheese, new, large	0 12½	0 12¾

Eggs—The chase after eggs to meet the present requirements, and also to lay up stock for next winter, is in full swing, and the keenness of the competition keeps the prices high. With the high prices farmers are getting for their eggs, they should put themselves to a little extra trouble and bring them out when they are fresh. Country storekeepers should pay more attention to the quality of eggs, and urge upon their customers the importance of proper handling.

PROTEST BY BUTTER MERCHANTS.

Montreal, April 7.—By-law No. 399 which requires all peddlers to pay a tax of $100 has been the cause of a recent visit paid Mayor Guerin by a number of local butter merchants. These men found they could deliver butter in a fresher condition by selling from wagons. Selling in this way, however, has made them amenable to the above by-law, which they consider unjust. Mayor Guerin promised to bring the matter before the council, saying that he could see the justice of their stand, in that they were not strictly in the class this law was intended to restrict. It is not known what action the council will take in the matter.

KEEP A SCRAPBOOK.

Every advertiser, or writer of advertising ought to keep a scrap book of all his advertisements. It need not be a very fancy affair. If the advertisements are not large, the pages of the book need not be large.

A good book for the purpose, when large enough, is a memorandum or account book. Using such a book will enable one to make memoranda, at the side of, or below, the respective advertisements pasted in it, of the names of the publications in which they appeared, the dates, and what returns were traceable to them.

If desired, some of the pages of the book, as for instance every other page, can be removed to make room for the advertisements without having the book lose too much of its shape. But that is a minor matter of detail.

A very useful book can be arranged simply according to dates, one after the other, or according to subjects and dates, publications in which used, or different styles.

The important thing is to keep the advertisements where they can be easily referred to and studied. By this means one can see what advertisements or classes of advertisements have been most successful. This will help materially in the preparation of new advertisements.

By this method principles can be deduced and special rules obtained for the construction of advertisements to suit one's peculiar article, business or environments.

It will also be found that some efforts that were regarded the most hopefully, and with, perhaps, pardonable pride, were failures, while others, less counted upon, were more successful. — Buyers Aid.

BUYING AWAY FROM HOME.

Lindsay, Ont., Apr. 6.—The Board of Trade of Lindsay, which recently held its annual meeting elected a new set of officers who seem to be of the right stamp. The first topic discussed was that of "Buying at Home" a topic which should interest every grocer in Canada. The remark was made by one of the speakers that he knew of a certain hotelman in town who was in the habit of buying groceries in extra large quantities in Toronto. The grocers knew perfectly well that the citizens are in the habit of buying other lines of goods in Toronto at the departmental stores, but never dreamed that people were going out of town for their groceries. As there is no association here the grocers would do well to join hands with the Board of Trade and help combat the buying away from home evil,—one that not only ruins a grocer's business but everybody else's and consequently is a detriment to any town.

Oat Products Show Decline with Poor Demand

Consumption is Less With Arrival of Spring—Wheat Prices Easier, But Flour Remains Unchanged.

It appears that every attempt to boost the price of wheat, on unfavorable weather reports, or any other cause, fails, and as a natural consequence wheat is showing signs of weakness and the general feeling is that unless something unforeseen occurs the farmers who have been holding their wheat for more money will be disappointed. The flour market on the whole is uninteresting and dull, with so little change in prices that speculators are not tempted to buy. Farmers have their eyes on Patten but his move to bull the September wheat will not do much to accommodate those who want to sell in the near future.

NEW MILLING CONCERN.

Toronto, Apr. 7.—The incorporation of a $5,000,000 company under the name of Maple Leaf Milling Company, was announced on Saturday, and means the reorganization of the Maple Leaf Flour Mills Co. The company was known formerly as the Hedley Shaw Milling Co., with branches at St. Catharines and Kingston. Part of the proposed extension will be the erection of another mill at Port Colborne. Cawthra Mulock, who is connected with the new company, was not a member of the old. Other provisional directors are Hedley Shaw, Chas. W. Band, Chas. Wurtele, Jno. Carrick, S. H. Foster and C. S. Band.

ANOTHER OLD QUEBEC STORE.

Nathaniel Pettus in the year 1830, began in a small way a business at West Brome, Que., and a year later moved to Brome Corners, where he carried on business until 1851. His brother, J. C. Pettus, clerked for him for a number of years. In 1851 they became partners, built a store at Knowlton, and moved the business there. In 1879 the partnership was dissolved, J. C. Pettus continuing the business with his son, A. W. Pettus. The latter is now owner of the business. The illustration shows the store now occupied, which is over the same foundation as the one built in 1851. Nathaniel Pettus died in 1889, aged 83 years. His widow in 1894 erected to his memory a library building of neat design, that has been equipped with a library by residents of Knowlton, and vicinity. His widow still lives, and only recently resigned the presidency of The Knowlton Reading Club. J. C. Pettus, now nearly 90 years of age, finds pleasure in assisting his son in keeping the store in order.

Selling Sermonettes for Salesmen

DOESN'T this sound reasonable, Brother Grocer?

That Success spelled the other way around means, "Know the Goods."

"Know 'em and show 'em," said the Successful One.

"Right you are," says Busy Merchant, "yet I can't find the time to explain "the merits of the goods I buy to my "salespeople—too busy for that."

Who are the true business builders, Brother Grocer?

You are quite right—the man behind the counter, your counter, is the true salesman.

Retailing has now become a science, you know.

He who knows a thing best can sell it best.

But who's going to explain the merits of the flour you sell if you're too busy?

Who will explain to your sellers that price is only one of the many keys upon which you must play in order to win, and a minor key?

WE WILL, Brother Grocer—we who know good flour.

We who make FIVE ROSES—got that?

Why shouldn't we?

It's because we want to live up to our biggest opportunities that we are not content to merely sell good flour.

We want to help you sell it.

And so we have taken off our coats to lend a helping hand that you and your sellers of FIVE ROSES might pile higher and higher both the sales and the profits.

Therefore have we dug out from the treasury of our own experience, covering near a quarter-century of intimate contact with the retailer, the richest nuggets, the strongest selling points—

And we offer them freely, without selfishness, for the help of all those who need them—for all sellers of Good flour, for retailers and salesmen thereof—ay, and all ye clever writers of copy (?).

And if we use FIVE ROSES to point a floury moral, surely you will understand it is because we know no better flour, and you will forgive the writer for the sake of the lucre.

All of which signifies that in the CANADIAN GROCER next week, on this self-same page in red and black, there will begin a series of sermonettes on flour salesmanship in general and FIVE ROSES in particular. And to make them more acceptable we will arrange them as accurately as we can in their order of importance, and sugarcoat the pill with human interest, maybe.

So be advised, Brother Grocers and Business Builders all, take note.

Next week, read your GROCER.

Read the FIVE ROSES page.

Making Flowers a Profitable Retail Side Line

Methods of a Chatham Grocer in Working up a Good Trade—Buys From Florist on Commission — Display Advantages Derived From Flowers—Attention That Should be Paid Them.

Chatham, Ont., April 6.—A brilliant background of blossoms in many colors lends an added attractiveness to the bright, clean grocery store conducted by Wm. Anderson at 123 King St. West.

Though grocers rarely carry flowers and plants as a side line, Mr. Anderson has done so for several years past, and is well satisfied with the results. More important even than the financial returns, in Mr. Anderson's estimation, is the addition which the bright-hued flowers make to the general appearance of the store.

The flowers, of which Mr. Anderson carries a selection all the year round, are furnished by a local florist, whose regular place of business is located on the southern limits of the city, and hence a goodly distance from its business centre. Mr. Anderson is practically "down town" representative of the floral people, and since he took hold of this line has pushed the floral proposition with the same energy as he does the sale of groceries.

Though he carries a comprehensive stock throughout the entire year, this is added to largely on any occasions when flowers are seasonable. Easter is perhaps the most important of these occasions, and the week before Easter the display of floral beauty is something that nobody can pass by without at least one admiring look.

There is practically no competition in the floral line here with Mr. Anderson. Of the three greehouses in the city, all are quite a distance from King Street. One maintains an agency with a small floral display on a side street office, Mr. Anderson's being the only other "flower store" down town. A London concern a couple of years ago started an agency in Chatham, but this has been since discontinued.

Are Bought on Commission.

The flowers are taken on commission. Those that are not sold are returnable in good condition. The fact that there is no danger of being "loaded" with unsalable stock, as might be the case were the grocer to buy outright, compensates largely for the fact that the margin of profit is small.

The line is, of course, one which involves a great deal of work. The entire stock of potted plants must be watered regularly, a task which requires considerable care. Then, in winter, there is the danger of flowers being nipped by frost while being delivered. The work of arranging and rearranging the stock in the most attractive style is also an item to be considered.

An important feature in the handling of flowers is the addition which they make to the appearance of a store. Mr. Anderson has fully appreciated this from the outset, and his stock of flowers has always been given a prominent place in the window display. Practically every display is garnished with flowers, which furnish an attractive border or background to almost any line of groceries exhibited. In addition to the window itself, a sort of shelf, suspended about half way between floor and ceiling and running all the way across the back of the window, furnishes accommodation for a large share of the stock, and adds its quota to the appearance of the store. In the summer time small plants, such as pansies, are often ranged on the ledge or shelf outside the window.

Not only does the prominence thus given the flowers add to the general appearance of the store, but it is a material agency in helping their sale. Merchants who have handled this line generally admit that, to make flowers a success, they must be pushed well to the front.

What the Stock Consists of.

The major part of the regular stock comprises potted plants, which are of course in the zenith of their bloom. Some cut flowers are also kept in stock. In addition to the flowers stocked, orders are taken for plants of all kinds, as well as bulbs—in fact, the grocery will procure from the greenhouse and deliver to the customer anything that the florist has in stock. A florist's catalogue is kept in the store, for the assistance of patrons in making out their orders.

While full grown flowers in bloom seem to appeal most to the average purchaser, yet, in springtime, when gardens are being set out, the sale of small plants offers considerable possibilities. Patrons who might ordinarily content themselves with the purchase of a few packages of flower seeds will often consider it a better proposition to buy a few dozen small seedlings for purposes of transplanting, rather than risk the failure of their seeds.

The flower business is something which requires a great amount of care and attention, and is apt, in inexperienced or careless hands, to turn out practically a dead loss. Mr. Anderson, however, has from the start enjoyed a good sized and growing trade, while the presence of flowers in the windows draws more attention to them than the average grocery window usually receives—a circumstance which must be considered in gauging the returns.

THE NEWSPAPER AND THE MERCHANT.

Editor Canadian Grocer.—It is quite noticcable in many towns in Ontario, that rccently the local papers have been bemoaning the fact that the merchants do not support the newspapers with as much advertising as the said newspapers would wish for. Through their columns, and in some cases personally, the threat is made that city departmental store advertising will have to be resorted to.

Do the newspaper proprietors go about getting business in the right way?

Are their papers—or in other words, the goods they have for sale—of a superior quality? Do they employ an obliging staff? Do they employ clerks, editors, etc., that do their utmost to please the customer as the merchant does?

The clerk, or employe of a store must be obliging and courtcous to those who patronize the house with whom he is employed. This rctains the customers, never allowing a personal fceling to over-rule or interfere with anything political, social or ecclesiastical.

Can the publisher of a newspaper, whether it has competitors or not, allow the editor (or clerk) to antagonize, misrepresent, inaccurately report the very men who have been the chief support in paying the editor his salary? And why is it so oftcn done, principally because the merchant and the editor cannot see eye to eyc politically.

It is such things as enumerated that, in many instances, has caused the trade of many merchants to be diverted into other channels. Proprietors of such papers nced to look closer after their clerks who are breaking down their business when there is no necessity for it. The town of Barrie is no exception to this state of affairs.

SURPLUS OF GREEK CURRANTS.

By A. Donaldson Smith, Patras.

By a recent convention between the Greek Government and the Privileged Company it was decided to make a loan of $3,800,000 to the company, of which $2,316,000 was to be expended at once in reimbursing owners for the uprooting of their vines. It is intended to destroy enough vines to reduce the crop 25 per cent.

The convention also decided to raise the export duty 8 drachmas ($1.55) per 1,000 pounds, which would make the export duty equal to 46.67 drachmas ($9.01) per 1,000 Venetian pounds.

In this report the quantities are given in Venetian pounds; to arrivc at American pounds add 5 per cent.

The market price at the end of December for fairly good currants was 130 drachmas ($25.09) per 1,000 pounds. Retention warrants are down to 110.50 drachmas ($21.33) per 1,000 pounds. Adding 35 per cent. of this (the present retention tax in kind) brings the present export duty up to 38.67 drachmas ($7.46) per 1,000 pounds. The bill has passed the first reading of the house of representatives and will probably pass the second and third readings.

The reported movement of currants during the four months cnding December 10, 1909, was as follows:

Exported, 168,622,841 pounds.

Company's retention warrants, representing 35 per cent. export duty, in kind: Issued, 114,562,300 pounds; sold, 66,421,700 pounds; remainder, 48,140,600 pounds.

Company's warehouse, advances against mortgaged currants: Deposited, 66,324,166 pounds; released, 2,552,404 pounds; remainder, 63,771,762 pounds.

Resume: Exported, 168,622,841; absorbed for paymcnt of the retention duty of 35 per cent., 114,640,700 pounds; mortgaged to the Privileged Company, 63,771,762 pounds; total, 347,035,303 pounds. The total crop of 1909 is estimated at 380,000,000 pounds.

Fish—The period of quietness always expected immediately after Easter is on now, and for sometime everything in the fish line will be easy. On account of high meat prices, however, the trade is expecting to do a little more than usual. It also feels the influence of increasing population and wealth, and seems to be steadily improving. Prices are steady with no noted change. Fresh fish arrivals are numerous.

Green Fruits—There is no improvement in the apple situation. A great many are wasting and are carted away by scavengers. There is nothing that seems to have been so badly managed as our apple crop this year. The conditions should be well studied and the same trouble avoided in the future. Like most other troubles, every one has a remedy, but it is a matter too serious to be treated lightly. When thousands of barrels of good wholesome fruit are spoiling in front of hungry people who are complaining about high cost of living then something is wrong in our methods of doing business. Oranges are plentiful, but without any change in prices. Through the fact that so many frosted oranges reached the market, the orange trade received a black eye from which it will suffer for some time. It is being demonstrated every day that poor quality in any kind of food will immediately check consumption. Strawberries are beginning to move northward and instead of coming from Florida they are now coming from Louisiana. But when the price is quoted at 13c as compared with Florida berries at 60c one should not run away with the idea that they are that much cheaper. A look at the box will show the reason.

All kinds of vegetables, however, are constantly arriving to meet the demands of the city.

Want Changes in Fruit and Vegetable Duties

Winnipeg Wholesale Dealers Petition the Government to Have Duties Removed on Certain Fruits and Vegetables at Certain Seasons—Niagara Fruit Growers Ask for Careful Consideration Before Such a Course is Taken.

Winnipeg, April 6.—Wholesale fruit and vegetable dealers here are anxious to see changes in the tariff on certain fruits and vegetables at certain seasons of the year and have petitioned the Dominion Government to take action.

The petition reads as follows:—

"Sir,—Your petitioners represent the principal fruit and vegetable importing concerns in Western Canada.

"Little fruit is raised in Western Canada, and the western cities are dependent upon the United States for all the early fruit and vegetables. These come from as far south as Miami, Florida. During the several months of the year before it is possible to grow vegetables or fruits, a large quantity of both are imported; but the freight charges, coupled with the duty, place the consumption beyond the purse of the average householder, and these products become a luxury when they are really a necessity.

"Our desire is—and we believe it to be a reflex of that of the western country at large—that the duty be removed from these products at such times when they cannot possibly come into competition with home-grown articles.

"We believe that the adoption of the following schedule would be of distinct advantage, supplying the people of Western Canada with some of the necessities of life which the country, by reason of its geographical position, is not able to provide at those times.

What the Request is.

"Peaches, pears, plums and apricots on free list from January 1 to October 1.

"Cherries, on free list from January 1 to June 30.

"Grapes, on free list from December 1 to August 31.

"Tomatoes and green vegetable, cabbage, cucumbers, celery, asparagus, rhubarb, green beans, cauliflower, on free list from Deeember 1 to July 31.

"Cantaloupes and watermelons, on free list from October 31 to August 31.

"Strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, currants, gooseberries, on free list from Sept. 30 to June 15.

"At the present time duty is charged us on all crates and packages containing celery, cabbage and such vegetables, and as there are necessary and essential to the transportation of such goods, we do not believe that duty should be charged.

"We believe that peanuts should be on the free list. They cannot be produced in Canada, and the only peanuts suitable and demanded by the trade in this country are those shipped from the United States. We do not know of any other point of production that will produce peanuts that would be accepted and handled by the dealers in Canada.

"Over 90 per cent of the cranberries used in the Dominion of Canada are produced in the United States, principally in New Jersey, Massachussetts and Wisconsin. The present duty on cranberries is 25 per cent. On the average price of cranberries we are obliged to pay approximately $325 to $350 per car, which we believe is entirely out of reason. It is our idea that the duty on cranberries should be arranged on a barrel basis or taken off entirely.

"This matter is respectively brought to your attention at the present time in view of the likelihood of some reciprocal arrangement being made with the United States, and the adoption of this schedule, it occurs to us, would be of distinct advantage to Western Canada, where the cost of living is relatively high.

"That this petition may be considered is the earnest prayer of the subscribers."

What Ontario Men Say.

St. Catharines, Ont., Apr. 7.—The Niagara Peninsula Fruit Growers' Association held a meeting here to discuss the petition sent to the Government by Winnipeg wholesale fruiterers regarding the changes in duties on certain fruits at certain seasons of the years. The following resolution was adopted and forwarded to the Minister of Customs:—

Moved by John Scott and George X. Walker, the Niagara Peninsula Fruit Growers' Association beg to state that during the past two or three years efforts have been put forth to place in the western markets large supplies of Canadian-grown fruit, with considerable satisfaction to consumers, and we believe that any change in the present rate of customs will result in serious injury to what promises to be a very large trade in the near future. We therefore humbly pray that no change be made in the existing duties in fruit at the present time until all the parties interested may be consulted.

O. H. Johnson, general merchant, Calgary, Alta., has moved into the building recently occupied by Rodell Bros. & Lake, who have sold their stock, by a special sale and turned over the balance to Mr. Johnson.

Will Canada Buy her Rice from British Guiana?

This is a Prediction Made by Grocer Representative Now in South America—Possibilities of Demarara—The Present Markets Demand Yellow Colored Variety.

By D. Williams.

Georgetown, British Guiana, Apr. 4.—The growing of ricc in Demerara, British Guiana, is rapidly assuming large proportions and is becoming a prosper- and profitable industry. It is only a few ycars sincc it was introduced to any great extent in the colony, but the emigration of East India laborers to the country has created a demand for the article and this, combined with the fitness of thc soil and climatic conditions, has given it a stimulus until to-day it is the second great export of Georgetown, thc seaport and capital of British Guiana. The methods of cultivation arc, generally speaking, crude, the work nearly all being done by hand.

The seed for the rice crop is sown about the first of April in patches of land not covered by water—nurserys they are called. In these the rice is sown very thick and is allowed to grow to a height of about six inches before it is transplanted in the fields partially covered by watcr. There it grows rapidly with littlc attention until it is ripe.

When ready to harvest it is cut with the old fashioned sickle or reaping hook and bound into sheaves similar to grain in Canada. It is left in the field till ready to be takcn to the threshing floor. There it is threshed, the crude rice, or 'pady' as it is called, being beaten out by hand as was donc generations ago. Then it is bagged and convcyed to the local buyer or mill. The pady or crude rice resembles oats having a hull upon it that does not come off in threshing.

A modern rice mill, of which there are several in Demerara, is a most interesting cstablishment. One we visited, the largest in Georgetown, is a splendidly equipped mill fitted with the most up-to-date machinery

The bags containing thc pady are emptied into a large hopper on the ground floor. It is then carried by an elevator to the upper story and fed into round steel tanks of about forty to fifty bags capacity. Water is let into the tanks and steam turned on heating the mass to about 150 degrees fahrenheit. Here it remains about ten or twelve hours when the tanks are opened at thc bottom. After the water is drawn off, the half cooked rice is run through dryers until all the moisture has evaporated. From the dryers it is carried to the first sheller which takes off the outer shell or husk; then it passes through a cleaner or winding machine which scparates the hull or chaff from the kernel, the former being carried to the furnace room and is used for fucl

The rice passes on by carriers to the polishing machines where the second covering is removed after which it is carried down shutes and scattered upon a spacious stone floor to air and cool.

It is then bagged and is ready for shipment. The price paid for pady is about $1 per hundred pounds. This will produce from sixty to scvcnty pounds of rice. The mill owned by Weiting & Richter has a capacity of 300 bags of rice per day, each bag containing 175 pounds.

Turn Out Yellow Colored Rice.

Another mill we visitcd owned by a London concern uses a different process. Hcre the pady is steamcd in one large tank and after drying is run through onc hullcr which finishes the process and the rice is carried down shutes into bags ready for shipment. In both those mills the rice turned out is of a yellow color, not the whitc polished kind used in Canada.

The reason of this is not that they cannot make thc white variety but the demand in the West Indics is almost entircly for the colorcd kind.

It must be rcmembercd that a large part of the population of Demerara and Trinidad is Egst Indian coolies. Thosc people do not want the white rice but prefer the other which, it is claimed, is morc nutritious and healthful. Thc time, however, is not far distant when if the industry expands, as it is very likely to do, the rice growers and mill men will be compclled to look for other markets and their eyes are now being turned toward Canada to see what are thc possibilities of finding an outlet there for their surplus products.

Considering the vast possibilities of Demcrara and the fitncss of thc soil of large sections of the country, there seems little reason to doubt that, with improved cultivation, modern machinery and the introduction of capital, it will before many years be thc great source of the rice supply of Canada.

There are many good reasons why your refrigerator should be an ARCTIC.

These reasons have to do with the profits you make from butter, eggs and other perishables, and the degree with which you are able to satisfy your customers.

Traveling Salesmen!
Ever hear of Hugh Chalmers?

He is the man, who, at the age of 30, was so good a salesman that his firm paid him $75,000 a year.

Anything such a man has to say about salesmanship certainly can be read with entertainment and profit by every salesman in Canada.

Not long ago, Mr. Chalmers gave two public addresses concerning salesmanship. We are printing these two addresses in a neat pocket-size pamphlet and want to send a copy of it free to every salesman in Canada.

No strings on this.

The Pamphlet is FREE to every salesman.

All you need do is to write us stating your name, your private address and the name of the house you represent.

We want these particulars simply by way of proof that you are a traveling salesman because we charge non-salesmen 50c. a copy for the pamphlet—and it's well worth it, too! But, remember, it is perfectly FREE to traveling salesmen.

Better write for YOUR copy now.

One Aim In Life

The Packers of the "Thistle" Brand of Fish aim only to produce the best there is in Canned Fish.

Canned Where Caught

The "Thistle" Brand of Canned Haddies, Kippered Herring, and Herring and Tomato Sauce, are canned right where they are caught, at the water side. How better could you preserve the natural richness and delicate flavor of the fish? IMPOSSIBLE.

But that is not all, because Captain Austin has the unequalled skill of a life-time of experience. THERE IS NO DIRT OR SLIME—NO UNCLEANLINESS TO BE FOUND IN THE "THISTLE" BRAND. The reputation of the foremost fish-curer in the country is at stake under the label of the "Thistle" Brand.

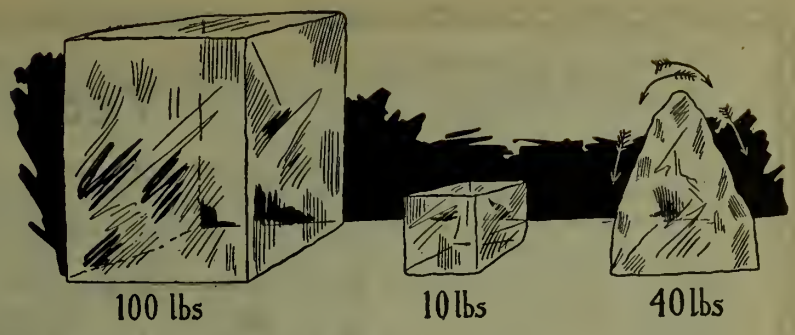
The Story of a Cake of Ice



PUT a hundred pound cake of ice in an ordinary refrigerator—see how long it takes to melt down to ten pounds, then notice its shape. Put a hundred pound cake in a McCray Refrigerator for the same length of time. You'll have about forty pounds left and it will be pointed instead of square. This is because the air in a McCray Refrigerator constantly circulates. The warmer air in the refrigerator strikes the top of the cake first, and as it descends becoming cooler, it does less melting. The circulation of cold air in McCray Refrigerators is as real as though caused by an electric fan. In ordinary refrigerators the air lies stagnant around the ice instead of circulating. This and other secrets of successful refrigeration are explained in our "Catalog No. 66." Send us your name on a postal card. We'll send you "Catalog No. 66," FREE.

ECONOMY

A device is economical if

It adds cleanliness,
It is a convenience,
It makes labor lighter
It makes labor more efficient
It reduces the labor item,
It saves time,
It adds safety,
It adds neatness,
It helps the appearance.

Westerner's Ideas of What Fake Advertising Is

Address Given Before Retail Merchants' Association at Winnipeg—Recognized Legitimate Advertising Channels and Those That are Doubtful — Newspaper, Circular, Program, and Hotel Register Mediums Considered.

By W. J. Simpson.

The subject selected for me this evening is "Protection of Retail Merchants' Organizations" and at the first glance it would seem to be one that the average merchant could discuss with a great deal of satisfaction particularly if he were allowed to relieve his feelings by saying in plain words what he actually thinks of the various fake propositions that are presented to him from time to time.

But when the subject is more closely looked into it is somewhat difficult to draw a distinct line between what is considered "legitimate" advertising and what might be termed "fake."

In order, therefore, to make a division between the legitimate or remunerative advertising and the class we have designated as fake advertising I shall spend a few minutes in outlining the recognized forms of good advertising.

In the first place let me point out to you that advertising in the broad sense of the term is summed up in the one word "Information," and that any form of publicity that does not convey the desired information to the prospective purchaser is sure to prove a financial loss. I know of no better advice to offer to the writer of advertising copy than to direct him to apply the "information" test to his manuscript before he sends it to his medium of publicity and ask him to remember that all copy is improved by "dispensing with the unnecessary and enlarging upon the essential."

Advertising generally may be divided into two classes—Specific advertising and general publicity.

Specific advertising is the form which announces that a certain article will be sold at a certain time or place for a certain price. This form of advertising is used by the departmental stores with great success as their announcements of to-day specify the goods that they will sell to-morrow and the attention of the public is focussed on comparatively few articles at a stated time.

Specific Advertising also includes all proprietary articles sold at a recognized price by many dealers and every merchant uses this form of advertising when he announces the sale of any particular article of merchandise contained in his stock.

It is quite evident, therefore, that any announcement that can be classed as Specific Advertising cannot be termed "fake," provided, of course, that the merchant is assured that the medium of publicity adopted will reach the class of customers whom he hopes to directly interest.

The other form of advertising—General Publicity—is therefore the one that we must look into to discover what we have already designated as fake.

To enumerate all the various methods of advertising that come under this heading would exhaust not one but several evenings; our ablest commercial writers have written volumes on this subject so we must only glance hastily at the most prominent or most used examples.

Indirect General Advertising.

We will first eliminate all the good advertising features that the successful merchant adopts but pays for indirectly such as: attractive show windows, clean and bright store premises, stock invitingly displayed, courteous and obliging salespeople, prompt delivery and all the individual attentions that favorably impress the customer and unconsciously make him a walking advertisement for the store.

We must also eliminate all kinds of advertising which the merchant adopts from personal choice or without solicitation from outside sources such as: circular letters, dodgers, store signs, or temporary painted signs used for show cards, etc., or any other form of publicity which he originates on his own initiative.

Every retail merchant finds it necessary to pay for general publicity at certain seasons of the year without being too specific in his announcements. For instance, the dry goods man advises the public that the new spring goods have arrived; the milliner announces that the display of Easter styles is at its height; the hardwareman has everything for a building; the grocer offers seasonable food products; the tailor and haberdasher are proud of their up-to-date stocks and so on.

Announcements of this character are therefore considered as "good business" and when properly placed should be productive of good financial results.

It is on this question of proper placing that a great variety of opinion exists.

Favor to the Newspaper.

The daily newspaper columns are favored by the great majority of merchants; the billboard receive due attention by many in specific lines of trade; the weekly and society papers are liberally patronized and the results obtained from these mediums are such as place them outside the boundary of the opprobrious term of "fake."

To summarize: I have endeavored to show that specific advertising; store service advertising; personal appeal advertising; newspaper, periodical and billboard advertising are all recognized without doubt as legitimate forms that are more or less remunerative to the retail merchant.

Out of the forms of so-called publicity that are left, we must look for those that may come under the term "fake," and this presents a problem of no little difficulty that is increased by the fact that we have admitted that all forms of publicity have some value be it much or little.

I therefore would measure the situation by this rule:

"That when the cost of any form of publicity is such as to preclude any possibility of adequate returns that we are justified in refusing to entertain it."

Now this does not always mean that the proposition is fake because mediums which one man may ridicule may have proved profitable to his neighbor.

I take it, however, that the forms we are endeavoring to denounce are those that have some semblance of a "hold-up" in connection with them.

We are all familiar with the Syndicate who come here periodically to exploit the hotels and merchants for their own pecuniary benefit.

We have all been approached by the solicitor projecting a hotel register, inkstand, writing table or what not, and have been very plainly told that unless we subscribe (I wont say advertise) to his proposition that the hotel keeper will immediately withdraw his patronage.

Therefore I say that any advertising that is not content to solicit business on the basis of "Value for the money," but that threatens the customer or uses ulterior motives can very properly be classified as "fake."

Program Publicity.

We have also to deal with what I might term "donation advertising" which includes the various programs, etc., of societies who adopt this means of raising money to finance their concerts or day of sports or some special attraction they are promoting.

This question must be left to the individual merchant to decide because we cannot legislate to prevent these appeals and if the merchant is liable to lose more by a refusal than the expense of accepting he cannot afford to give a refusal, but I think the amount expended should properly be charged to donation account.

The solution of protection against these insinuating forms of fake advertising to my mind is—"Don't patronize them."

If for personal reasons you do not think it wise to take the onus of refusal on your own shoulders place it on the shoulders of the Retail Merchants' Association.

I suggest that to make this a practical method that a committee be appointed to pass judgment on all forms of advertising submitted to this association and when a doubtful proposition is submitted to any member of the association he can refer the solicitor to our committee for its approval.

A prompt notification by the merchant will place the committee on guard and in a general way I should say that a protest from any of our members ought to be almost enough to warrant the committee in withholding their approval.

The title of my subject does not allow me to discuss the endless appeals made to the merchant by charitable institutions.

Soliciting for Charity.

Charities and societies which often cause the same feelings of annoyance as are caused by the fake advertising solicitor should be included in the instructions given to your committee who propose to deal with this subject.

I hope that your committee will find ways and means to at least limit our losses that are due to the flotation of all schemes of fake advertising.

Protection of the Profits of the Retail Grocer

Ex-President of the London Retail Grocers' Association Gives His Ideas on this Question—Does Not Believe There are Uncontrollable Expenditures—Thinks the Retailer has Himself to Blame for not Obtaining Fair Profits.

By E. J. Ryan.

In a recent issue of The Grocer there was an article by a Hamilton retail grocer, headed "The Retailer's Profit," in which he paints a dark picture of the retail grocery business as it is to-day.

I certainly do not agree with him on many points. Let us consider his first point which he terms, "uncontrollable expenditure," such as telephones, rapid delivery, and higher wages to poorer help.

The telephone is the best and cheapest investment any retail grocer ever put in his store. You can take more orders over the phone in one hour than any clerk can do in ten hours' soliciting, and with just as good results. If Mrs. Jones, who is a customer of yours, and who has no phone, comes to your store every week with her order, you get only that one order during the week. The things she has forgotten and wants before she comes again, she buys from the nearest grocer. If she had a phone you would get possibly three or four orders during the week instead of one. I would like to see your correspondent throw out his phone and see how he would prosper. He would probably lose every customer who has a phone in her home. How would he buy from the wholesale houses with which he does business? It would take four times as long to personally order his fruits, groceries, spices, etc., and while he was out in all probability some customer would come in who was very anxious to see him. Therefore, I think the telephone is one of the cheapest and best investments any retail grocer can have.

Rapid delivery does not cost any more than it did twenty years ago, except perhaps the cost of horses and wagons, but one does not have to buy them every year. We find it a very convenient and effective way to send one of the clerks with any parcel that is wanted in a hurry and send the remainder of the order later. As most of the clerks have bicycles they can do this errand much faster than a horse, and without any extra expense.

Makes Soap Profitable.

Wages are higher than they were 20 years ago not only in the grocery business but in all other retail lines. Rents have increased some, also taxes, but not so much as to dread stock-taking time.

The retail merchant who sells soap at six bars for 25c that costs $3.85 per hundred (a gross profit of about 8½ per cent.), has himself to blame; he can by degrees put that soap out of his store and sell some other make on which he gets more profit. We make $1.25 per box on our 5-cent bars of soap. I think any merchant can do the same if he has the backbone to say, "No, we cannot sell six bars for a quarter."

The other article to which your correspondent refers is canned beans which cost 50c per dozen, and which he retails at 5c per tin. We sell the same article for 6c per tin or 20 per cent. more than the Hamilton grocer. As soon as the canner advanced the prices we advanced ours and bought another line which we could sell at 5c and make 25 per cent. profit.

I think any retailer can do the same thing. There is no reason why he cannot act the same as he says Mr. Vanderbilt does with the public. You get no thanks if you give your goods away. Get your fair profit. If you cannot get it on one line of goods, substitute another that is as good or perhaps better. Talk quality. Give your customer good service. Join the Retail Grocers' Association, if you have one in your town; if not, talk it over with some of your fellow grocers, and organize one so that you can talk over trade matters together. You will be surprised at the results. The fellow you thought was a cutter and everything else that was bad, will be glad to meet you and talk over things together and arrange to sell goods at a profit instead of at a loss.

Forget to Figure Cost.

You will find that new beginners sometimes sell goods low because they never figure on the expense of doing business until they get acquainted with other retailers and talk over trade matters together. They soon see their mistake and are only too anxious to sell goods at a profit.

There is no man in business for his health, and the sooner he realizes that, the better for himself. I would not suggest conferences with manufacturers, but it might be a good thing to have your wholesalers come to the meetings of the retail association and give the members their views on any subject of interest to the trade. I know our members get valuable information at our annual banquet from the wholesale men who respond to that toast. It could be done at the grocer's meetings just the same.

As to the manufacturer, why when he advances his goods, the retailer should dolikewise. For instance, biscuit manufacturers advanced the price of biscuits one and one-half cent a pound about a year ago. We called a meeting of our association and advanced all 18c lines to 20c, all 10c lines to 12½c and so on. We heard some complaints but we put them where they belonged—to the manufacturer. We had a little article in our local papers about the advance in biscuits, consequently after a short time we heard no more complaints. We must stand up for our rights.

The grocers of London have cut out all goods costing one dollar per dozen that is retailed for ten cents. We must buy them for at least 95c per dozen. If we cannot and have to stock the line, why we retail at 12½c.

USING COMBINATION COUNTERS.

There are a number of merchants who are using a modern idea to promote sales of small articles by means of the combination method. For instance they advertise two, three, four, etc., of certain goods which sell for 25c. One counter or table is devoted to articles any two of which sell for 25c, while any 3 articles on another table sell for the same price and so on. In the case of a country general store as many as 12 small articles can sometimes be arranged to sell for the shilling. Show cards announcing this fact are used and care is always taken by the retailer to see that he is making his fair profit when grouping. No sales are made from these tables for less than 25 cents. It is being used frequently to sell off surplus stocks of Christmas toys and souvenirs handled by most country general stores.

Startling Losses Due to Overweight in Groceries

The Dollars and Cents That Steal Away Because Grocers do Not Figure on What a Little Extra Weight Means — Careless Clerks Aid in Increasing the Loss — A List of Articles on Which Leakages are Likely to Occur.

By H. D. McMullen.

Few men in the grocery business have ever stopped to figure out what the giving of even a slight overweight by each clerk to each customer amounts to at the end of a year. The figures astonished even the men who furnished the data for this article.

Beginning with the supposition that a ½ ounce is the average quantity of overweight given in each article and that half the clerks do not give any overweight, the other half losing ½ ounce on each sale, one can strike a fair average, which was conceded to be low by two of Montreal's large retailers.

Sugar is, of course, the first article to be considered. In large centres a prosperous grocer will find each of his clerks to average forty sales of sugar in a day.

The ½ ounce loss for each makes the total 20 ounces per day.

In a year of 313 business days this means 390 pounds of sugar wasted by one clerk, or at the present price of sugar ($5.10), $19.89. Supposing there are six clerks in the store, and three lose absolutely nothing the other three as above stated, the total amount of loss to the store is $59.67 for the year.

Tea is perhaps, second in the list. It will average close to 40c. per lb. Following the above method of estimating, with this difference, that only twenty customers are served per clerk in a day, it is found that ten ounces per day for a year amounts to about $78.00. That equals $234 for the three clerks.

Coffee, by following the same process of figuring, only using a 30c grade as the average, and twenty customers per clerk as in tea causes a loss of $58.50 for the one and $175.50 for the three clerks.

Look Small Separated.

These figures are not high for a store in the large centres; in fact the percentage of loss in individual cases, is higher than that used here as an example. In their simple form as individual wastes they seem unimportant, but the total puts a different light on the situation.

To give individual attention to every article sold by weight in a grocery would be beyond the space allotted, but a summary of some of the every day sales in certain lines will give a fair idea of the whole.

The following list averages ten sales per day per clerk, and at an average price of about 15c per lb. It is: currants, prunes, raisins, apricots, rice, nuts of all kinds, spices, lard, butter, bacon, cheese, oatmeal, fish, poultry and vegetables.

There are many others but too much detail is unnecessary. The total loss by waste of these articles for a year amounts, at the foregoing figures, to $219.38 per clerk, a somewhat large

In summing up all the items the total leakage, is found to be as follows:

Three clerks waste nothing per annum.

Three clerks waste:

Sugar	$ 59.67
Tea	234.00
Coffee	175.50
Group of items	658.14
	$1,127.31

Thus it will be seen that, with a total of $1,127.31 each clerk is averaged as responsible for $187.55, or 1-6 the total amount. This is no slight loss to any grocer, however his business may be prospering.

Other Chances for Leakages.

Three additional items should not be omitted. They are, wrapping paper, paper bags and string.

A good wrapping paper costs 3½c per lb. and it is the experience of men long in the trade, that a clerk will waste at least one pound a day. This means about $10.92 per year.

A 30 lb. paper bag is worth about one cent while the 50 and 100 lb. bags average 2½ cents. Seven cents per day is a moderate estimate of the waste of each clerk. This adds $21.84 to our list.

Twine averages 20c per lb. Broken pieces, long ends left on packages and generally careless handling of such a cheap and constantly used article means a daily loss of about ½ lb. per clerk in a big store. In other words, $31.20 per year. Multiplying each of these amounts by three, for the three wasteful clerks the totals are:

Paper	$ 32.76
Bags	65.52
Twine	93.60
Total	$ 191.88

Adding to this the $1,127.31 already estimated the total is $1,319.19 or $219.86 for each of the six clerks.

Why are Salaries Small?

In other words, a firm could almost afford to pay a clerk who did not waste anything, one third more salary. It is true enough that clerks in grocery stores are not as highly paid as in some other lines of business, but there are reasons in this connection. The above should be well thought over.

A little extra care at the scales and in wrapping and tying parcels will soon show up, and the better the profits of the firm, the better the salaries employers can afford to pay, and will pay, to the men who use them right.

"Do as you would be done by," is an old, but a good motto to follow.

The small town grocer will of course, have pretty close to the same percentage of loss as his city cousin, but the amount will be in proportion to the size of the business.

It is well worth the time of any up-to-date grocer to look further into this matter and do some figuring for himself. If he keeps his eyes open there will be plenty of examples of the waste indicated in this article.

Things That Shouldn't Be

Live, Modern Grocers Never Appear Indolent Around a Store to Invite the Camping of 'Old Fogies' on the Counters. This is Too Frequent in Country Establishments and is Often Observed Even in City Stores.

Interior Arrangement on the Scientific Plan

The Fixtures and Architecture of a New Store With Special Consideration for Sanitary Conditions, Quick Service and Attractiveness—Warehouse and Cellar Construction in Harmony With the Remainder—Deliverying Done From the Rear.

London, Ont., April 14.—In building and furnishing their new store at 250 Dundas St., T. A. Rowat & Co. made special provision for systematic retailing on the scientific plan.

A first glance at the photograph reproduced here indicates cleanliness, neatness, good accommodation and conveniences for rapid and adequate service. In planning the store special attention was given to system in arranging the interior, not only of the store proper, but of the warehouse, basement and other storage rooms.

The store is fitted with counters of birch-wood and with modern bin fixtures as a sanitary protection to stock. These bins are dust-proof and always appear filled. In the top row are kept such goods as rice, tapioca, dried fruits, cereals, icing sugar, etc., and in the bottom row there are about 18 large bins for teas and coffees, while the spice drawers run along the middle. These fixtures are faced with bevel plate glass fronts and are ball bearing.

The sugars, oatmeal, cornmeal, rolled wheat, and other cereals are kept in large bins underneath the counters at the rear of the store where all orders are made up for deliverv.

On one side to the front in an attractive show-case are kept samples of all bottled goods and of confectionery. The case is fitted with sliding doors to promote of easy access. Next to this are package goods and cereals.

The biscuit department—and about 125 different kinds of biscuits are handled—is situated to the right of the entrance and to the front. On the shelving following are canned fruits, vegetables and fish.

System in the Cellar.

In the warehouse at the rear are carried all heavy case goods. In the cellar which runs the complete length of the store is a special vegetable department at the back, into which potatoes are slid so that they do not have to be carried through the store.

The front portion of the cellar is stored with cheese and imported bottled goods.

The second and third floors are used as stock rooms where all broken cases and light goods are stored.

The delivering and receiving of goods is all done from the rear.

The interior fixtures include one of the latest electric coffee grinders and a meat-cutting machine. Two telephones are used in the store and the order business over the phone is large.

The T. A. Rowat & Co. business was established about 25 years ago. The firm aims to get the high-class trade making a specialty of teas and coffees and has another store in London somewhat similarly fitted to the one descrcribed.

IN CANNERS' MERGER.

Two more canning concerns have joined the recent merger of Dominion Canners, Ltd., according to latest reports. They are the Burlington Canning Co., Burlington, Ont., and the Farmers Canning Co., Bloomfield, Ont.

TRADE NOTES.

Charles S. Philips, a St. John, N. B., retail grocer, was fined $2 last week, in the police court because one of his clerks allowed a horse attached to a delivery wagon to stand on the sidewalk. Mr. Philips claimed that the police discriminated against him.

The store of Demers Bros., St. Antoine and Green Ave., Montreal, was broken into Monday night. The cash register was opened and the burglars had done up a bundle of goods ready for removal, when the police arrived. The two boys captured were but 15 and 18 years old respectively.

FUTURE BUTTER MARKET.

From present appearances there will be no serious declines in butter prices this year.

This may be attributed to many causes, among which are exportations of cream from the borderland to the United States, due to the lowering of the duty last year, and the immense armies of settlers that are continually coming in from the Old Country and from the United States. These people have all to be fed and they will not materially assist, this year at least, in the production of butter.

The demand for good butter is always good and if the quality improves prices are more than likely to hold firmer than a year ago.

SELL BRAZIL NUTS NOW.

New Brazil nuts are coming on the market and, of course, are at their best for eating purposes.

In past years grocers have not attempted to sell Brazils until the autumn, and by that time the spring nuts have become somewhat stale. They have just now a good talking point in selling. Brazils when they are fresh and good to eat.

There is considerable nourishment in nuts and this is another assistance to grocers in the advertising and displaying of them, as well as being another good talking point. The same applies, of course, to all kinds of nuts, which should be sold just as well now as later in the year.

PEDDLERS BECOMING AGGRESSIVE.

The peddlers of Toronto are showing a good example to grocers in Canadian towns and cities. They are uniting to offset legislation, which they claim is unfair to them.

The "unfairness" of this legislation will, of course, be questioned by retail grocers, who have to pay heavy taxes—usually much more than a peddler with two or three assistants—in order to do business at all.

Retail grocers are necessities. Peddlers are not. They simply go from house to house and sell a few goods on which they make big profits, and the housewife has eventually to go to the store for the remainder of her household necessities.

A license fee of $10 on each peddler and assistant—never more than $30 a year—is nothing compared with the high rents and taxes which a Toronto grocer has to pay to do business, even if both begin with the same capital.

Who then contributes more to the coffers of the municipality in comparison to the benefits they receive? It is certainly not the peddler.

If merchants who are losing from unfair encroachments of competitors do not look after their own interests, it is safe to say that no city council will. It is, therefore, up to the grocers in all parts of the country to keep a watchful eye on the peddler.

WHERE THE PROFITS GO.

Losses through the giving of overweight by grocers must aggregate up into the thousands every year in Canada.

It may be assumed that every merchant who has his share of customers, but who eventually fails, is obliged to give up his business on account of the small leaks in the store—and one of these leaks is giving over-weight.

The attention of the trade is called to an article appearing elsewhere in this issue, showing to what extent the giving of a slight extra-weight in bulk goods will amount to during a year in a large business. The figures were compiled from actual statements of a retail grocery firm and are startling in their import.

They go to demonstrate the importance that should be attached to correct weighing in order that this leak be eliminated. Merchants should take a dollars-and-cents view of the situation and apply the proper remedy. While at the time the giving of an extra half-ounce may appear a mere drop in the bucket, it must be remembered that that half-ounce on every order every day in the year is going to eat up profits rapidly.

Scientific methods in weighing is the solution.

DATE OF THE SPRING NUMBER.

Readers of The Canadian Grocer will be interested in knowing that our big Spring Number will be issued on May 27.

From the fact that this number deals particularly with the Science of Retailing, it will be the best and most valuable from a practical standpoint that will ever have been presented to the trade in Canada.

It will deal with practically every phase of modern retailing and will warrant the most careful attention of every merchant in the Dominion.

MUST PROVE FRAUDULENT SYSTEM.

Matters of law relating to substitution are particularly interesting to the trade at the present time. In dismissing the action of Bovril, Ltd., v. Gittus, in the Superior Court at Montreal recently, the presiding judge said: "Injunction cannot be granted when one solitary offence has been committed. Companies cannot attack hotel and restaurant keepers on account of such cases. They must prove a fraudulent system, otherwise the remedy would be worse than the evil."

TO RAISE QUALITY OF BUTTER.

The Grocer has long contended that to improve the butter and egg business from the standpoints of all concerned, there must be an educational campaign at the scource of the trouble.

For years farmers have been sending stale eggs to market along with good eggs. Some have been turning out poor butter and merchants have been accepting it, paying the same prices as for good butter; all of which tends to demoralize the egg and butter situation.

It has just been announced that Dairy Commissioner J. A. Ruddick is instituting an educational campaign among the makers of butter, having for its object the improvement of the creamery industry in Canada. It is to consist of a series of experiments at creameries and at the farms.

Mr. Ruddick is a strong believer in practical demonstration. This will be observed from his efforts in connection with the cool-curing of cheese, which has done so much for the cheese industry.

There are defects in the production of butter, and if these defects can be removed or even partially removed, it will aid Canada in regaining her export butter trade, which has fallen off during recent years.

While we produce just as much butter as we ever did, if we better the quality so that the export demand will be enhanced, we can easily increase the output, because Canada is by nature an agricultural and dairying country.

The dairy commissioner is working along correct lines when he seeks to place the butter business on a better plane by education at the points of manufacture.

CONSIDERATION FOR TRAVELERS.

While it is admitted by men who know that old methods of merchandizing are rapidly being supplanted by more up-to-date methods, would it not be in order to suggest some improvements which concern the traveler in his daily duties?

Waste of time is waste of money, and if any person with a mathematical head should figure out in cash value all the time which is lost by travelers waiting in stores to catch the attention of the buyers, it would likely run up into millions.

Travelers never expect to get the attention paid to customers, but when the buyer gets busy cleaning up just at the time the drummer opens the door, and keeps busy doing what he would not have done at all had the traveler not appeared, then there is something that should be eliminated.

He is supposed to call; the merchants look for him, and he is entitled to prompt attention so as not to waste his time. Very often a train is missed and a whole day is lost through the thoughtlessness of the merchant. This carelessness is keenly felt by all travelers, and now since so much is being done to improve and raise the standard of mercantiling this should be an opportune time to call the attention of the merchants to this matter about which almost all the travelers have just cause to complain.

The lot of the traveler is not an easy one at all times and through an improvement in the direction of giving them a more cheerful reception and more prompt attention, the road would be made much easier to travel.

UPROOTING CURRANT VINES.

As readers already know, the report that the Greeks are uprooting currant vines in Greece, is true. This is being done with a view to reducing the crop so as to keep up the prices. In fact, it is intended to destroy enough currant vines to reduce the crop 25 per cent.

This is certainly a poor method of extending an industry and is probably unique in history. Most countries pride themselves in the large size of any industry and seek to develop it further by finding new markets in other parts of the world.

Why should not the currant exporters of Greece do the same? By a systematic and aggressive advertising campaign they could easily extend the consumption of currants even in the present large consuming countries.

If the dealer in interested in currants and knows their food value and the uses to which they can be put, how to handle them to the best advantage, etc., it is evident that he will take a greater interest in their sales.

At the present time currant growers are being reimbursed to the extent of almost two and a half millions of dollors by the Chartered Company, through the Greek Government, on account of the uprooting of vines.

If this sum were utilized in educating the dealers and consumer, as to the value of currants, very soon there would be more currants used and growers would not be obliged to submit to a retrogressive measure to maintain fair prices for their product in order to perpetuate the industry.

THE BENCH ENDORSES VIEWS OF THE CANADIAN GROCER.

His Lordship, Justice Magee says it is illegal for a commercial traveler to accept a secret rebate. The Secret Commissions Act makes no distinction between receiving and giving a secret commission.

Justice Magee says: "If you sent your servant to market to buy a horse and there he meets with a man who offers him a horse at $150 and says, 'If you will buy this horse at $150 I will give you $10 of it to yourself; and you need not have any compunction about it, because I would not let your master have it for less than $150.' And your servant gets it for $150 and puts the $10 in his pocket, you can recover that $10 from your servant. It is your money, not his, because it was made out of the transaction which he was carrying on with some person else for you; now, that is clear law. So, a commercial travler sent out by a house here in Canada to buy goods for that house in the States, and he may be offered a commission by a person in respect to the goods he buys. When he comes back to Canada, if the transaction ever becomes known, he is liable to pay over that money to his employers. He has no right to be paid at both ends, unless it is known. This question of double commissions has for a long time past been quite too common, and has been permeating to a large extent the commercial life of the country. So much is that the case that last year the Dominion Government passed an act making it a criminal offence to take a double commission."

Let us see whether the other half of the act is not just as binding on the giver of the secret rebate as it is on the receiver. Clause (b) reads as follows: "Being an agent, corruptly gives or agrees to give or offers any gift or consideration to any agent as an inducement or reward or consideration to such agent for doing or forbearing to do, or for having after the passing of this Act done or forborne to do, any act relating to his principal's affairs or business, or for showing or forbearing to show favor or disfavor to any person with relation to his principal's affairs or business."

It must be evident from the above that the object of the law is to prevent the seller from giving a secret commission. So that the traveler who gives a secret rebate or other consideration is clearly violating the act.

So far as the liability of the merchant who accepts the secret rebate is concerned, clause (d) covers that. It reads: "Every person who is a party or knowingly privy to any offence under this act shall be guilty of such offence and shall be liable upon conviction to punishment hereinbefore provided for by this section."

So that a merchant who accepts a secret commission or consideration is guilty under the provisions of the act and liable to the penalties it imposes.

The Canadian Grocer is pleased to know that its position has been so fully endorsed by such an eminent authority as Justice Magee. We are especially pleased because it tends toward honesty in business and it should, therefore, be hailed with pleasure by every honest merchant in Canada.

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

St. John Grocers' Method of Getting Fresh Eggs—Guelph Clerks Want Summer Half-holiday—Retailer in Vancouver Discusses Grocers' Profits on Condensed Milk—A Show-card With a Conversation—Watching a Business to Prevent Loss by Dead-beats.

Encouraging Fresh Eggs.

St. John, N.B., April 13.—Several of the local dealers are handling eggs put up in pasteboard boxes—one dozen in a box—each box sealed and containing the name of the producer. The eggs are guaranteed fresh, and as each box is marked, the dealer is enabled to lay the blame for any stock that is not up to the mark, where it belongs. The idea seems to be meeting with much success.

Clerks Want Half Holiday.

Guelph, Ont., April 14.—The question of the usual Thursday half-holiday was taken up at the first meeting of the Clerks' and Salesmen Association.

Those present were enthusiastic over matters pertaining to the association's welfare and much good is expected to follow as a result of the meeting. The question of the Thursday afternoon closing was discussed at length. The meeting decided they would again petition the merchants for the usual holiday, and steps toward this end were taken. The members thought that it is in the interests of themselves and their employers that the holiday should be granted. They feel that they are in a better position to do a full week's work when they have the half day of rest and change. The officers elected for the ensuing year were: Hon. Pres., Belmore Macdonald and D. G. Hood; Pres., Jack McKenzie; Vice-pres., Jos. Duignan; Sec.-Treas., Geo. Freeland; Executive, R. S. Robinson, E. G. Hicks, H. Farrow, Fred Reid, Frank Pepper, J. Benallick and B. Cosford.

Retailer's Profit on Condensed Milk.

Vancouver, B.C., April 13.—"Vancouver retailers," said one the other day, "suffer by the increase in the price of condensed milk. With a jump of 40c a case, there will be a profit now of about 50c a case, unless the retail price is raised. If this is done, there will be a big objection raised by the customer, and it is probable that in most instances the figure will continue to retail at two cans for 25c.

"This is too low altogether, for it means giving the manufacturer and wholesaler the benefit of the retailer's facilities for handling. It has been the practice with some of the jobbers to offer one case free in ten with a certain quantity, but it is announced that this is to be stopped, and straight prices are to obtain without any such inducement."

A Conversation Window.

St. Thomas, April 11.—A conversation window in connection with a recent candy display has attracted considerable attention.

The conversation is of the familiar "Mamie" variety. The display itself comprises a number of plates of high grade chocolates and other lines of confectionery, tastefully and neatly arranged. To a number of these plates cards are affixed, each bearing a sentence of what purports to be a conversation between a couple of girls.

"Say, that's swell candy!"

"Ain't it, though?"

"Bet it must have cost you 50c a pound."

"Not on your life!"

"You don't say."

"Sure, Mike."

"Where d'you get it?"

"Why, at ———— store. They've got a hundred kinds to choose from, all just as good as this."

"Say. I'll drop in to-night and buy some myself. It's bully."

Though the English of the conversation may be somewhat colloquial, its colleguialism seems merely to add to the genuineness of the effect. The idea is one adaptable to pretty nearly any line of goods, and some ingenious conversations probably will he worked up by merchants who take advantage of it. The "conversation" seems to interject into the window display a personal element otherwise lacking. The above conversation may, of course, be improved upon.

Close Tab on Credit Customers.

Toronto, April 14.—M. Hollingshead, 896 Bloor St West, has gradually changed his business from a credit to a cash basis, and he claims to have done it without lessening his trade, and scarcely losing a customer. He is also carefully cutting out the practice of going out after orders. He claims that if a store is kept right, and the customers treated as they should be, they will come to the store to do their buying. While undergoing these changes, he says, his trade is increasing, maintaining that there are different ways of treating and serving people, and that the true way of building up a business is on fair methods. This is a matter that many grocers do not understand, and they even do not think that they have anything to learn. They cut and slash prices, neglect their stores, miss the patronage of their neighbors, and eventually "go under."

Displays on the Sidewalk.

Peterboro, April 14.—A local citizen has written to the press calling attention to grocers displaying goods on the street. He writes in part: "If the council want to turn their attention to a matter of real usefulness they can find it in compelling the grocers throughout the city to keep their goods off the sidewalks. People when they buy groceries want to get them clean, and as free from tuberculous and anthrax germs as possible. With all the dirt from the sidewalks and the street blowing continually over fruit or vegetables, not to speak of other possibilities of filth acquirement, it is a wonder that people can care to take chances in purchasing from the open baskets at grocery stores for their home needs.

"If there is a by-law relating to such matter it seems about time to see now that the warm weather is coming, that it is rigidly enforced."

Prejudice Against Case Eggs.

Fernie, B.C., April 13.—A grocer in Fernie tells of a rather amusing instance which illustrates the ignorance of one member of the consuming public. A lady of the "pernickety" type asked for a dozen eggs, and as he was about to get them out, a new consignment was brought in, whereupon he said: "I'll give you a dozen of these out of this new case, they are strictly fresh, having just arrived."

"I don't want case eggs at all," she replied sharply, not realizing that the others had arrived in a case and were somewhat older.

The grocer explained that the eggs were the best that could be secured, and as for being case eggs, he asked her if it was expected that the eggs would be packed in hats for transportation.

Handling Clean Seeds.

Bracebridge, Ont., April 14.—The handling of seeds of all descriptions is part of the business of Bracebridge grocers. It is each year becoming bigger. This season the merchants have clean stocks, to meet the requirements of the seed law, and they are expecting that this year will be the banner year of all.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—
Tapioca—Firm at the advance.
Coffees—Scarce.
Ginger—High and scarce.
Nuts—New Brazils quoted.

Montreal, April 14, 1910.

It seems as if bad roads have a direct influence on collections in this locality. At any rate country roads here are about as bad as they well can be and collections are poor, though not quite in such shape as the roads. The latter are commencing to dry rapidly now, however, and it is to be hoped there will not be too much rain until they have hardened somewhat.

Trade generally is on the up-grade and dealers report that gross sales are larger than this time last year. Spring has set in so much earlier that it seems to have given the entire business would, at least locally, an impetus in the right direction.

Tapioca continues firm at last week's advance and there is a strong probability of its going higher.

New Brazil nuts are on the New York market, and show a slight reduction over old prices.

Confiscations by the health department during the past week have been almost entirely confined to meats, principally veal. Some badly baked bread was also pronounced "unfit for human consumption." It is a good work, the protection of the home, and every right minded grocer should help it along by seeing that nothing unwholesome is sold from his store.

Sugar—The feature of the sugar situation at present is the drouth in Cuba. If that continues prices will undoubtedly be affected to a considerable extent. At present matters are somewhat dull. Prices are unchanged.

Syrup and Molasses—Many of the local jobbers have stocked up on molasses, after waiting in vain for any lowering of prices. A brisk business is going on to the retailers, but little more molasses is coming in. West Indies men say it pays better to use their product as sugar and many have practically ceased making molasses.

Do You Know How Much Tea Is Sold In Your Vicinity?

The tea used in your vicinity in a year amounts to about 5 lbs. per head of the total population. Just figure it out and see if you are getting your full share of that trade. The tea trade is the very choicest part of the grocery business. You can't afford to let either your opposition or the peddler have yours.

You won't if you push Red Rose Tea and Estabrooks' blended bulk teas. Red Rose Tea could not have reached its present leading position in the tea trade had it not been for its uniformly high quality. In Estabrooks' Blends you have the highest quality bulk teas kept absolutely uniform.

Red Rose Tea in packages and in 3 lb., 5 lb., and 10 lb. tins and Estabrooks' Blended bulk teas are the best lines you can have to down the peddler and build up and hold your tea trade.

It will pay you to recommend

Red Rose Tea

With your next order of Red Rose try a sample shipment of Estabrooks' Blends, black, green or mixed, in the 30c. or 40c. grades.

TORONTO—By the way canned goods are selling, it is not likely that many will have to be carried over to next season. Some are even getting low already, and dealers who have them are holding them for their own customers. Peas are short and corn is getting that way as well, and tomatoes are rapidly diminishing. Salmon, especially the better lines, will also all be required before the season is over. Canned goods are all safe stock to carry, but retailers are learning that it is better to let the wholesale houses carry them, and buy them when needed.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—
Nuts—New Brazils coming.
Evaporated Apples—Fair demand.
Sugar—Market still firm.

Toronto, April 14, 1910.

There is nothing of an exciting character to report in reference to the wholesale trade. This month's business, however, is much in advance of last month. This is due to the season of the year. A good many orders were held back until navigation opened, and these goods are now going out, which makes business particularly active. On the whole business is healthy and satisfactory.

The wholesale men are looking forward to the convention when they expect to see a large number of their customers. They think this convention will be the most important to grocers ever held in this country and every town should be represented.

Sugar—an unexpected break occurred in the European sugar market, without apparently any cause. This is, however, considered only temporary and other markets are unaffected. The market in general is firm and the opinion of dealers is that prices will be maintained and perhaps go higher.

MANITOBA MARKETS

Winnipeg, April 14, 1910.

In conference with several wholesale managers recently, it was learned that during the past few months retailers have so encouraged the jobbers that an extended credit account will be a thing of the past.

The brisk demand for goods in a wide range, the rapid turn over of retailers' stocks, and the general alertness of the retail trade, have convinced the wholesalers that they themselves have been long in lethargy. Merchants are more willing to take their discounts than the wholesaler has been to grant them, and the promptness of payments at the present time indicates that the retailer is awake and that the trade is all right.

A general firmness in the markets is the feature of the week. This is due to scarcity of goods and an international demand. The great demand for all lines of goods, however, is the great cause of an advancing market. The increased population and construction camp orders are taxing the trade for supplies, and this is sure to continue for the season at any rate.

Sugar—Everyone reports sugar firm this week at the following quotations. U. S. stockholders recently became alarmed about a slight reduction, and at once forced up the general market, with this control lower prices are not anticipated.

Syrup and Molasses—Wholesalers are closely watching the syrup market, but no change has yet been discovered. It is rumored that the duty on U. S. syrup will be advanced shortly, giving Canadian manufacturers better control, which will likely mean higher prices.

Foreign Dried Fruits—All lines are moving well, and a few scarcities are reported. Prunes have been strengthened although new stocks of larger grades have come in, 60—70 and 70—80 have gone up ¼ cent. The demand for prunes is brisk and supplies will be short this season. Peaches are also scarce and a a strong market ensues. Currants have not changed, but advanced prices seem probable.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B.C., April 14. 1910.

Butter at this time of year is one of the particular things on the market and different methods are resorted to which reflect on the trade of the retailer more or less. For instance, with a great demand for butter, eastern creamery is bricked up and sold under various guises, generally with a creamery name. Lately, since it was found that all this was alike, it was dubbed Australian, and it went for a time. There is some genuine Australian on the market, and the difference is plainly perceptible, since it has a pronounced grass flavor. Eastern butter sells at 31c and 32c with an extra cent for bricking. Australian is about the same. Vancouver creamery reaches the retailer at 38c, while Chilliwack and Edenbank creamery, the standards, are jobbed at 45c.

Eastern eggs have little call just now, the quality being poor. Not only that, but the eggs from California are coming in in large quantities and in excellent quality, jobbing at 30 cents. They are so good, in fact, that they are giving local stock a hard run. Local eggs are 35c.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, N.B., April 14, 1910.

The local markets have been rather dull lately. Ontario flours have declined ten cents. Eggs are cheaper. California oranges have advanced from $3 and $3.50, to $4. A few Gaspereaux are being offered at 2½ cents. Maple products are scarce and high. Maple syrup is offered at $1.10 to $1.25 per gallon and sugar at 12 to 14 cents a pound.

INFORMATION FOR BUYERS.

Supplied to the Trade by Sellers.

Amongst the biscuit specialities turned out to perfection by George Kemp Ltd., of London and Cardiff, there is a tasty "Currant Wafer," which seems to prove a favorite wherever it is exported. It is a small, crisp, golden brown biscuit, with currant sprinkled top. The "Arrowroot Wafer" is an ornamental lozenge-shaped biscuit, very thin and light, and the "Marie" is a round and more substantial biscuit, similar in taste. George Kemp Ltd. have only recently completed their arrangements for exporting to Canada, and will be adding various special lines to their present list, from time to time.

Special offers are being made by Laporte, Martin & Co., Montreal, on teas, alimentary pastes and Minerva olive oil. All of these goods are of standard quality, and the prices which are being quoted are attractive. Remy's rice starch is one of the best articles of this sort made in Europe. It sells in ¼ lb., ½ lb. and 1 lb. packages, all neat and attractive. Laporte, Martin & Co., Montreal, are agents for the product.

"Nuggett" Furniture Polish sells at 10c and allows the dealer a profit of 50 p.c. Besides this you have to consider the fact that it is a paste, put up in tins, so that there is no risk of loss through breakage, as well as the fact that it is guaranteed free from acid and all injurious ingredients. The grocery store is the logical distributor of furniture polish. Liquid preparations retail at 25c, 35c and 50c and this has been accountable for small demand in the past. In a bottle of ordinary polish there is sufficient to clean all the furniture in one room. There is enough in one tin of "Nugget" to clean all the furniture in five or six rooms. No other polish can be used on the leather of upholstered furniture. "Nugget" acts as a preservative of leather. Other advantages, from the dealer's standpoint, are that it will not dry out if kept in stock, and that it may be displayed in winter as it will not freeze.

The McGreegor Specialty Co., Toronto, Canadian Importers of Holland Rusks, have just receive a notification from the manufacturers, that during the summer months they are arranging to have an attractive colored seal placed on the top of each package of Holland Rusks, showing Holland Rusks being served with strawberries and other fresh fruits, and deliveries of this popular specialty during the summer months will contain the seals showing a few of the many forms in which these Rusks can be served. A full size package of Holland Rusks will be sent to any retailer in Canada free of charge, on receipt of name and address.

AN ERROR.

An unfortunate typographical error in the advertisement of Sugars & Canners last week quoted "18 lb." tins of molasses at $2.70 per case of 6 tins. This should have been "10 lb." tins, as the firm does not put up an 18 lb. package.

The Bacon Market in England a Little Lower

No Change in Hog Product Values Here—Butter Market Will Likely Remain Strong—Prices of Eggs Advanced Due to Competition of Cold Storge Buyers—Maple Syrup in Small Compass.

The English bacon market is a little lower, but as there is so little Canadian bacon on the market there, it will not affect values here.

The cheese and butter situation is in splendid condition to meet the opening of the new season's make. Little old stock is on hand, and from all appearances both lines will start at a fair figure, when available. By the way immigration is pouring in, we can count on a good local market, and if our butter finds its way into the United States markets in the shape of cream, as it will likely do, this also will have a tendency to keep up the price.

MONTREAL.

Provisions—Increasing supplies of live hogs have weakened the price of both live and dressed. Other lines are unchanged in price, but symptoms of weakness are in evidence, and it would be no surprise to see a slight reduction in porks and pure lards. However, improvement of the roads may counteract this by increasing the demand.

Butter—Butter is a scarce commodity just at present. Prices are either higher or holding firm. Inquiries from Toronto show that their stocks are even more depleted than ours. This only goes to illustrate the fact that one of the great factors in present high rates of living is the larger use being made of food articles which were once luxuries. Receipts for the week are 10,307 cases, as against 7,793 same week last year. For the season they are 241,465 cases, as against 239,069 cases same season 1909.

Butter—Cold storage butter is all cleaned out, and the fresh made is scarcely sufficient to meet the demand. In consequence prices are well maintained, and in some cases from 2 to 3c a lb. more is paid this week than last. These prices may last for several weeks, but dealers will not allow butter to accumulate, and as soon as the receipts increase, prices will likely drop.

The program is as follows:

SHIPMENTS FROM JAMAICA

Kingston Commission Merchants Claim Canadian Firms are Indiscreet.

Commission merchants in the West Indies are complaining of difficulties regarding goods shipped to Canada as the following letter from Kingston, Jamaica, indicates:

Editor Canadian Grocer,—"We enclose you copy of one of the letters we are in the habit of getting from our bankers in regard to goods which we ship to Canada on firm sale, f.o.b. The amount of $80.76 is for Pimento supplied, an article which is not perishable and we are sending the original to the Canadian Commissioners in London, in order to prove to them what we say is true. A Canadian firm orders goods and will not accept the bill because the goods have not yet arrived. It appears to us that your Canadian firms show a lamentable want of discretion in not being able to judge when they are dealing with respectable people or not."

Following is the letter sent by a Kingston, Jamaica, bank to these merchants: Dear Sirs,—We have received advice our Toronto agents dated 16th instant that your draft on ——— for $80.76 negotiated by us on the 2nd idem. has been refused acceptance on the grounds, "goods not arrived."

"They further state that they are not expected for two weeks or more. Meanwhile they are holding bill for arrival of goods, and we shall be obliged if you will confirm their action in so doing."

Frank Menzie, of the F. F. Dalley Co., Hamilton, Ont., has returned from a three months' trip to the British West Indies.

W. H. Thompson, familiarly known as "Billy" with the F. F. Dalley Co., Hamilton, Ont., is home after an extended trip to the Southern States.

Montreal Oat Product Market Lower this Week

Local Competition Stated to be the Cause—Flour Steady at Same Prices Quoted During Past Three Months—Wheat Market Will Likely Weaken Soon.

There is little change in the flour and wheat markets from last week, but the feeling in the latter is rather weaker. This is owing to the fact that there is more wheat still held by farmers than was estimated, and also to the favorable reports of the growing crops. At present there is nothing in sight upon which to base an argument for higher prices. Russia is still pouring out wheat, the extent of which has already surprised the world.

The flour market is dull as buyers are holding back, expecting to buy for less money.

In Montreal, owing to a local competition, a reduction has been made in oat products, the consumption is gradually decreasing with warmer weather.

MONTREAL.

Flour.—It is thought by millers that the present price of wheat is too high for present crop prospects and they prophesy a drop before long.

The quantity of flour on spot here is reported as over 50,000 bbls. in excess of this time last year. Prices are firm throughout.

Oatmeal.—Local competition has reduced prices all along the line in oatmeals. Fine oatmeal is down 17½c, with rolled oats showing a proportionate reduction. This situation cannot last, according to local dealers. Present prices are too low to allow of a fair profit.

TORONTO.

Flour.—The condition of the flour market is stubborn. There seems to be a hard pressure from both sides without being able to move it from its long resting place. While wheat yields triflingly to the manipulation of the wheat operator's, flour refuses to move.

FIRMS IN CEREAL MERGER.

A. G. Nesbit, managing director of the Investment Trust Co., Montreal who has charge of the cereal merger, known as the Canadian Cereal & Milling Co., states that the following firms are interested:

The Tillson Co., Tillsonburg; the Flavelle Milling Co., Lindsay; P. McIntosh & Son, Toronto; Walter Thompson & Son, London; Jas. Wilson & Son, Fergus; D. R. Ross & Son, Embro; Woodstock Cereal Co., Woodstock; Goldie Milling Co., Ayr.

These mills he says have a total capacity per 24-hour day of 2,350 barrels of oatmeal and rolled oats, 2,200 barrels of flour, 100 barrels of rolled wheat, 450 barrels of split peas, 155 barrels of pot barley, 350 tons of feed, and a total elevator capacity of about 700,000 bushels of grain.

TRADE NOTES.

Kenny Bros., grocery, flour and feed and crockery merchants, Parry Sound, Ont., have dissolved partnership, W. L. Kenny continuing.

H. O. Lee, grocer, Mount Pleasant, Vancouver, B.C., is erecting a handsome five-storey steel, stone and brick combined store, office and apartment building on the northwest corner of Broadway and Westminster Avenue, Vancouver, B.C. The cost will be nearly $100,000, and the store is planned to be modern in every way.

The advertising committee of the Board of Trade of St. John, N. B., has been sending out some attractive cards to the manufacturers, business men and citizens generally, with the idea of creating a greater faith in the development of the city. The card sent out last week contained this legend: "Every Dollar Spent for St. John Made Goods Helps St. John."

At a recent Retail Grocers' Association meeting held in an English city a new bonus scheme supposedly detrimental to the grocery business was told of by a member. The idea as he understood it, was that the grocer should give a halfpenny ticket with every tenpenny-worth of goods, and these tickets were to cover life and fire and sickness insurances for customers. The effect of this scheme would be that the grocer should tax himself to the extent of 5 per cent., and should pay for the insurances of his customers. He was informed that the scheme was to be started in the North of England at the beginning of next year.

When writing advertisers kindly mention having seen the advertisement in this paper.

What's In a Name

MAYBE, Brother Grocer, you think there isn't so much of a muchness in the naming industry.

But, if you made a FAMILY FLOUR as good as you knew how without thought of men or money—first you'd christen it, like any other legitimate offspring.

Just to show it was—er—your own make, so to speak.

You'd even stay up nights, maybe—same as us, to coax the divine though fugitive spark of inspiration.

It's no joke to name a brand, Brother Grocer.

For, you see, you'd want a nice, catchy name, something suggesting the queen of flowers—the Rose, its purity, fragrance, freshness, all that is desirable, suggestive.

Because, being a student of human nature, you have a kind of hunch re the inner workings of the home purchasing agent's mind, commonly called the housewife.

Flours and flowers somehow seem kith and kin.

What bears the name of a cherished friend is immediately invested with all his very best qualities.

Which seems good enough for Madam.

Then you'd likely pick out a title both short and sweet, concise, expressive, that would "sound nice," that would haunt the memory.

Ten to one, Brother Grocer, if you had thought of it before we did, you might have called it FIVE ROSES, too.

The story goes that it comes from the Old Country, this title of FIVE ROSES, the land of the titled folks, you know.

Like to hear?

There is a wondrous variety of beautiful white rose, peerless for purity of aroma, delicacy; immaculate of color, the very sweetest that grows.

Grows only in those rare old-style English gardens, about which young writers rave about when they wax poetical and need the money.

And they call this queen of all dainty roses—"The Five Sisters."

And years ago when we first started making good flour, we made it so very good that our friends across the briny, mindful of the name, called their first lot—"FIVE ROSES," and have been asking for more and more FIVE ROSES ever since.

We fell in love with the name and its associations, liked it as much as they liked the flour—and we called our best efforts FIVE ROSES, too.

What's in a name?

When it means sincere and certified value, Brother Grocer, it means everything.

It is a force or a farce, just as the users choose to make it.

The name was made for FIVE ROSES, but FIVE ROSES has made a name for itself—a name full of selling force, don't YOU think?

And we will live up to it, Brother Grocer.

Never fear.

Figures Profits on Invoice Cost Plus Freight

This Merchant Claims They Should Not be Calculated on Invoice Cost Alone—Expense of Doing Business Ought to be Figured on Turn-over—A Handy Table for The Grocer.

"The old way of conducting a business," states a retail merchant, "was to take the cost of the goods as per the invoice and mark them with all the profit added that the judgment of the retailer thought the articles would stand. But in the business of to-day, with lower percentages of profit, he must figure more accurately in order that at the close of inventory the books show a profit and not a loss.

"There are several ways of figuring profit. First, you must have a base representing cost. Most business men, I think, figure this base as representing the invoice cost with freight added, making the costs of goods delivered in the house. After this is done, you must classify the different articles. Those staples that turn themselves several times a year are placed on one percentage, another line of articles on another, and so on throughout the entire stock.

"As an illustration, take the staple line that you expect to make pay a net profit of, say, 10 per cent. and get the selling price. Now, you must consider shop or selling cost. This, of course, varies with each business house, but for our convenience we will assume that the average is 15 per cent. Then, if you take the 15 per cent. house cost and 10 per cent. profit and mark your goods with 25 per cent. of cost, added to the cost of goods, can you have a net profit of 10 per cent. added to your profit account?

"Most grocers figure the shop cost on the basis of total sales, and the expense of doing business for the year. In order to secure a 10 per cent. net profit with a 15 per cent. shop cost, you should add 33 1-3 per cent. to the cost of the goods in order to obtain the desired result.

"There is a division of opinion as to whether the percentage of profit should be figured from the cost or the selling price of the goods. You will note that it makes a difference. For instance, 100 per cent. of the cost price equals only 50 per cent. of the selling price, and 50 per cent. of the cost price equals 33 1-3 per cent. of the selling price.

"It is my opinion that the base should be the cost of the goods delivered in the shop. In order to obtain the desired profit you should change the ratio and not the base. For instance, if you desire a profit including shop cost of 10 per cent., add 11 per cent.; if 15 per cent., add 17 per cent.; if 20 per cent. add 25 per cent.; if 25 per cent., add 33 1-3 per cent., and so on, always changing your ratio, but retaining the same selling base. In this way you estimate your profit from the selling price of the goods, on which you have based your percentage of cost to carry on your business, or the house cost.

"We, in the conduct of our business, should figure our profit from the total sales or selling price, by using the cost of goods as a base and changing the ratio of percentage to secure the proper amount of net profit.

"The following table will be found of value in figuring profits:

p.c.		p.c.

Fish—This market was flooded last week with all kinds of fresh river fish which had the effect of reducing the demand for sea fish. As the market at this time of the year has only a limited absorbing capacity, the prices all round have been easy and rather inclined to be lower. Demand for bulk oysters is decreasing proportionately with the warm weather. As this year warm weather came on so early, trade has lost a good deal by it.

Green Fruits—The apple season is pretty well over and on the whole it was a disastrous one to the dealers. Lots of apples are still on hand and are looking for buyers, while many fall prey to the relentless scavenger. That this is a total loss at the country's expense must be admitted and it is up to the proper authorities to look into the matter with a view of preventing a repetition of the same trouble. There are many things connected with our apple industry which are not right, and which should be corrected before another crop has to be handled. The farmers got the best of it this year, and many of them were paid for good fruit which they did not supply. Educational work should be done to save this tremendous loss. Oranges are firm and from 30 to 40c a case higher in the primary markets. The quality now is excellent, but on account of the damaged fruit, some retailers have still some old stock on hand which they are trying to sell to save themselves from loss. There is no change in strawberries this week, they are still coming from Louisiana in small boxes at 12½ to 13c.

Vegetables—Some idea can be formed of the quantity of vegetables used in Toronto from the fact that it takes about a car of tomatoes a day to supply the demand, and the rapid increase in consumption can be understood when it takes ten times as much now to go round as it did five years ago. Celery is another article which is largely used and to meet the demand it requires several car loads a week. The market is well supplied with all kinds of vegetables, which arrive in splendid condition.

Fish—Fresh caught fish are still scarce, and as the contract season begins May 1st the fish trade is in a sort of go-as-you-please condition which is likely to last during this month. The first car of fresh caught halibut arrived from the coast and this will be repeated regularly during the summer. Whitefish and trout are selling at luxury prices.

Last week saw the end achieved that many of the French business men of Sherbrooke, Que., have been working for —the establishment of a Chambre de Commerce. Sherbrooke is largely indebted for this to Victor Archambault, wholesale grocer, of that city. For some time past he has been working toward this, and is to be congratulated on his success.

DAMAGE OF OVER $60,000.

Heavy Loss as a Result of Fire in Premises of Salada Tea Co. at Toronto.

Toronto, April 14.—Fire in the premises of the Salada Tea Co., early this morning, caused damage to the extent of over $60,000. Of this $58,000 is represented by the stock, which is set down as a complete loss, due to a combination of fire, smoke and water. The fire started on the ground floor. While it was confined to a small section, and did not even break through the first ceiling, smoke filled the whole building and is responsible for the big share of damage done.

By Tuesday at noon painters and whitewashers were at work in order to get out the smoky smell which permeated the building. The machinery and fixtures were not touched by the fire and operations are already being resumed.

A peculiar feature of the blaze was the fact that a large number of empty boxes nested inside one another, and packed closely together, to the rear of the floor where the fire started, checked the flames rather than aided them. The building would have been entirely destroyed but for the alertness of the firemen.

The loss is entirely covered by insurance, there being $58,200 on the stock alone. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

An Ideal Relationship with the Store Customers

Halifax Correspondent Suggests Trade Intercourse With the Farmer and Laborer—This to be an Offset to the Mail Order House—Maintains That Open Meetings Should be Held to Bring About Better Conditions.

By J. K. L.

While it is claimed that the large mail order houses are a serious obstacle in the natural growth and development of the country, it is true that they are waking up the ordinary retailers to study proper and fair relations between themselves and their customers.

As long as the farmers and the working people do not take more interest in their immediate surroundings than they do in the far off centres, they will naturally give no preference to their own towns. Here is where the duty of the town merchant comes in, and if the merchants will work to meet this higher plane of business relationship they will find that the people will support their own towns to a large extent.

Some years ago when new conditions were developing, the merchants were finding out that in order to protect themselves, it was necessary to work unitedly. Through this movement a great deal of good has been accomplished. Various evils have been obliterated by legislation, and some attempted injurious legislation defeated. But the greatest good has come from creating a better acquaintance and a more friendly feeling among merchants.

They have learned that it was not necessary to be enemies because they happened to be in the same line of trade. They learned, as well, that it did not pay to be trying to put one another out of business, but that they could derive much benefit and help from each other by working together as neighbors should do.

Would Like Open Meetings.

This initiative work, however, has opened the way for another step much larger and broader in character. It is now found necessary that not only the merchants meet and exchange ideas pertaining to their own particular trade, but that something must be done to cultivate a closer relationship between the retailer and his customers, and to arouse a greater interest in the building up of the towns and the entire neighborhood. Instead of the merchants holding their meetings for themselves, the farmers attending their institutes, and the labor people their conferences, the merchants should hold open meetings, and invite the general public ta attend and take part in the discussions.

After several subjects have been thoroughly thrashed out, committees should be appointed, consisting of all classes, to adjust difficulties, and arrange methods and plans for the general good of the entire community.

To make these meetings all the more interesting, an outside speaker who is well versed in trade subjects could be procured to take the lead in the discussions.

Merchants cannot expect the farmers to deal with them and support them if they take no interest whatever in their affairs. Merchants should interest themselves in goods roads, securing farm help, advising farmers how to prepare their products to meet the market requirements, etc., and if they do this, which is nothing more than their duty, and two their own advantages, they will do more to check the enormous drain in the country through the mail order houses than by anything else.

This seems to be the only natural way to cope with this question. It would lift the trade to a higher level, and it would interest all to boost the town and its neighborhood, and make each feel that he is an important cog in the machinery wheel and part and parcel of the entire social fabric.

THE OFFICIAL INVITATION.

Urging Retailers to Attend Convention of The Wholesale Grocers' Exchange.

Toronto, April 14.—A circular letter has been sent out by the secretary of the grocers' section of the R.M.A., calling a convention of retail grocers for Ontario to be held in Toronto on Tuesday, April 26th and 27th. The officers of the provincial committee of the Grocers' Section of The Retail Merchants' Association of Canada under whose auspices the convention will be held are: M. Moyer, chairman, Toronto; F. W. Ford, 1st vice-chairman, Ottawa; J. O. Carpenter, 2nd vice-chairman, Hamilton; T. Nappy, treasurer, Brockville; E. M. Trowern, secretary, Toronto.

The letter reads as follows: Dear sir,—You are possibly aware that the wholesale grocers of the Province of Ontario are holding their annual convention in Toronto on April 25th, 26th, 27th and 28th, in the King Edward Hotel. They are desirous of meeting the retail grocers and the manufacturers of the province on Wednesday, April 27th, and they have extended to us a hearty and cordial invitation to be present.

We believe that it will be in the best interests of the entire grocery trade to hold this joint meeting, and our executive have accepted their invitation, and we want every retail grocer who can attend to be present. In order, however, that the retail grocery trade should secure as much benefit as possible out of the joint meeting of retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers, it will be necessary that the retail trade should have the day previous, viz., Tuesday, April 26th, in which we can meet and decide among ourselves as to what resolutions we should present to the joint meeting that will be of the greatest benefit to the trade.

You are therefore urgently requested to interest the retail grocers of your town and have as many as possible present, or have at least your town represented by one retail grocer at both meetings.

The first one to be held in Toronto on Tuesday morning, April 26tth, in our Board Room, at 21 Richmond St. W., at 10 o'clock, and then, after the session has been completed, we will adjourn from this meeting, and upon receipt of a voucher of admittance, we will attend the meeting of the wholesale grocers at the King Edward Hotel on Wednesday morning, April 27th, 1910, at 10 o'clock.

This is the first opportunity in the history of the retail grocery trade that the retail grocers have had an opportunity of meeting the wholesalers and manufacturers for the purpose of having a heart to heart talk, whereby we can make suggestions for trade improvement that cannot be done in any other manner. Too much stress cannot therefore be laid upon the fact that it is absolutely necessary that every city, town and village in the province should be represented. If you cannot all come, we want you to be sure and have your delegate answer the name of your town, when the roll call is made. We want a grand rally of retail grocers so as to show by our numbers that we are interested in our trade and to impress upon the wholesalers and manufacturers that the time has arrived when our trade should be placed upon a higher and better plane.

We are sending only one letter to one retail grocer in a town and we have selected you to convey this invitation to the other retail grocers, and if you find it impossible to give it your personal care, which we hope you will not, will you please place it in the hands of a fellow retail grocer who will give it his close and devoted attention, so that we will have a rousing convention. This will be a business meeting for business men, and when your delegate or delegates return they will take back with them information that they can impart to their fellow grocers for trade improvement that it is impossible to explain in a circular letter, and they will be inspired and benefited after having exchanged views with the brightest and best minds in the grocery trade.

Arrangements have been made with all the railways for convention certificates which you will please ask for when you are buying your ticket.

Please send us the name of your delegate or delegates as early as possible so that we can complete all our arrangements, and oblige.

SUNKIST ORANGES

SUNKIST LEMONS

FRUIT FACTS

We grow sixty per cent. of all the Oranges and Lemons shipped from California.

We use the name of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange in preference to our individual names as a convenience in doing business with the trade.

This large volume of business under one name also gives us better facilities in shipping and disposing of our products.

We can also grade our stock much better, thus giving the jobber and retailer a more even supply of selected fruit.

This large volume allows us to ship entire train loads, which come unbroken to their destination, thus giving us a faster time schedule than can possibly be obtained by individual shippers.

All these special facilities of growing, packing and shipping add no extra cost whatever to the jobbing or retail trade. We add no premium for these advantages when disposing of our fruit.

Our present advertising campaign to increase the consumption of California Oranges includes the offer of a "Rogers" Orange spoon for 12 cents and 12 SUNKIST wrappers; the stamps and wrappers to be mailed to our Toronto Office. We have taken the burden of attending to this correspondence ourselves, so that we may relieve the jobber and retailer of detailed troubles. These spoons bear the stamp and carry the guarantee of the Wm. A. Rogers Company, the largest and most responsible manufacturers of high-grade silverware in the world. Their name itself is an assurance of absolute quality and permanent value.

In purchasing SUNKIST Oranges and Lemons you are positive of the best grades of the best fruit grown; you are assured of fruit packed in the most hygienic manner by the most approved methods and shipped to points of distribution by special fast freight, thus reaching you at the earliest possible moment after leaving the orchards of California.

One Aim In Life

The Packers of the "Thistle" Brand of Fish aim only to produce the best there is in Canned Fish.

Canned Where Caught

The "Thistle" Brand of Canned Haddies, Kippered Herring, and Herring and Tomato Sauce, are canned right where they are caught, at the water side. How better could you preserve the natural richness and delicate flavor of the fish? IMPOSSIBLE.

But that is not all, because Captain Austin has the unequalled skill of a life-time of experience. THERE IS NO DIRT OR SLIME—NO UNCLEANLINESS TO BE FOUND IN THE "THISTLE" BRAND. The reputation of the foremost fish-curer in the country is at stake under the label of the "Thistle" Brand.

The LATEST "Enterprise" Electric Mill

New ideas applied to rapid grinding of coffee by electric power make these new "Enterprise" Pedestal Mills by far the best on the market to-day. They are Direct Connected. They lose no power in transmission. The grinders are on the motor shaft. The double Mill shown here, No. 0852, is for alternating current; can also be furnished for direct current. One Mill is fitted with tooth grinders which cut the coffee, the other mill fitted with ribbed grinders for pulverizing. Each hopper holds six pounds. The Mill will granulate 3 pounds of coffee per minute, and pulverize ½ pound per minute. The cans or receivers are enclosed as a protection against dust. The Mill is self-cleaning. This compact, graceful 1 H.P. Mill is already in great demand. We invite correspondence and will send facts, illustrations and prices of our 45 sizes and styles of Rapid Grinding and Pulverizing Mills on request.

We supply grocers also with Meat and Food Choppers, Self-Measuring Pumps and Faucets, Smoked Beef Shavers and other "Enterprise" Specialties. You should have our latest catalogue. If you haven't it, write.

Eight Days After

Eight short days after the disastrous fire that ruined our entire stock, we resumed packing tea. An army of painters, plasterers, carpenters and charwomen have turned chaos into order—a smoke and water-laden building into a perfectly clean, fresh, wholesome warehouse. It is this characteristic energy that has served to place "SALADA" at the top and it is this same determination that is going to keep it there.

We wish to take this opportunity of thanking most heartily and appreciatively our friends who have extended the hearty handshake to us during the past week and to the grocers throughout Canada who have sympathized with us, we express our sincere thanks.

Grocers Watching the Aggression of the Peddler

Toronto R.G.A. Take up the Question—What is a Fair Profit on a Pound of Butter?—Selling Quality in Preference to Meeting Competition of Those Competitors Who Cut Prices—Pleas for Early Closing.

Toronto, April 22.—Discussion of business matters occupied the majority of the time of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association at their regular monthly meeting on Monday night.

Among other things that arose was the move on the part of the Toronto peddlers in forming a union to look after their interests. They have been objecting to the payment of a license of $10 for every assistant whom they employ and who leaves the wagon to sell and deliver goods.

David Bell brought the matter to the attention of the association. He referred to an article in The Canadian Grocer of last week mentioning the union and advised that the grocers be on the watch when the peddlers came before the Board of Control. It was something that should be carefully followed.

C. F. Thorne stated that the peddler usually carried only those goods on which profits were good leaving the grocer to get along as best he could with the remainder.

It was finally decided on motion that the association as a body be a committee to watch the interests of the retailer against the encroachments of the peddlers.

The Profits on Butter.

The question as to what was a fair profit on butter, biscuits, etc., was also on the slate. It was introduced by C. F. Thorne, who maintained that in selling butter which cost 32 cents for 35 cents as some were doing the profit was not sufficient. That means a gross profit of about 9½ per cent. which, as one of the grocers said, does not even pay for the expense of doing business.

Grocers should have a fair living profit, stated J. S. Bond, and he did not believe in giving customers the goods at a loss.

Most of those present considered that a profit of 5 or 6 cents on butter which cost 32 cents was about right. The gross perecentage in the first case would be about 16 per cent. and in the latter about 19 per cent. which, when the cost of doing business at 15 per cent. is taken into consideration, would at least allow the grocer to break even or make a little net profit.

A. J. Conium advised that grocers should pay considerable attention to quality in butter rather than buy cheaply in order to meet the competition of neighboring price cutters. He had experimented by buying butter around 20 cents, making 2 or 3 cents on some, and finally having to get rid of the rough stuff at 15 cents. Usually a couple of dollars were lost on every case.

"There is more money in the better class of butter," he maintained, "and we should have at least 5 cents per pound profit."

Other members also talked quality. One declared that in handling only butter that could always be recommended was more satisfactory and more profitable than selling both good and poor qualities.

"Quality always pays," was the remark of President Donald McLean.

Late Closing Trouble.

There was also a lengthy discussion on methods of interesting more grocers in association work. One of the chief difficulties is the fact that so many keep their stores open so late at night.

W. F. Johnston proposed a plan to get in more members. It was that the grocers get together and wait upon the various members of the trade to get them enthused. If one calls on a grocer the chances are he will not take him seriously and he therefore advised unity in getting in recruits.

It was pointed out that when there was a bowling tournament some 30 or more members turn out, many of whom never come to the meetings. Many do not join because they claim they cannot afford the time to attend the monthly meetings.

"If we held our meetings at 12.30 a.m. we might get some of these late closers in," said A. J. Conium.

"There is no need of keeping open after 7 o'clock. Clerks and delivery boys are entitled to some rest if they work steadily from 7 in the morning."

He cited a case in which one time he induced a competitor to close Wednesday afternoons during the summer and also during the evenings. That same man had told him later that that was the only time he ever enjoyed the grocery business.

J. S. Bond attributed the trouble to the fact that there were so many inexperienced old women (both kinds evidently referred to), old maids, etc., in the trade. Boys were entitled to some rest and he maintained that the trade generally should be educated to early closing. If he were a boy again he would want to have a little time to himself.

Mr. Bond stated his desire to see trade questions discussed to bring out the ideas of different merchants in order to get the advantages of doing things right. He liked to come to the meetings of the association. In fact, it was as easy for him to miss going to church as it was to miss attending a session of Grocers' Association. More grocers should be interested in it, he thought.

Would Meet Semi-Monthly.

W. C. Miller, vice-president, suggested that more interest would be taken in the various meetings if they were held semi-monthly instead of monthly. A better account of things could then be kept as all would have a better remembrance of the subjects discussed from time to time.

This appealed to others and it will be further discussed at the next meeting night, as will also be a proposal to change the place of meeting.

The committee in charge of amendments to the constitution reported with some slight proposed changes. The new constitution will be published shortly.

Picnic plans are also under way but as yet nothing definite has been arrived at. A special meeting will likely be held to further consider the excursion.

WOULD CELEBRATE DOMINION DAY.

Chatham, Ont., April 21.—At their meeting last week the Chatham Retail Merchants passed a resolution strongly favoring the celebration of Dominion Day in Chatham this year.

The members of the local Retail Merchants' Association were largely instrumental in bringing to a successful issue the celebration of two years ago, and there has always been a strong feeling among merchants in general in favor of celebrating the day. At the meeting a celebration was urged by many members and a resolution pledging the co-operation of the retail merchants was passed without a word of dissent. They believe that such an affair is highly beneficial apart from the patriotic view of the question.

A. Benallick, Guelph, Ont., has entered into partnership with W. G. Hood, formerly Hood Bros.

A. H. Pettigrew, of the Thos. J. Lipton Co., visited the Toronto office from Chicago during the week.

Robt. Millar, who has been manager in Geo. William's grocery store, Guelph, Ont., has resigned. He is leaving about the first of May for the Pacific coast.

Henry Wright, president and general manager of the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., Toronto, is visiting the branch offices of his firm at Detroit, Chicago, Philadelphia, New York and Boston. He will be away for a few weeks.

Is Refined Sugar a Preservative for Fruits?

Retailers Have Been Accused of Selling Poor Sugar Which Spoiled Preserved Fruits—Chief Analyst Says it is not a Preservative in One Sense of the Word—Superior Sugar on the Market at the Present Time.

Some retail grocers occasionally receive complaints from customers about the quality of the sugar they buy. The latter sometimes lay the blame of spoiled preserved fruit to the quality of the sugar that has been used.

On the other hand sugar refiners claim that sugar is not a preservative—that it will not keep fruit. Naturally the retailer is at a loss to know his exact position. He does not care to be censured for selling inferior sugar when that sugar is of good quality. If the sugar he sells does spoil the housewife's fruit then he should lay the blame on the proper party.

In order to throw some light on this question The Grocer took the matter up with A. McGill, the Dominion Chief Government Analyst.

Mr. McGill says: "Sugar is not a preservative in the same sense that benzoic acid, salicylic acid or formaldehyde are such, i.e., it does not inhabit or actively destroy microbial life.

"But, a strongly sugared food (such as jam or condensed milk with sugar), if sterilized by heat, is remarkably resistent to the fresh influx of microbial life, and will maintain its sound characters, under ordinary conditions of exposure, for some considerable time. This fact has led to the belief in sugar as a preservative; and Thresh and Porter in their work on preservatives (Churchill, London, 1906), use the words, 'The sugar added, may be regarded to some extent, as a preservative.'

Good Sugar on the Market.

"If, however, we understand by a preservative, something which added to a perishable food stuff, will prevent fermentation and putrefaction, then sugar cannot be called a preservative.

"As to the sugar now on the market, so far as I have had opportunity of studying it, it is one of the purest foodstuffs in commerce. It is, of course, possible for raw, or badly refined sugar, to be of such a nature as might conceivably tend to produce rather than retard fermentation in fruits. But I have no reason to believe that sugars of this class are offered for sale."

W. I. SUGAR INDUSTRY.

Now that Lord Balfour, says the West India Committee Circular, and the members of the Royal Commission on trade with Canada have left the West Indies, it is to be hoped that there will be no slackening of interest in that subject in those colonies. As far as we can gather, some months must elapse before the commissioners can present their report, so great is the mass of evidence which has to be sifted and considered. We are glad to note that so far the subject of the enquiry has been successfully kept beyond the pale of party politics, and it is much to be hoped that the opposing forces of Free Trade and Tariff Reform will continue to treat it as a purely Imperial question.

While on the subject of trade with Canada, we should like to correct a statement that has been made in more than one paper and in several public utterances. This is to the effect that it is Canada who saved the West Indian sugar industry. While giving Canada all credit for what she has done to help the West Indies—and all West Indians appreciate the action of the Dominion Government in extending to them a preference for over ten years—we are constrained, in the interests of accuracy, to point out that it is to the abolition of bounties and the suppression of cartels by the International agreement signed at Brussels in 1902 that the resuscitation of the West Indian sugar industry is mainly due. In every country in the world which did not countervail the bounties, or prohibit bounty-fed sugar, the conditions of competition were so unequal prior to 1903, when the convention came into force, that even with the Canadian preference it is doubtful whether the industry could have survived but for the convention.

WHO IS THE PURCHASER?

It is Claimed That the T. Eaton Co. Has Bought Large Blocks of Land in Toronto and Not the C.P.R.

Toronto, April 22.—A few weeks ago there was a report to the effect that the C.P.R. had bought large blocks of land in the vicinity of the corner of Yonge and Carlton Streets, as a site for a new station. Since then, however, it has been stated that the buyer was not the C.P.R., but the T. Eaton Co.

The reason given for the purchase is that the T. Eaton Co. is handicapped by the lack of space in the block occupied at the present time. The block enclosed between Yonge and Church Streets on the one hand and Carlton and Wood Streets on the other is a large one and would allow ample room for extensions.

PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

CANNED FRUITS TO ADVANCE.

Although not definitely announced at the time of going to press, it is generally admitted by wholesalers that the prices of practically all canned fruits will be advanced in a few days.

The advance will amount to two and a half cents per dozen.

The season of the year has a great deal to do with this situation. It is the time for canned fruits and as they have had to be kept in storage for so long, canners feel that they should get more for them.

The Grocer has maintained all along that canned fruit was a safe holding and the present advance in prices justifies our contention.

SHRINKAGE IN NUTS.

That grocers should be careful not to hold nuts too long is illustrated by the following incident:

A Canadian importer of Tarragona almonds sold a jobber a quantity of these nuts last autumn. A short time ago he bought ten bags back again—and by the way, he got them at the same price as he sold them last fall, the jobber not knowing that they were up in price or about to go up.

When the ten bags were weighed, it was found that the weight of an entire bag of the almonds had been lost during the winter. This was due to shrinkage, loss through rats and mice and the pilfering habit.

Retailers should take warning from this and see that nuts should not be kept too long. Sell them when they are fresh and no loss will accrue from shrinkage.

THE SCIENCE OF SERVICE.

He is a wise man who studies to do a good turn for non-customers as well as customers, for foes as well as friends. It may not always be appreciated, but it pays even if only one out of ten appreciates it. It is certainly a good habit to cultivate just as assuredly as the opposite is a bad habit.

The merit of a habit is determined by its intent—it is for good or for evil.

To cultivate disobliging habits whether toward customers or non-customers is unprofitable, for not only do they not gain new customers, but there is always the danger of their causing the loss of customers already secured.

Successful business men, particularly in this day and generation when competition is so keen, are obliging business men. Sugar, as the old saying has it, will always catch more flies than vinegar.

The nether kingdom may be paved with good intentions, but the road to success in business is certainly paved with the acts of obliging men.

Study to oblige. Shun the very appearance of discourtesy.

PROSPECTS IN CURRANTS.

Advices to The Canadian Grocer direct from Greece, tell that the new Uprooting Bill has been approved of by the Chamber and has become law. However, as cultivation has already begun it can only be applied practicably next season. It will, it is stated, have the desired effect — that is, of keeping up the prices.

The currant market gradually adopted a firm tendency in anticipation of the approval. The actual approval did not have an immediate further effect on prices, but this was due to the fact that it was Easter time and during the holidays little interest was shown from abroad.

The advice also stated that disposable stocks were in firm hands and good qualities were getting particularly scarce.

A DISGUSTING HABIT.

When will grocers learn that the goods they handle are for people to eat? The Canadian Grocer has been trying to impress upon the trade the importance of being neat, clean and tidy in handling goods, and yet a certain class, who neither read nor learn are going on in their old ways without knowing how their habits look to others.

Recently a grocer was observed buying a box of butter from a wholesale dealer. He tried nearly every roll by digging his trier into it, biting a bit off the end and shoving the rest into the roll again.

This is disgusting. Much has been said about it, but still some have never yet discovered the unfitness of it.

This is the class of grocers who know it all, who do not read or try to learn anything. But if they do not live up to reasonable sanitary methods, they should not be surprised if their customers find places where the goods they have to eat will be handled with some degree of cleanliness.

AN UNBUSINESSLIKE SYSTEM.

No record is kept by the Post Office Department of the franked mail matter which it yearly handles. It keeps a record of nearly everything else, but when it comes to dead-head stuff which passes through the mails no figures are accessible to the economist, business man, or anyone else, who may be of an enquiring mind.

Possibly the Post Office Department is actuated by the same motives as the man who does not keep a record of his wines and cigars, because he does not wish to be brought face to face with the facts of his extravagance.

If franking or the carrying of dead-head mail matter was confined to the members of Parliament it would not be so bad. The trouble is, the friends of the said members also enjoy the privilege of sending letters and other matter through the mails free of cost.

The maw of the franking system undoubtedly has a pretentious capacity, but how pretentious it is none but the gods know. To business men, however, it would be particularly interesting to learn how many tons it annually swallows and at what cost. All that the man on the street knows is that there are 221 members, plus an army of friends, innumerable as the sands of the sea shore.

The revelation of the facts would probably lead to the abolition or at least curtailment of the system—which would be business-like.

In large Chicago concerns a strict rule is in force. Any employee borrowing from another is in danger of dismissal if found out. That, perhaps, is too stringent a rule, but employers should do all in their power to lessen this practice which always injures both lender and borrower.

INCREASE IN OLIVE OIL RATES TO CANADIAN WEST.

Canadian importers of olive oil in bottles find that since a year ago the freight rates to the western provinces have advanced considerably.

In an effort to discover the cause The Canadian Grocer made enquiries from some of the importers and discovered some interesting conditions. Here are some:

Recently the Dominion Government was instrumental in changing the tariff on olive oil from 20 per cent. to 15 per cent., providing it entered by a Canadian port—a decrease of 5 per cent.

The steamship and railway rate on olive oil from Liverpool to Calgary in 1909 was $1.40 per cwt.

The rate which comes into effect on May 1st raises it to $2.22 in car load lots to Calgary and to $3.16 per cwt. in less than car load lots.

But as no shipper ever sends an entire car load of olive oil to the west, the rate becomes $3.16 per cwt. from Liverpool to Calgary.

Last year there was no distinction in what is known as "Oilman's Stores"—olive oil, vinegar, pickles, sauces, etc.—so far as the freight rates were concerned.

That situation enabled an importer to send a mixed carload of Oilman's Stores to Calgary at the rate of $1.40 per cwt.

There is a distinction this year, olive oil in bottles being classified differently from the others, but this only applies to western Canada—the rates remain the same from Liverpool to Toronto on account of the competition from United States sources via Boston and New York.

Here is how the new regulations of the Canadian Freight Association work out:

The reduction in duty made by the government reduces the price of a half pint bottle of olive oil about 7c a dozen. dozen.

But the increase in the western freight raises the price 30c a dozen to Calgary wholesalers—therefore the advance in price equals 23c per dozen.

The extra 23c must come from the retailer who, if he wants to make his former profit will evidently have to charge the consumer about 5c per bottle extra.

Other western centres will be affected in proportion to their distance from the east.

Importers were surprised and somewhat startled a few days ago when they discovered the rates above mentioned, as it would appear that the railway companies are more than absorbing the advantages secured by the new treaty.

Another complaint they have to make is that freight rates are not announced until a couple of weeks before the steamships sail from British ports. This in the face of the fact that western buyers want quotations in January demoralizes business they claim. The cause of this delay is ascribed to the fact that the British steamship companies do not understand Canadian conditions and they think there is no hurry necessary.

The new rates this year come into effect on May 1st, and they have only just been made public.

It is also claimed that shipping rates from England have increased much from four years ago. In 1906 the rate from Liverpool to Toronto was 27s. 9d, whereas now it is 34s. 8d. on the same goods.

THE FLY-PAPER DEMAND.

The season is not far distant when the fly nuisance will again be at hand both in the home and in the store.

Preparations should be begun at once to look after it. Now is the time to order stocks of fly-paper so that they will be in readiness when the demand begins. No customer should be allowed to inquire for fly-paper and be refused on the grounds that "our stock has not arrived yet—in fact it has not been ordered, etc." The probability is that she will go elsewhere.

Up-to-date grocers will have such a seasonable article in stock when the demand arrives.

PROSPECTS IN THE WEST.

Perhaps never before in the history of Western Canada has the general outlook for business been so favorable as at the present time. This statement is vouched for, not by the boomer who invariably talks optimistically, but by the soberest and sanest and best informed business men of the west, and it is capable of overwhelming proof.

The recovery from the depression of 1907-08 has been complete; the large returns from the 1909 crop were more than sufficient to transfer the balance to the right side of the profit and loss account. There has been a complete absence of the speculative fever, which was such a menace to business some four or five years ago, and consequently the business of the west is now on an absolutely secure and stable basis. In the meantime while the speculative fever has passed away the tide of immigration has not stopped.

On the contrary it has been greatly improved in quality, a larger proportion than ever of the newcomers being settlers from the United States and Great Britain — the most desirable class. Neither has railroad construction been retarded. All three railways have been pushing their construction work forward as fast as practically unlimited capital will allow, and the areas of new country thrown open for settlement are rapidly being taken up by the new settlers. All of this spells prosperity and progress.

So much for the general condition of the west. What of the retail grocer? He is getting a share of the new business created by this development, but his share should be large, and that it is not is largely his own fault. He will make money this year, but not so much as he would were all grocers alive to their own best interests.

OLIVE OIL AS A MEDICINE.

There is a probability that the prices on olive oil will be a little lower.

It will be remembered that two seasons ago the olive crop was poor and prices advanced, but last year it was much greater and the tendency now is toward lower quotations.

These will be only gradual if they occur, as it will take considerable time for the market to get back to where it was before the crop of the season before last failed.

The consumption of olive oil is rapidly increasing in Canada, where it is fast becoming an item of importance in the grocery trade. Instances are known where grocers have sold large quantities.

Doctors are recommending it for its medicinal qualities and it is being used for both inside and outside applications. It is claimed to be an excellent remedy for various ailments and a case is known where a New York doctor recommended olive oil for appendicitis.

It is bad policy to allow an idea to get abroad, always quite prevalent among some clerks, that the owner has little or no authority. See that they recognize clearly who is "boss" and better work will be the result. There is no need of being unreasonably dictatorial; a show of authority at the proper time will have the required effect.

ADDRESS WAS OMITTED.

The Grocer received a communication this week regarding a letter which appeared in last week's issue from a West Indian firm in connection with the acceptance of drafts. But as the writer gives no address and as he is not known by The Grocer his letter could not be published.

Every communication must bear the name and address of the writer not particularly for publication but simply as a matter of good faith.

Figuring Out the Secret Rebate

By Edwin Dowsley

"Look here, Dollenby, there's no other construction to it, this doesn't pay, and you know it!"

"I'm not saying it does."

The general manager jerked up with an undisguised expression of sourness.

"I'm not saying it does," repeated Dick, his eye meeting the other's meaningly.

"Now then, Dollenby," continued the manager, somewhat mollified in tone, "here's the situation." He picked up a paper with a condemning column of figures of Dick's sales and expenses, and continued:

"If you can't make the business pay the company, you cannot make it pay yourself. I have talked this over with you several times, as you are aware. I know you have your own ideas about selling, but I also have mine. Sometimes you ideas work, but sometimes they don't. Being successful in a field molded after your own ideas doesn't prove that your ideas will be successful everywhere. A salesman must be pliable enough to accommodate himself to conditions as he finds them."

Dick said nothing. He was an experienced salesman, and he was irritated. The manager continued:

"Now this is the point," picking up a long printed paper, "here's a specification of wants from the Chinaway Transit Company; and-I-want-that order!" The manager struck the paper with his hand to emphasize the want. "Do you understand, Dollenby? I want the order!" bending over, looking closely at Dick, partly menacing, partly coaxing. "That order will make things hum if we get it, and it's up to you to get it!"

Dick nodded, and agreed that it was.

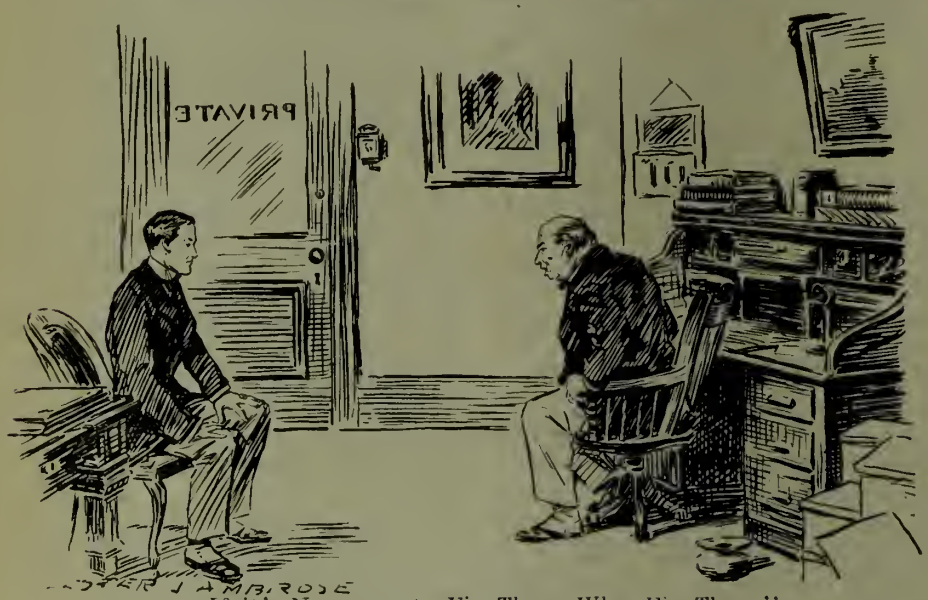
The manager leaned back, assuming again his dignified bearing.

"You know, Dollenby," he continued insinuatingly, "a bit of commission is neither here nor there with us. If it's necessary to fix them, why, fix them! That's all there is to it. I'm not stingy about a present or two, and I lay no limit to what you pay, except common sense. You know what I mean."

"Yes, I know whatyou mean!"

"Very good!" interrupted the manager. "You have just twenty minutes to catch your train, and this time—Dollenby—you understand, of course, it's business."

Dollenby suddenly found himself outside the manager's office, scarcely comprehending how, so politely was the ejection accomplished. A slow crimson tinge mounted his forehead, but discipline saved the general manager.



"If it's Necessary to Fix Them, Why Fix Them."

Walking swiftly to the sample-room, Dick stopped at the entrance, his big six feet three nearly filling the doorway. Dropping his bag, he delivered a violent kick that sent the thing wobbling sideways, endways, to the centre of the room, a couple of samplers stepping smartly to escape the bolt.

"Whew!" from both of them.

"Fill it up with Chinaway samples!"

"Going down to sell 'em?" timidly from one.

"No," from Dick, savagely. "To buy 'em."

The samplers worked rapidly. Dick Dollenby in a tantrum. The idea silenced them.

The bag nicely packed, brushed and cleaned, was finally tendered gingerly to Dick.

Immediately, the old winning smile broke out. Patting one on the shoulder, "Thanks, old man." Then his hand to the other, "Thanks, son."

Years ago Dick Dollenby had possessed himself of a fund of that good-humored optimism that believes it can annihilate anything that bars the way to progress. Now, things revolved so contrarily that Dick developed a suggestive temper. He indulged in a swear or two, and there was, to use his own words, "pure cussedness in things in general."

Dick had been summoned several times lately within the precincts of the inner sanctum, and there, as he put it, "made to walk the carpet" before the general manager of the house which had bid so high for his services, and he did not like it a bit.

Dollenby had always been rated high by his brother salesmen. His easy, non-combative, gently persuasive manner, bore with it some graceful mesmeric influence, finding an opening for him into the hearts of the most obstructive buyers. To-day, this winning optimism, this ingratiating personal influence seemed to have lost its charm.

Hurrying along to his train, Dollenby comprehended more fully the significance of that last remark of the general manager. It roused all the fight within him. What did he care for the general manager? He would sell goods for the pure love of selling them, and do it his own way, too.

Sneaking into any company's establishment with a bribe for some subordinate to recommend his goods was repugnant to Dollenby's ideas. He did not graduate from that school. To attempt success along those lines would be folly. Yet, he though, how much there was of this underhand business, and how was he to make returns unless he conducted his business along the lines by which buyers were the most easily accessible?

Then, he reflected, with some misgivings, his own way had not worked lately. The manager only gave him a hint. He even recalled he had permission—suggestion, to fix them. A savage delight suddenly evolved itself that he might easily fix a price, the recoil from which would compel even the general manager to wince; only to be as quickly rejected.

To sell the Chinaway Company, however, or rather, their bribe-seeking dependants. Dollenby was determined. He would sell them once, no matter what it cost, and deal with his own house afterwards.

As the train sped along, he wondered why such a company as the Chinaway should tolerate such a system of buying. The chiefs were blind—or deaf, if they didn't know it. It was common talk with every road salesman.

Then he began to consider how he should approach a man with a bribe for his departmental business—a delicate undertaking, practised to a nicety by those who knew how.

He was still wondering how they did it when his train pulled into the depot.

The Chinaway Transit Company's establishment was a busy place. The very hum of immense development and many interests were potential. Even prestige was to be gained from the mere selling to such a concern.

Dick steered his way along the line of offices to the door of the Purchasing Department, arriving there on the minute for the appointment made by wire for a representative from his house.

The moment he handed in his card he found himself being ushered down past a long column of clerks, each of whom eyed him curiously, until he passed into the sanctum of the chief buyer.

Dick mentally noted with reserved expression the buyer's attitude. It was characteristically assumed to convey the impression that he was a very busy man. He was actually seated on a high stool, with his feet on a high rung, his face almost lost in the depth of papers on the desk before him.

The busy man turned quickly, put his hands on his knees, and eyed Dollenby suspiciously. He was at once the possessor of a little bald head, his face ornamented with a sharp peaked nose, and little beady eyes that looked out over his spectacles in a spirit of annihilation.

Uses His Finest Arguments.

Dick, once again in the presence of an important subject for his skill, forgot any nervousness he might have acquired, and entered into the bout of securing a hearing with his wonted vigor and grace. He talked of many things in easy, fluent style, with genial interest touching lightly on the main idea, then back again to things in general and on by interesting by-ways until his listener was actually led unconsciously, though not unwillingly, to the topic of the goods he had to sell.

Dick had him thoroughly interested, and taking quick advantage, went on deftly to put forward the becoming points of his own particular brands. He pointed out consistently their excellent qualities, proved successfully their durability, satisfied the buyer on the price. With easy, unassumed courtesy his samples had been decorously introduced, and altogether, Dollenby got as good a hearing as any drummer could possibly desire.

Through it all, however, Dick instinctively experienced an air of something absolutely uncongenial, as those little eyes looked into his—sometimes quizzical, sometimes suspicious, other times altogether beyond comprehension.

Finally, when there came the natural lull after all had been said, the little man angled his head a point lower, and again looked over the top of his spectacles.

"Well"—slowly and deliberately—"I believe all you say. You certainly have got it down well; but the point now is—what is there in it for me?"

"Beg your pardon?" queried Dick, rudely shocked at the very bluntness of the suggestion.

"Oh, now Mr.—Mr.—(looking around for his card, and then finding it)—Dollenby, don't pretend you don't know what I mean. I say, what-is-there-in-it-for-me?" with a suggestive dig of the thumb at his right lung as he said for me. "I've made it easy for you; I didn't leave any thorny path for you to crawl up wondering how you were going to do it; I just gave you the cue right off the handle," and he stretched out his hands, slightly elevating the shoulders.

"He Was Actually Seated on a High Stool."

"As a matter of fact, I never thought of it," suggested Dick, mildly.

"Didn't you, indeed? Well, I won't hurry you," sneered the buyer.

"I have shown you honest guarantees for honest goods—fill your orders properly—make the price right—"

"Now, Dollenby," interrupted the buyer, "let us drop that to get over with it. You know well enough that buyers in concerns like this get a rake-off, and if they don't—so many more the fools. Neither you, nor the sellers, nor the powers that be of this or any other concern can prevent it. We're here alone and my word is as good as yours. If there isn't room in the price for a rake-off, chop it off the goods. I'm here to pass the stuff or condemn it, see?"

"I see," replied Dick.

"Well, here's a paper; sit down over there and figure it out; don't hurry yourself," suggestively.

Dick took the paper and sat down by the window. He looked out on the busy crowds passing up and down in the great factory yard. Here in his grasp was an order that meant thousands to his house, dollars and restored prestige for himself. He had come to that house with a brilliant record. He was drawing a large salary. His record had gone back on him. To lose now was to lose all. He realized it was disastrous for a salesman to leave a house under a cloud. This order would retrieve everything. Why should he not have it? It only meant handing a bribe to this miserable buyer—yes, and cutting the honest goods he had talked about to dishonest ones and cheating the people who were paying for them, to put something into this fellow's pocket. Still, that wasn't his affair, he had the authority of his house to do it—it need be only this once, then he could leave the house, his prestige retained. His whole future might be staked on this one order. He must have it. And yet—and yet—

Suddenly, some great resolve steadied him.

Dick took up the paper; looked at it—hesitated, then stooped and hurriedly wrote upon it.

He took it to the desk and laid it down before the man.

The buyer picked it up. "Not one cent." He turned on his stool and looked at Dick over his spectacles.

Dick nodded his head assertively twice, dug his thumb into his right lung and said, "From me."

The buyer calmly turned to his work with admirable indifference.

Dick knew well enough the fellow could get what he wanted from other houses, and he knew that the fellow knew it. Yet, he was angry. He could have thrown the peaky-faced little sinner out the window, but he realized that it would be impolitic even to say a word. So he quietly packed his grip, turned to the man and said, "Good-day."

The man returned "Good-day" without looking up.

A couple of hours later Dick's composure was restored, and his illimitable good humor had returned. He could scarcely restrain a laugh now at the whole sorry business, but as for himself he was quite resolved.

Strolling over to the hotel telegraph counter, he scratched off the following to his firm. "Send another man, can get order, please accept my resignation."

As he finished writing a boy came shouting along the corridor. "Mr. Pollenby! Mr. Dollenby!"

"All right, here you are," and Dick held out his hand for the note. It read: "The president of the Chinaway Transit Company wishes to see Mr. Dollenby immediately at his office."

"Hum," said Dick to himself, "wishes to see me—immediately, does he?

Well, he can see me after I send this message—if I'm ready then."

On second thought he put the telegram in his pocket, and walked away to the office of the president.

When Dick was ushered into the president's office, after presenting his card, he encountered a small, wizzened man with a bald head, a small, peaked nose, and beady eyes that looked at him over the top of his spectacles.

"Well, so you're back again, are you?"

"Looks a bit like it, doesn't it?" returned Dick, with his most engaging smile.

"What can I do for you now?"

"Fact is, I don't know that you can do anything. I got a little note a minute ago requesting me to come to see the president, and here I am."

"So you did, Dollenby. Sit down. I'm the president."

Dick closed his eyes tight for an instant, then opened them comically to look at the little man

"It's all right, Dollenby. You're awake. Sit down. I sent for you." Dick began to get a glimmering of the play.

"Now Dollenby, it's one on you, or it's one on me. I don't much care which; but I've found out a thing or two these last few days that has opened my eyes. It may not have been the least questionable way to find it out, but it was about the only way, and I did it. I became acquainted with a number of firms ready to figure it out differently from the way you did it, and I have my suspicions that your firm would have been with them if they hadn't sent you. Well, never mind that. This concern wants a buyer, Dollenby, and I have an idea, mark me, that a man who won't give a bribe, won't take one. Do you follow me?"

Dick hinted that he did.

"Are you open for an engagement?"

Dick slowly pulled the telegram he had written from his pocket, and the president read it.

"All right—that's fair." Then turning he wrote hurriedly on a piece of paper, and handed it to Dick, continuing, "That's what there is in it for you—from me," with a twinkle.

Dick looked at the paper. The amount nearly took his breath away.

"Is it a bargain?"

"Yes, sir."

Original Idea in a Maple Sugar and Syrup Window

Maple Tree, Wild-Cats, Owl and Hawk go to Make a Realistic Forest Scene—From the Raw State to the Manufactured Article—Attracts a Lot of Attention in the Royal City.

Guelph, Ont., April 21.—As a good example of an original window trim, a recent display in the window of J. A. McCrea & Son might be pointed to.

The background was made of large branches of trees. At the base were 2 large logs about a foot thick, lying in dead leaves 6 inches deep. In the centre a camp fire was represented with a kettle suspended into it. There was also a maple tree tapped with a pail attached.

To make the forest scene more realistic two large stuffed wild cats, a beautiful feathered partridge and a large black hawk were shown.

At the opposite end of the window was a small oak barrel of maple syrup and a generous display of the various priced jars of absolutely pure goods as well as a quantity of maple sugar in blocks.

The window was prettily illuminated at night and attracted large crowds on account of the striking originality about it.

The idea was conceived by J. A. McCrea and worked out by Albert Voss and the staff in general.

Such a window as this is bound to bring good results. It attracts attention because it is something out of the ordinary. When a window attracts the public then it should be such as to cause the public to buy.

If it is appetizing and if some neat show cards and price tickets are used there is every reason why it should prove profitable. A good window dresser is a useful person around a store.

Practical Methods Used in Retail Grocery Stores

Retailers Discuss Their Profits on Certain Goods — Brandon Merchants Enthusiastic Over Half Holiday During the Summer — Suggestions for a White Confectionery Window—Vancouver Grocers Aiding Their Exhibition.

Profits of the Retailer.

St. John, N.B., April 21.—A retail grocer of this city in commenting on the article from a Hamilton grocer in a recent issue of The Grocer on "The Retailer's profits," thinks that the trade has come to such a state that it is difficult for the retailer to get along. Profits have been cut down on many articles to such an extent that those articles do not pay their share of the expenses of running the store. Such articles as these this retailer places out of sight and displays prominently only those which pay a fair percentage of profit.

In reference to conferences with wholesalers and manufacturers he believes that in view of the existing conditions they would do a considerable amount of good. The retailer would then have an opportunity to point out wherein he is being unfairly treated.

The same grocer refers to a biscuit manufacturer, who, he claims sells to the consumer a pound or a box of biscuits almost as cheaply as to the retailer and at the same time wonders why the retailer does not handle more of his goods. This is one example of many he says, and is one of the reasons why the retail trade should be protected in order to preserve its existence.

They Believe in a Rest.

Brandon, Man., April 21.—About five years ago, through the instrumentality of Smith & Burton, wholesale and retail grocers, a half holiday was instituted on Thursday afternoons in all the city grocery stores during July and August. The first year or two the idea was looked upon as more or less radical but it became more and more popular. The third year the retailers of all other branches of the trade joined in and the Thursday afternoon half holiday is now a grand success, so much so that this year the merchants are to carry out the idea for three months, making it June, July and August, the citizens recognizing the action of the merchants' plan to have all civic holiday features take place on Thursday.

The same is true of the churches and other bodies and this year, as well as the years to come, Thursday afternoon is sure to be a great day in Brandon.

White Confectionery Window.

Winnipeg, April 21.—If the dressing of the confectionery window in the grocery store has not been tried according to the plan given here it might be profitable to attempt it. It is a suggestion of a grocer for a white confectionery window.

"Drape the whole window in white with crepe paper, cheesecloth, or something similar. Do not try to get a good white effect with one thickness, unless the woodwork underneath is very white, for in using any of the above drapings the color underneath will show through. Then display white dishes of white candy like cream peppermints, etc., and in the centre place a large dish of something red to make the desired contrast. Such a window will command attention and if a few price tickets are used it should sell the goods."

Grocers Support Exhibition.

Vancouver, B.C., April 21.—The question of supporting the Vancouver Exhibition was one of the points discussed at the last meeting of the R.G.A. It was unanimously resolved: "That the Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association offer a solid silver cup, value $100, for the best display of goods manufactured in British Columbia sold by grocers."

It was further decided that the association as a body and the members individually, do everything in their power to make Vancouver's first exhibition a great success, and a hope was expressed that all similar associations and semi-public bodies should do likewise.

The president of the association, W. Clark, announced his intention of giving a prize, value $25, for the best display of honey at the exhibition.

Building a New Store.

Bridgeburg, Ont., April 21.—W. R. Krafft is erecting a new store which he expects to occupy by June 15th.

The building is to be of brick veneer, two-storey, thirty-two feet wide by sixty feet in depth. Mr. Krafft will occupy the entire ground floor and cellar with his grocery store. The second storey will be composed of two residential flats.

Prize Winning Outfits.

Guelph, Ont., April 21.—At the horse show held here last Thursday three grocers entered their delivery outfits in the single delivery outfit competition and two of them, C. T. Hicks and J. A. McCrea & Sons, were successful in capturing prizes.

A meeting of the executive of the clerks' and Salesmen Association was held Thursday evening, April 14th. The usual half-holiday petition has been signed by a large number of the merchants, in all lines of business, and everything is favorable for the Thursday half holiday during the months of July and August. One change has been made, however, the hour for closing being 12.30 instead of 1 o'clock.

Window Card Sells Puddings.

Toronto, April 21.—A neat show card is used with good results by a local grocer selling puddings put up by a manufacturer. The card reads: "Meal time is always 'on time' if you keep a supply of ——— half minute puddings within reach. More quality and flavor than you've been accustomed to getting at popular prices."

The above is printed on the card in 3 colors and the whole is made more attractive by the figure of a youth ringing a bell.

Fruits Moving Slowly.

Lindsay, Ont., April 21.—At the present season of the year Lindsay grocers are doing their best to push the sale of fruit of various kinds, but so far they have not experienced the demand for prunes, oranges, lemons, maple syrup, etc., that they did this time last year for the reason that the people seem to be stocked with fruit. The cellars of housewives were stocked last season with oranges especially, because they were "dirt" cheap. There was even a famine in preserve jars last year, because of the great demand for oranges for marmalade, but the case is different this year.

But even at that there has been a fairly brisk demand for oranges this year for eating purposes. One grocer conceived the idea of giving a spoon away with each dozen of oranges bought at his store and advertised the fact that the wrappers would not have to be saved and buyers would not have to spend money in postage stamps. He put on a big sale on Saturday, and he says it paid well.

The housecleaning season brings with it the demand for all kinds of brushes, brooms, etc., and a few windows dressed with these articles were noticed last week.

Ships Syrup to the West.

Smith's Falls, Ont., April 21.—One grocer here who makes good money by taking advantage of the maple syrup season is H. Layng. Every spring he purchases large quantities of syrup from the farmers in the neighborhood and sends it by the barrel to the Canadian North-West where he has established a ready market. By making drafts on the buyers there he receives cash for the goods and has therefore a profitable side line with certain profits.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—
Molasses—Choice 3c lower.
Ginger—Higher in primary market.
Tarragona Almonds—½c higher.
Evaporated Apples—½c lower.

Montreal, April 21, 1910.

The features of the week are the drop of 3c in choice grades of molasses and the upturn of ½c in Tarragona almonds. The former is due principally to a large influx of supplies, which have, to a large extent flooded the market.

A severe frost in France is reported to have damaged the almond crop to a considerable extent, this being reflected in the ½c raise here. If true, as the report seems to be, a still further rise is looked for.

Spice men report fine business now, in fact seem to be by far the busiest men in the grocery trade, and prices continue firm.

Recent rains have not improved roads here, but they were not heavy enough to do any great harm. It is hoped no further rainfall will take place for a few days, as it is difficult for the country people to get in. Trade generally is dull and discouraging reports are given by most of the grocers. A recent talk with Sherbrooke, Que., grocers showed that trade was on the upgrade there, in spite of the fact that maple products are scarce this year. The early season is given credit for it to a great extent.

Sugar.—Last week's weakness in beet sugar has been fully counteracted. The Cuban drought still continues, though rains are reported from one or two sections. Local trade is dull, waiting for the market to shape one way or the other.

Dried Fruits.—Some local dealers are lowering prices to stimulate trade in dried fruits, particularly currants, the sale of which is slack. In this regard it is important to bear in mind the fact that next year's crop will be about 25 p.c. smaller, owing to the pulling up of many vines in Greece. This should eventually strengthen prices. Figs are slightly easier and occasional reductions are reported.

Beans and Peas.—Beans are quiet. Some small orders have been placed, but it is getting warm too fast seemingly for the good of this market. Peas are still selling fairly well. Prices of both are unchanged.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—There is a strong undertone to the fruits and vegetables. They are a good buy at present prices, as stocks in some lines are already running low and it will be some time before this year's crop finds its way to the market.

Meat sales have been good in most lines, particularly tongue. Fish are quiet except, as usual, lobsters.

ONTARIO MARKETS

POINTERS—

Canned Fruits—Advance coming.

Molasses—Weaker market.

Spices—Good demand.

Almonds—Higher.

Toronto, April 21, 1910.

The wholesale trade on the whole is satisfactory. Hustling, as a rule, is the order of the day. Payments as well as orders are up to the mark.

Retailers should remember that they are invited by the wholesale dealers for the first time in the history of Canada to meet with them at their annual convention, next Wednesday, April 27th, to discuss matters of interest, and retailers should make it a point to attend this first meeting.

Sugar—The sugar market is steady, but with no expectation of a decline. A singular feature of the trade is the fact that sugar dropped 5 points in Winnipeg this week. Some explain the reason of this to be due to freight conditions and others to western coompetition.

MANITOBA MARKETS

Winnipeg, April 21, 1910.

During the past few weeks the weather has been all that the trade could desire. The trade in the cities and towns had become equivalent to that of July and August, perhaps better, for it is in these months that many vacate their homes and frequent the summer resorts. One drawback to the town and rural store trade, however, was, that the farmers were all busy with the seeding and were leaving the grocers to themselves. The sudden change in the weather, however, has changed all this and wild winter gripped the province again for a few days. It was not particularly unseasonable to have cold weather at this time in April, but the extended fine period preceding it tended to make it appear untimely.

Local city trade was quieted somewhat while in the agricultural communities the merchants were increasing the volume of their business. A sudden flurry of snow seriously ties up traffic and transportation was impeded for a few days.

Wholesalers report money moving slowly this week, due no doubt to the credit given by retailers to the farmers, who have no intention of settling payments until the next crop is harvested. Merchants are rather loose in this regard and the condition reacts upon retailer, wholesaler, manufacturer and producer alike. If the cash could not be had one would be inclined to treat the situation with more content; but when through laxity of a better system on the

The Real Reason

Get right down to the real reason for every great success and it is quality in one form or another. Nowhere is this more often demonstrated than in the grocery store. Red Rose Tea is a fine example. It came into the Ontario market about ten years ago when the field was overcrowded with different brands. To-day it is a leader with only enough opposition to make good healthy competition. The basis of this success has been the quality of the tea and the quality of the service both to merchants and consumers. The quality of Red Rose Tea does not vary. You are always sure it is the same "Good Tea."

The grocers who are using Red Rose in their homes believe most strongly in its quality; their confidence makes it easy to increase their sales. They know it pays to recommend

Canned Goods—Many lines are getting scarce just now, and the opening of navigation will bring a much larger stock on the market. Gallon apples are scarce and at a premium. Peaches have a firm market.

Evaporated Apples—There is nothing new to report in this dull market. Supplies are getting scarce and no change is noted on the 7½ cent quotation. The quality is such as to discourage a good output.

BRITISH COLUMBIA MARKETS.

Vancouver, B. C., April 21, 1910.

Best bacon is up another notch, the quotation now being 30c a pound. If taken in 100-lb. lots, a reduction of half a cent is made.

Local eggs are now quoted at the city market at 31c, as low a figure as they have been for a long time. Californias are at 30c, while eastern eggs are out of the market practically, because of poor quality. One grocer stated that when he went over what he had of easterns he found over 50 per cent. of them bad. These were storage, and it is hard to say how long they had been kept.

Fresh tomatoes are offered from California and Florida. The price is $6 a crate, but it varies according to the supply. A couple of days ago it was about $5.50, but when only one wholesaler had them, another 50c was charged.

There is talk of another jump in the price of local sugar. The figure now is $5.80, having been advanced a few weeks ago from $5.60, and the increase spoken of is another 20c. No definite announcement has been made. There is no change so far in the price of the imported sugars.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, April 21, 1910.

The wholesale grocery markets are firm this week, and prices in some lines show substantial advances. Provisions have a tendency to advance still higher. Onions are in good demand, and the sales of Bermudas are heavy. They are quoted at $1.75 per box. Some of the Halifax dealers that had large stocks of onions on this season lost heavily as the onion kept poorly, rotting before they could be disposed of. Pot barley declined fifty cents per barrel.

Local merchants report the demand for dry fish limited, although they have large stocks on hand. The steamer Sobo that sailed this week for the West Indies took a large cargo of dry and pickled fish. The demand for pickled herring is limited. Lobster are in better supply this week, and the price is a little easier. Large lobsters are selling at twenty cents each, and the small at 12 cents each. The exports from coastal points to the U. S. market

Next Winter's Storage Eggs Likely to be High

Packers Out Hot-foot After Them Now and are Paying Good Prices—Hogs and Hog Products Still Ruling High—A Chance That Butter May Become a Little Easier — Maple Syrup in Quebec Practically all out of First Hands.

The scarcity of hogs is not confined to Canada alone; there is even a greater scarity in the United States. The "Cincinnati Price Current" states that the total number of hogs killed since March 1st this year is 1,750,000, as against 2,605,000 during the same time last year. The receipts of hogs are extra light just now, but this is expected during the busy seeding time.

Butter is exceptionally scarce and high. While it is a good thing to meet the new season's make with no old stock on hand, the dealers no doubt, not having forgotten last year's pinch, have this year been a little too anxious to sell out in good time. Big money might have been made this year at the time it was lost last year.

The cold storage places are rapidly being filled up with eggs, and the present high price means high price eggs for next winter.

Cheese is quiet, with little moving. The first of the new make is beginning to reach the market.

MONTREAL.

Provisions — If anything hogs, live, seem to be slightly esier. It has made no difference in quotations, but may in a short time make itself felt more. Other lines are somewhat quiet with no changes in quotations. An improvement is beginning to be felt, however.

Butter—Butter is firm and scarce and is still quoted at last week's advance. Little is coming in, practically only half last year's corresponding receipts. The tariff situation is undoubtedly one of the main factors in this, so many of the creameries are exporting cream to the States.

Receipts for the week are 1,169 packages, as against 2,277 packages same week last year. For the season they are 409,324 packages, as against 427,982 packages same season 1909.

Receipts for the week are 1,440 boxes, as against 860 boxes same week last year. For the season they are 1,973,928 boxes, as against 1,960,730 boxes same season 1909.

Eggs—Eggs are coming in freely now, but in spite of this prices are too high for packing. Dealers ascribe it entirely to the increased consumption of eggs. Almost 100 per cent. increase is shown in the week's receipts over the same week last year—13,011 cases, as against 7,465 cases—for the season they are 256,299 cases, as against 247,208 cases same season last year.

Butter.—The supply of butter is not sufficient to meet the demand and prices in consequence are sky-high. The old butter seems to be all cleared out and therefore there is nothing to depend on but the new make. As the price of butter is much higher than cheese made from the same amount of milk, it is quite likely that some cheese factories will start operations as early as usual, and farmers in order to take advantage of the high price, will make more butter. This will soon bring up the quantity and put the price of butter on a level with cheese. It is therefore safe to surmise that butter will become easier within a few weeks.

Cheese.—A small quantity of new cheese has made its appearance, but the quality is inferior, and will not bring more than about 10c a lb. With butter at 30c to 33c, and hogs, live weight, 9½c a lb., into which industry the skim milk can be turned, it is not likely that many cheese factories will follow this example.

Eggs.—Egg packers are all anxious to secure as many early spring eggs as possible, which causes a keen competition among buyers. If cold storage eggs are expected to come out good in the following winter they must first of all be good and fresh when they go in. If the farmers in some way could be trained to bring their eggs out out once or twice a week as soon as the weather gets warm, the two million dollars worth of eggs now wasted could be saved.

Incubator, Boiled and China Nest Eggs Circulated

These Have Actually Been Sent to Produce Dealers in Cities by Country Merchants—Yearly Loss Through Bad Eggs Mixed With the Good—How Merchants Can Aid in Bringing About Better Conditions.

Now since the real cause of the high cost of living has been located, and found to be principally due to the small production and not with the much abused middle man, it is only fair for the consumer to ask whether anything can be done to provide the people with cheaper food products.

The writer believes in good wages and fair prices for farm products, but when through carelessness on the part of the farmers, the consuming public have to pay more for their goods then they have reason to complain.

It comes from a reliable authority that 17 p.c. of the entire egg product is spoiled in Canada and made valueless through careless handling. This would amount to about $1,850,000 per year. Now let us be fair, if the merchants by some ingenious arrangement would take only a fraction of this from the people they would be regarded as criminals, but when the farmer robs the people of this vast amount it is allowed to pass without censure, and the consumer bears it all without even suggesting that such a state of affairs should be remedied.

Again if a manufacturer makes a certain kind of jam and uses a harmless adulterant he is liable to a heavy fine, if it is not labeled properly, but a farmer may sell rotten eggs without any risk whatever.

Eggs From Incubators.

Do not think for a moment that this happens by mere accident. It is of common occurrence that eggs reach city dealers which have been in incubators apparently when they were found to be sterile, after having been under hatching temperature for several days they were taken out and sent to the city. Even some boiled eggs, and artificial nest eggs are often found, which shows the inexcusable carelessness of the farmers. In one produce house in Canada last week was a basket almost filled with "china" nest eggs.

These eggs are unfit for food ; in some cases they are thrown away, but often find their way into pastry in cheap bakeries. In all communities by far the majority of the people are honest, and for their protection something should be done immediately to stop this shameful "rotten egg traffic."

While the cases cited may be extreme, the greatest loss, however, occurs through mere carelessness, or absolute ignorance of what is fair and right. Such a waste in eggs alone is too serious to be treated lightly, and steps should be taken immediately to check this careless practice.

Merchants who receive the eggs from farmers might well get their local papers to call the attention of the farmers to this waste and the importance of paying more attention to the proper handling of their eggs.

To Redress the Evil.

They should be urged to collect the eggs from the nests every day, keep them in a cool dry place and take them to market at least once a week. Merchants should also make a rule to candle all the eggs when they take them in, and this they should do to protect the honest customers. Any person who brings good eggs will be pleased to have them candled, and even the others would not dare to object. If this is regularly done, and customers know it, the rotten egg business will disappear and the country will save nearly two million dollars a year.

The entire blame is, however, not all with the farmers. There are some out-of-date merchants yet in business, who allow their eggs to stand round the store for weeks, in dirty boxes, and in unsanitary surroundings, before they ship them to the cities. Eggs, like butter, become tainted from odors, and must be kept away from coal oil, fish and other articles of that kind. Let every merchant do his part. He should take immediate steps to save this waste by encouraging right methods, and by showing the farmers that he takes pleasure in assisting them in preparing their products to the best advantage for the markets.

It would no doubt be a good idea if local newspapers would take up this matter and point out the importance of proper attention on the part of the farmers in order to effect the much desired improvement.

GINGER FOR BREAKFAST.

"Always eat ginger in the morning." That, according to a medical authority, is the newly discovered cure for the got-out-of-bed-on-the-wrong-side feeling.

This experienced doctor says that if people would only eat ginger at breakfast their health would improve in many respects and they would start the day much readier for work than they do now.

"Ginger," he said, "contains an essential oil which acts as a fine nerve tonic. It promotes digestion, is an excellent stomach tonic, and is extremely good for the liver. The liver is the organ which makes people so morose in the morning. Until it has been well stirred up by the day's work it is in a lethargic condition, and frequently the brain is in the same state, for its blood supply is not right.

"Now if people who experience these symptoms would only take plenty of ginger at breakfast their livers would act properly and their digestion would improve to an extent they cannot realize until they try the cure. They would go to business in a normal state of temper.

"I am perfectly certain that if more ginger were eaten the world would be a very much better place to live in."

CANADA'S WHEAT PROSPECTS.

James J. Hill, perhaps the best authority on farming and railroading on this continent, has stated that within a few years the United States will be compelled to import wheat and flour. He quotes statistics to show that the ratio of the population is increasing much faster than the production of foodstuffs, and draws the conclusion that in a few years the United States will be importing. He also states that Canada will be the great producing country of the 20th century, and that much of the grain and flour which the United States will import will be secured in the Canadian West. In this connection, it is interesting to notice that from 100,000 to 200,000 United States farmers are crossing into the Canadian West every year, and securing land, which will yet grow wheat that is to supply their old neighbors to the south.

Flour Immovable in Spite of a Wheat Decline

Considerable Weakness in Latter Market in Chicago and Winnipeg—The Prospects in Flour—Manufacturers of Wheat Products Make no Changes.

The stubborn condition of the wheat market reported last week has since yielded in favor of the buyer, and wheat has dropped about 7 to 8c a bushel in the large markets.

It is, however, strange that the fluctuations both in Chicago and Winnipeg do not materially affect the price of Ontario wheat. Ontario wheat is principally used in the manufacture of rolled wheat, and the millers have almost to get down on their knees and beg for it from the farmers.

While it was the opinion of grain and flour men that wheat was too high to stay, the drop came a little sooner than was expected. This is owing to the early opening of navigation, and also to the favorable prospects of the new crop of winter wheat, as well as the outlook of the spring crops in general.

Russia is still surprising the world and its enormous crop has much to do with the weakening of the markets all over.

MONTREAL.

Flour—Latest quotations show that the wheat market is weaker. This may have an additional weakening effect on local conditions. Local prices are steady just at present.

Oatmeal—There is little of note save a general weakness this week. Prices are steady but trade is light. In mill feed, bran is down $1 per ton, due to competition.

TORONTO.

Flour—While the large wheat markets are considerably lower, the local market has not responded and prices remain unchanged. Millers have claimed all along that they were working on too small margins and that flour is not any too high in comparison with the wheat. Competition, however, will regulate that matter, and unless wheat will recover from its slump, flour will likely drop.

Cereals—These lines are firm and are not in the least affected by the decline in wheat in the large markets. Manufacturers of wheat products must have all Ontario wheat which is held by the farmers and the latter determine the price at which they will sell.

NO UNION GROCERS' PICNIC.

Summer Half Holiday for London Grocers—Election of Officers at Annual Meeting.

London, Ont., April 21.—At their annual banquet the Retail Grocers' Association proposed the idea of a union picnic for the grocers of London, Hamilton, Brantford and Toronto. Since then their officers have done their best to bring it about, but were unsuccessful. For this reason it was decided at their annual meeting last week to hold the annual excursion of the London association to Detroit, via the G. T. R., on June 15.

It was decided that, as in the past, the grocers will close on Wednesday afternoons during June, July and August, except when a public holiday comes in the week.

The officers elected for the coming year were as follows: President, C. W. Summers; first vice-president, James Haskett; second vice-president, T. H. Janes; secretary, Cyril Hayes (re-elected); treasurer, Thomas Shaw; executive, J. A. McFarlane, F. Travers, R. A. Ross, F. W. Paul, R. J. Donagby, M. A. Young and Ed. Bodkin.

President Summers who succeeds Ex-President E. J. Ryan, was selected to attend the annual convention of the Ontario Wholesale Grocers' Exchange, to be held in Toronto during the week beginning with April 25th.

On motion of Ex-President Ryan it was decided to set aside a sum of money to purchase suitable presents for the retiring presidents and treasurers at the end of their terms. R. J. Donaghy, who seconded the motion, together with other members considered that something along this line should be done for E. J. Ryan and ex-treasurer H. Ranahan, but they positively refused to accept anything this year.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Jos. Boyd, a knight of the grip, who has donated caps and socks to the grocers base-ball club. F. W. Paul, F. H. Janes, M. A. Young and Thos. Vincent will have charge of the team this year.
